Mrs. Waters Asserts That Her Coupons for $30 Were Not Honored.

FOUR WITNESSES HEARD

Whitman Puts Train In Charge of Investigation — Looker Asks Suspension of Judgment.

The officers of the Monaton Realty Investing Corporation, on the twelfth floor of the Candler Building, at 220 West Forty-second Street, were visited yesterday by many holders of the company's stocks, bonds, and certificates who had read in the morning newspapers that the State Insurance Department had filed a complaint with the District Attorney "to protect the citizens of this and other States," as Supt. Emmet expressed it in his formal statement. Supt. Emmet further said that it was expected that the District Attorney would proceed against the corporation and its officers.

Pierre M. Looker, the President of the corporation, was in his office all day and received the visitors. Many of them, while waiting in an ante-room for an interview, were ill at ease, but after their talks with the President, those of them who would say anything at all, expressed confidence in the corporation. They admitted, however, that they had a selfish interest in supporting the concern.

Mr. Looker, the company's President, would answer no definite questions yesterday concerning the condition of his company, its operations in the real estate field, or its methods of doing business. He, however, made public a typewritten statement to a reporter of THE NEW YORK TIMES who called upon him. Here it is in part:

> The company is prepared to submit its affairs and the conduct of its officers to the fullest investigation by the public authorities, and we trust that all who are interested in teh company will suspend judgment until the completion of any investigation.
> The question as to whether or not we were doing a banking business is pending in a civil action before the Appellate Court, and since the question was raised as to the propriety, under the Banking act, of its issuing certificates under the form in question, the company has suspended the issuance of such certificates until there has been a final adjudication. The company never has done and never attempted to do an insurance business.

The complaint filed with the District Attorney by the State Insurance Department has been placed in the hands of Assistant District Attorney Arthur C. Train. Deputy Assistant District Attorney Leslie S. Lockhart, who is assisting Mr. Train, examined four witnesses yesterday.

One witness was Mrs. Margaret E. Waters of the Hotel Bristol. She, it was reported, said that she bought $1,000 worth of "gold certificate coupon-bearing bonds," which she was told by the agent who sold them were secured by a mortgage on Broadway real estate. She learned later, she said, that the Monaton Corporation held no such mortgage. She clipped coupons valued at $30 from these bonds and took them to the Harriman National Bank, where, according to her story, payment was refused on the ground that the Monaton Corporation had not sufficient balance in the bank to meet the obligation. Mrs. Waters also bought $500 worth of preferred stock in the company, according to her story.

Rudolph Dillman, en employe in the Fire Marshal's office, another witness, said that he had bought $1,500 worth of "accumulative profit-sharing certificates," payable in ten years, and that these had been represented to him by the selling agent as being equivalent to life insurance. Several persons said yesterday that the certificates issued by the company closely resembled life insurance policies both in general appearance and subject matter.

It was learned yesterday that Eckford De Kay, at one time Military Secretary to Gov. Dix, now employed in the State Insurance Department, has been carrying on an investigation of the Monaton Corporation for some time, and has held several conferences with Gov. Glynn concerning the company's activities.

Louis Goldstein, Assistant District Attorney of Kings County, a member of the sub-committee on penal laws of the commission appointed by Supt. Van Duyl to recommending changes in the banking laws, said yesterday that numerous complaints had come to his committee from persons who said they had invested money in real estate through the corporation and in the securities of the corporation itself.

Its statement filed with the State Controller last January represents the corporation as possessing net assets of about $500,000, most of which is in real estate. This real estate, however, according to the State Insurance Department, has been found in some instances to be mortgaged to its full value. Supt. Emmet in his formal statement said that "three pieces of property in Manhattan which were investigated were found not to be owned by the corporation at all."

The corporation, according to its statement, has sold $340,400 worth of common and preferred stock. Including what it has received from "participating certificates' 'and as installment payments on purchases of real estate, its total receipts from investors are more than $1,000,000. Dividends have been paid by the corporation on the stock it has issued.

The officers of the corporation are President, Pierre M. Looker; Vice President, Curtis A. Doolittle; Secretary, Walter E. Pratt.

IN NEW JERSEY.

NEWARK.—There is no statute in New Jersey covering the thefts of telephone calls, according to a ruling by Judge Hahn in the First Criminal Court, in the case of Henry Poole, a lawyer of 770 Broad Street, who asked the court on Saturday to take a complaint against a man who used his telephone to make calls to Chicago without his permission. The telephone company is now seeking payment of $12 from Mr. Poole.

NEWARK.—Bishop Edwin S. Lines of the Episcopal Diocese of Newark celebrated the tenth anniversary of his consecration with a special service at Grace Church yesterday morning.

MONTCLAIR.—Although she admits having taken a $1,000 diamond ring from the home of her employer, Rachel Anderson, a thirteen-year-old girl, will not tell the Montclair police what she has done with it. The girl, who had been employed by Mrs. Leonard R. Gracey of 63 Brookfield Road, as a nurse for several months, is in the House of Detention at Newark.

TRENTON.—Having purchased an entire new outfit for his marriage to Miss Margaret Hildebrecht, Charles Housner, 21 years old, of North Montgomery Street, was robbed of it, together with some jewelry, by a boarder at his mother's home. The thief left him only a suit of working clothes.

TRENTON.—There will be no further prosecution of the quo warranto proceedings to oust commission government in Jersey City, as far as Attorney General Wilson is concerned. This announcement was made at the opening of the November term of the Court of Errors and Appeals.

ORANGE.—In an effort to break the high price of eggs, fifty crates of high-grade cold storage eggs were offered for sale to-day in a Main Street store, rented for the purpose by the Housewives' League of the Oranges. The eggs went like hot cakes at 33 cents a dozen, against 38 to 50 cents as charged by local retailers.

OWENS TESTIFIES AGAINST CARROLL

Co-defendant Aids Prosecution at Trial of State Senator for Primary Fraud.

SAW MAN VOTE EIGHT TIMES

Carroll Took Control of Balloting at Polling Place, Owens Says—Cash for Gangsters' Help.

Thomaa J. Owens, on trial with State Senator Daniel J. Carroll, Democratic leader of the Fourteenth Assembly District, Brooklyn; his chief lieutenant, Luke O'Reilly, a lawyer, and two others on charges of conspiracy and intimidation, took the stand for the prosecution yesterday before Justice Kelby, in the Supreme Court, that borough. The charges grew out of the primary election in March, 1912.

Owens, under the direct examination of Assistant District Attorney William P. Allen, gave testimony against Carroll and O'Reilly. He asserted that Carroll and his friends took control of the voting at the polling place at 95 North Sixth Street. For looking after the interests of the Carroll faction the witness declared that twenty gangsters from Manhattan, under the leadership of "Jack" Sirocco, were paid for their services by O'Reilly with money received from Lawrence J. Carroll, the father of the Senator.

The witness testified that he saw one man, a Carroll supporter, vote eight times. Under the cross-examination of Robert H. Elder, attorney for Carroll, Owens, who was an Election Inspector at the polls, admitted that he knew he was committing a crime when he failed to prevent the "repeating."

According to Owens, he neard one of Carroll's lieutenants telephone to a saloon on the day of the primaries and ask that word be sent to a certain clubhouse to "round up the boys."

"Who were the 'boys'?" asked Assistant District Attorney Allen.

"I don't know them all," replied the witness, "but there was one called 'the Bull,' and another was Madden, the prizefighter. There were about twenty of them. I also heard Dan say that he had seen 'Eddie' Hughes and that everything was all right."

"Eddie" Hughes, the witness explained, was Police Inspector Hughes.

The witness sawore that O'Reilly stood on a rail in the polling place and looked over the booth to see how the men marked their ballots. If a voter did not mark his ballot "right," Owens declared, O'Reilly would give a signal with his cane, and the Carroll cohorts would hustle the voter out of the place.

After the election, Owens said, he went to Carroll's house with the returns. Several district captains were there with Carroll. In another room, Owens alleged, were Jack Sirocco and nineteen gangsters. The witness said he heard O'Reilly shout to Lawrence Carroll, the father of the defendant:

"Hey, there, give me some money. I want to pay these men."

Whereupon Lawrence Carroll took out a roll of bills and handed some money to O'Reilly, according to Owens. The witness said he saw O'Reilly give some money to Sirocco, and the latter, with a crowd of "strong-arm" men, then left Carroll's house. Owens said that all he received for his services to Carroll was a $3 pair of shoes and four one-dollar bills.

Owens has asked the District Attorney for protection, as he has been in fear of gangsters because he turned State's evidence in this case. The trial will be continued to-day.

THE MUSICAL COMEDY PAR EXCELLENCE

THE LITTLE CAFE

Book and Lyrics by C. M. S. MacLellan. Music by Ivan Caryll.

THE SNAPPY LYRIC WITH A PUNCH—

Was supposed to have died with W. S. Gilbert, the world-famous satirist of the stage. In his pace-making musical comedy librettos of the past three seasons, C. M. S. MacLellan has startled the most critical with his quaint, whimsical, rhythmic twists to which his equally talented musical collaborator, Ivan Caryll, has set chic, effervescent tunes that compel one to sing, hum or whistle them. Take, for instance, this first verse of "What Makes the Modern Girl Smile":

"Oh, happy is the lady who has seventeen algrettes,
And she's the most agreeable of girls
Who owns a few chinchilla coats and many sable sets,
And hasn't got the time to count her pearls;
If one can always wear the finest dress that's in the room,
Then one can always wear the brightest smile,
For certainly the mental state that's wholly free from gloom
Is when you cost a lot and lead the style!"

With a happy fancy MacLellan turns to sentiment and writes:

"Thy mouth is a rose in May
Awaiting a perfect noon,
The noon of a perfect day,
The day of a perfect June;
Awaiting a warm caress,
Its glory to then disclose;
And, oh, that I might possess
The glory of such a rose!"

TAFT HITS WILSON PHILIPPINE POLICY

Says Harrison's Hasty Removals Are Fraught with Grave Danger.

SOBER THOUGHT NEEDED

Hopes the Administration Will Not Plunge Headlong Into Serious Error.

RULE OF FILIPINOS A FARCE

The ex-President Also Hopes That We Will Not Be Drawn Into War with Mexico.

Ex-President Taft attacked last night the policy of the Wilson Administration in the Philippines before a large audience of the Brooklyn Institute of Arts and Sciences in the Brooklyn Academy of Music. He took the attitude of a man who was seeing his own work endangered. As the first Governor of the Philippines, as Secretary of War, and as President, for thirteen years with hardly a break he had built up a civil service in the islands, and now he saw Governor General Harrison refusing to seek advice from those who knew the country, taking information from secret agents and dismissing the men who had achieved praiseworthy results.

The two chief points in Mr. Taft's indictment of the present régime were the grant of a majority in the Philippine Council to the Filipinos and the dismissal of some of the most highly experienced American officials. With Governor General Harrison he joined in his censures Congressman Jones, author of the Jones bill, which would practically destroy American control.

"Brother Jones," he said, "is not really a bad man. He was one of that famous party which I took out to the Philippines. But I want to hold him up to the contempt that he deserves for permitting himself to be hoodwinked as he has been. He seems now to find it necessary to attack every one who has been out there working and sweating for the good of the Filipinos and the good name of the United States."

The large crowd, which filled the opera house of the Academy of Music to the doors, applauded the ex-President as he recounted the brilliant work done during the first thirteen years of American occupation, and threw scorn on Mr. Harrison for dismissing such men as the Director of Health and the chiefs of the American bureaus.

"I believe he is making serious mistakes," the ex-President said, "and the penalty for mistakes in the Philippines is always severe jolts."

The audience cheered him, too, as he expressed only the best wishes for the success of the Wilson Administration, but they were roused to enthusiasm as Mr. Taft went on:

"I would much rather see the present Administration continued than see that party and candidate come in who hold views with respect to the judiciary and the Constitution that I hold dangerous."

One passing allusion Mr. Taft made to Mexican affairs. He expressed the hope that the United States would never be drawn into war with that country, for if it had cost $200,000,000 to subdue the Philippines, how much more would it cost to put Mexico in order. Moreover, intervention, he said, would plunge us into a war with glory for no one.

Taft's Intimate Knowledge.

Mr. Taft began his lecture by pointing out that for nearly four years the Philippines were under his direct rule, and that from that time until he left the White House the islands were also under his control as Secretary of War or as President, with the exception of a short interval of nine months. He said he had had thirteen years in which to acquaint himself with the problems and needs of the Philippines.

Then he gave a description of the geographical and political conditions of the islands before the Americans went there, and dwelt particularly on the illiteracy and ignorance of the people. Among the so-called civilized or Christian Filipinos he said there were fifteen or sixteen distinct dialects, and in a journey of 120 miles a traveler would encounter four of them. There was, the ex-President pointed out, a marked oligarchic tendency among the small educated minority toward the bulk of the population. He added:

"The educated and well-to-do Filipinos take easily to intrigue and love politics. The influence of Spanish authority, to which they have been trained for 300 years, makes them unsympathetic with true democracy. Their praise of liberty is largely a matter of lip service."

Mr. Taft sketched the system of peonage or slavery for debt and declared emphatically that the United States was guardian of the great mass of the ignorant Filipinos, and this led him to a review of what had been accomplished by this country since it took the rule over from Spain. He dwelt on the constitution of the islands, the achievements in the making of means of communication, the improvement of agriculture, the establishment of the sanitary conditions, and especially of the good done by the schools. He said:

"I do not hesitate to say that the character of the American civil servants and their effectiveness for the work they have to do in the islands, when Governor General Forbes left the islands, was at the highest point. It had been the result of twelve years of training and growth. Every member of the service had an intense interest in the success of the Government and in the showing that could be made of efficiency and economy in the reports of the various departments and of the commission to this country."

Mr. Taft then turned to consider the policy of the present Administration toward the Philippines.

"As I was there," he said, "not quite four years, and only had personally to do with the initiation of the Government, I think I can speak without a lack of modesty and say that the colonial work of the American Government in the Philippines is quite as remarkable as that of Lord Cromer in Egypt.

Hatred of Moros for Filipinos.

"Now what are we to do? Are we to let these islands go and turn them over to an oligarchy of eloquent and attractive orators who really believe in aristocracy, and who have no real conception of civil and individual liberty, and certainly no capacity by training and education for successful popular government? The minute that the strong background of a powerful Government is

WINIFRED BYRNE FOUND.

Stolen Three-Year-Old Child Discovered Wandering in West 40th St.

Three-year-old Winifred Byrne, who was stolen from her father and mother on East Thirty-eighth Street, near Second Avenue, on last Saturday afternoon, was found last night in West Fortieth Street, between Eighth and Ninth Avenues, by Mrs. Jennie Gill of 330 West Fortieth Street, who saw the child toddling about in the street. After a heavy truck had narrowly missed running over the little girl, Mrs. Gill ran out of her home and took the child upstairs into her apartments.

Winifred smiled as she admitted that she was "losted." After feeding her Mrs. Gill took the child to the West Thirty-seventh Street Police Station. There Lieut. Gilhooley recognized her. He notified the police of the East Thirty-fifth Street Precinct, and half an hour later Joseph Byrne, the baby's father, came rushing into the police station.

"Oh, thank God! Thank God!" he exclaimed, when he recognized his daughter. Then he broke down, as he hugged Winifred.

The police and Mr. Byrne questioned Winifred as to where she had been for the last five days, but all they could get from her was that "a big man tooked me away." Winifred said that her abductor had taken her for a car ride into the country, and that she had been living with "the big man" and "a nice lady" in the country. Yesterday evening she said the "big man" had taken her for another car ride and had "runned away" from her in West Fortieth Street.

Winifred was evidently well cared for during her wanderings. She wore the same clothes as when she was abducted. She was afraid to answer any questions at first, and her lisping replies were coaxed from her only after a great deal of petting.

"The child has evidently been completely cowed," said Lieut. Gilhooley. "She acts as though she had been warned not to tell anything. She has been well taken care of, and her clothing had been freshly laundered."

GOETHALS NOT FOR DAYTON

Engineer Says He Won't Consider Any Offer Until Canal Is Finished.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PANAMA, Nov. 19.—Col. George W. Goethals, chief engineer of the Panama Canal, has received the offer of the Dayton city management. He replied, when asked about it to-day, that his one desire was to finish the canal, and that he would wait here before considering anything else. He is desirous of perfecting a permanent organization, and says that after that is done it will be time to consider other fields.

It was intimated in his conversation that the line likely to be followed by him hereafter would be engineering work, since he was first and foremost an engineering officer. His attitude convinces all here that he will reject anything until he can say of his Panama Canal work, "The job is done."

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19.—Col. George W. Goethals, chief engineer of the Panama Canal, cannot accept the invitation of the authorities of Dayton, Ohio, to become city manager and undertake the making of a model municipality of Dayton. Secretary Garrison of the War Department to-day notified Senator Pomerene of Ohio that an engineer of the Army Corps could not be detailed for work of this character without special legislation by Congress, nor could leave be granted to him for that purpose.

The decision is in line with an opinion recently of Attorney General McReynolds, who held that army engineers could not be detailed to the Interstate Commerce Commission to assist in its inquiry into the physical valuation of American railways. Senator Pomerene informed the Dayton authorities of Secretary Garrison's decision.

CANAL MAY DISAPPOINT.

British Shipbroker Does Not Look for Great Trade Increase at First.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 19.—Howard Houlder of Messrs. Howard Houlder and Partners, shipbrokers, in an inaugural address at the Institute of Shipbrokers to-day, said the opening of the Panama Canal might lead to a result exactly the opposite to what apparently some of the large lines expected, in so far as they were adding to their tonnage on the score of increased traffic when the canal opened.

It seemed to him that the question was one of population on the other side of the canal and that they were not going to have any great increase in the volume of trade until the Pacific Coast, both north and south, had a very much larger population than it had at present.

Therefore, it might very well be that the shipowners who were making their arrangements ahead in connection with the opening of the Panama Canal might be disappointed when that event took place.

WILSON MOST BOSS-RIDDEN.

So Says Secretary Daniels, but the "Boss" Is President's Conscience.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Nov. 19.—"President Wilson is the most boss-ridden President we have ever had," declared Josephus Daniels, Secretary of the Navy, at the annual John Jay banquet of the Kansas City Commercial Club to-night; "and the boss whose every dictate he obeys is his conscience. In determining great polices his boss rules him. He is weak and powerless in the presence of the boss—a tool in its hands.

"One day a friend asked the President why he did not do a certain thing. The President repled: 'I cannot do it—my boss will not let me.' The friend thought he was perhaps referring to Mrs. Wilson, when the President added: 'My conscience is my boss.'"

Secretary Daniels predicted that a new era of prosperity and good living was about to dawn for the farmer.

"The new tariff," said he, "which will remove from the farm the excessive charges for every article needed in cultivation and in the home, will cheapen living for the farmer. The new currency bill that will soon be law will be followed by wise legislation providing for rural credits and for effective laws which will be put into execution against all forms of monopoly."

MILLIONS MADE IN FRISCO DEALS

Profits of Failed Road's Officials in Syndicates Disclosed at Commerce Board Inquiry.

$900,000 FROM FREE LAND

One Group of Ninety Investors Made $3,000,000 on Sale of Small Line to the Frisco.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Nov. 19.—Albert T. Perkins, railway expert of the St. Louis Union Trust Company, to-day on the stand in the Interstate Commerce Commission's investigation of the St. Louis & San Francisco receivership, flatly contradicted the testimony of Benjamin F. Yoakum, Chairman of the Frisco Board of Directors, that promises were not made to promoters of subsidiary companies that the Frisco would take over the properties.

So far in the hearing the testimony shows that Frisco officials' syndicates cleared $7,038,000 in profits in these projects.

Mr. Perkins said it was generally understood when the New Iberia was projected that the Frisco eventually would take it over. Later he said it was explicitly so understood.

Evidence as to the connection of Frisco officials with promotion schemes and construction companies showed profits of nearly 100 per cent. in some instances, the money coming from the Frisco to acquire properties which did not prove to be moneymakers.

A syndicate of ninety-nine investors which sold the St. Louis, Brownsville & Mexico to the Frisco made a profit of $3,000,000 on an investment of $3,891,000.

Frisco Officials Who Profited.

Nine of these were Frisco officials. C. H. Beggs made a profit of $29,000 on an investment of $37,000; W. K. Bixby, Director of the Frisco, profited $81,700 on an investment of $108,000; James Campbell, Director, profited $252,000 on an investment of $334,000; F. H. Hamilton, Treasurer of the Frisco, profited $12,609 on an investment of $16,666; Edwin Hawley profited $63,375 on an investment of $83,000; James F. Hinkley, chief engineer of the Frisco, profited $17,576 on an investment of $27,800; L. F. Parker, former counsel, profited $28,290 on an investment of $37,400; W. B. Spaulding profited $13,667 on an investment of $18,333; B. F. Yoakum profited $228,413 on an investment of $300,000.

The names of five promoters who were members of the syndicate that made $900,000 out of the sale of land donated by citizens and towns of Texas to aid in the building of the St. Louis, Brownsville & Mexico Railway were given to Commissioner Clarke to-day by A. T. Perkins, syndicate manager. The five men named were Benjamin F. Yoakum, Samuel W. Fordyce, St. Louis capitalist; Robert S. Brookings, President of the Board of Trustees of Washington University; Thomas H. West, Chairman of the Board of Directors of the St. Louis Union Trust Company, and now a Frisco receiver, and Edward S. Whitaker, a broker.

Perkins testified that the syndicate sold the land and used part of the proceeds in making improvements in the territory traversed by the Brownsville Road. The purpose of these improvements was to develop traffic. Later these improvements were deeded to the West Texas Abstract and Guaranty Company, which the syndicate acquired.

Tipped Off to Receivership.

It was brought out that O. H. Nance, Treasurer of the St. Louis, Brownsville & Mexico, telegraphed to Frank S. Hamilton, Treasurer of the Frisco road, that the Brownsville road could borrow from a bank in Kingsville, Texas if he could be assured that the Treasurer of the Frisco would "tip off" Nance seventy-two hours before any receivership proceedings were instituted against the Brownsville. In the telegram Nance asked permission to make an overdraft of $15,000 against a Kingsville bank.

Hamilton on the stand declared that he did not remember whether he gave Nance the advance tip on the receivership proceedings, but Special Examiner D. E. Brown showed from telegrams that Nance borrowed $25,000 from a bank in Kingsville on June 12, 1913, and repaid it on July 4. The receivership petition against the Brownsville was filed three days later.

Treasurer Hamilton testified that the Frisco in 1911 borrowed on short time notes $6,000,000, $9,000,000 in 1912, and $10,000,000 in 1913. In April, 1913, the road sold to Speyer & Co. of New York $3,000,000 general lien bonds. These bonds were sold by Speyer & Co. to French investors. He said that when the receivership was instituted against the Frisco the road had between $2,500,000 and $3,000,000 of unpaid vouchers for general expenses, such as coal, &c.

Collateral for the $400,000 Loan.

Treasurer Hamilton also testified regarding the $400,000 loan made by the North American Company to the Frisco—the loan on which the receivership proceedings were based. The loan originally was for $825,000, according to Hamilton, and the original security was $8,000,000 of the bonds of the Arizona & New Mexico Land Company. After the loan had been reduced to $400,000 James Campbell of St. Louis, President of the North American Company, asked for additional security. The road then put up $3,000,000 of the capital stock, the $250,000 of the bonds of the New Orleans & Texas Railway.

Charles W. Hillard of New York, for ten years Vice President of the St. Louis & San Francisco Railroad, and since 1885 Vice President of the Chicago & Eastern Illinois, was asked whether financial statements of the Frisco were not submitted to Speyer & Co. before being sent out, in order that changes might be made to help the appearance of the report.

Mr. Hillard professed to know nothing of such a practice, but Commissioner Clark read into the evidence a letter written in September, 1910, by Hillard to B. L. Winchell, then President of the road. This letter told how bankers had helped in "rearranging statistics."

Mr. Hillard then said that whatever the letter showed was correct.

SAYS HE GOT GRAFT FOR AN EX-CAPTAIN

Former Detective Cohen Tells Whitman He Was a Go-Between for the Wiretappers.

The most important disclosure made since District Attorney Whitman renewed his fight on the police graft ring came through the confession yesterday of Al Cohen, a former detective and the reputed go-between in the deals between the police of this city and the wire tappers. In his confession Cohen named a former Police Captain and two officials high in the Police Department as sharers in the $2,500 a month and 15 per cent. of the profits paid by the wire tappers for protection.

From the beginning of the investigation Assistant District Attorney Frederick J. Groehl has been conferring with Cohen, who has supplied many details in the graft story. It was not until yesterday that the graft collector became communicative and uncovered fully the system whereby the police kept their hands off the swindlers in return for large payments.

With his brother, Charles Cohen, the former detective went to Mr. Groehl's office yesterday morning at 10 o'clock and after a conference of two hours talked for another hour with Mr. Whitman to whom he repeated his full story, telling of collections made for the police Captain who told him that the cash was to go "higher up." Cohen named specific amounts paid to him as collector for the ex-police Captain. In almost every detail Cohen's story agrees with the confession of "Mickey" Shea. Curley Carter, Frank Tarbeaux and George H. McRae. The only variations are in the amounts paid in some instances. So closly do the different confessions dovetail that the District Attorney regards the corroboration as complete in every important detail.

Cohen told the prosecutors that for six months before his resignation from the department he had acted as agent and go-between for the former Police Captain. He would get graft money from Mickey Shea and Tom Brown, representatives of the wiretappers, and pass it on to the Captain, who told Cohen that the money was to go to a higher official. Cohen never had any dealings with that official, so the case against him, it is said, will have to rest chiefly upon whatever is revealed by the Captain. After he left the force, Cohen said, his relations with the Police Captain and the wiretappers were discontinued. It was not until October, 1911, when the Gondorff gang lured Simeon M. Jones of Pittsburgh to this city and swindled him out of $20,000 that Cohen came into the case again. The wiretappers decided, he said, that it would be well to get in closer touch with the police.

Representatives of the wiretappers, Cohen said, came to him and asked him to "fix things." Cohen communicated with the former Police Captain, who, he said, told him to "go ahead" and that it would be "all right downtown." Cohen said he told the wiretappers that things were all fixed, and the wheels of the syndicate were set into motion to snare Jones.

The victim came to New York and went back home $20,000 poorer. Cohen said he received from the wiretappers $2,000, and that he divided this sum with the Captain. Shea, he said, gave the Captain another $800. A large part of this, it is asserted, went to the officials at Headquarters.

After the arrest of McRae for complicity in the swindling of Jones, Cohen told the Captain that if any investigation was made into the relations between the police and the wiretappers he would not be "the goat," but would go to Mr. Whitman and tell all. It is the belief of the investigators that great pressure was brought on Cohen to prevent the confession, and this is the reason that he delayed telling his story until yesterday.

Cohen will go before the Grand Jury when it meets to take up the investigation and repeat the story he told to Mr. Whitman and Mr. Groehl. This will not be before Monday probably, but there is a possibility that the prosecution will have the matter well enough in hand to bring it before the Grand Jury this week. The Police Captain mentioned by Cohen has made no attempt to arrange a conference with the District Attorney, and Mr. Whitman said yesterday that he did not intend to ask him to tell his story before the Grand Jury meets. His testimony is regarded as of importance only to corroborate Cohen.

It is understood that twelve indictments will be asked for if the prosecution. Of these three will be for officials at Police Headquarters and nine for detectives.

TO ACT IN STOVER'S PLACE.

Mayor Appoints L. F. La Roche to Take Charge of Park Affairs.

Louis F. La Roche, Secretary of the Park Board, was appointed Acting Park Commissioner for Manhattan and Richmond for thirty days yesterday to fill the place left by Commissioner Charles B. Stover, who has been absent for thirty-four days, and whose whereabouts are unknown.

Mayor Kline, who is ill at his home in Jamaica, called Mr. La Roche to see him there yesterday, and after a conference with him wrote the following order:

Park Commissioner Stover having been absent from the city for more than ten consecutive days, namely, from Oct. 16, 1913, until this 19th day of November, 1913, and there being no provision of law whereby said Commissioner could appoint an Acting Commissioner during his absence, now, in pursuance of an ordinance passed by the Board of Aldermen on Oct. 18, 1913, and approved by me this 19th day of November, 1913, I hereby designate Louis F. La Roche, a senior officer in the Department of Parks, as Acting Park Commissioner for the Boroughs of Manhattan and Richmond, for a period of thirty days, unless sooner revoked by me.

The said Acting Commissioner is furthermore authorized to appoint and remove officers and employes when such action be necessary. The Park Commissioner for the Borough of Manhattan and Richmond not being required by law to furnish a bond, no bond will be required from Mr. La Roche. This designation will take effect forthwith. Given under my hand and the seal of the City of New York, this 19th day of November, 1913.

A. L. KLINE, Mayor.

Mr. Stover was last heard from nine days ago, when a letter written by him from Philadelphia was received by Mr. La Roche. No word was received from him yesterday by his friends at the University Settlement.

CIGAR STORES MEN GET DRUG CONCERN

Control of Riker-Hegeman Co. Passes to George J. Whelan and His Associates.

Control of the Riker-Hegeman Company, the drug concern with nearly 100 stores in Eastern cities, has definitely passed to George J. Whelan and some of his associates in the United Cigar Stores Company. The amount of Riker-Hegeman stock bought up has not yet been announced, but it is believed to be close to half of all the common shares outstanding. Particulars of the transaction may be made public within a few days.

A Director of the United Cigar Stores Company said yesterday that it was planned to form a new company, which would act as a holding company for the United Cigar Stores and the Riker-Hegeman concerns. The new company will be capitalized, as far as common stock is concerned, at a figure which will approximately equal the combined capital of the two constituent companies. Shares in the holding company will probably have a par value of $5, and the stock of the Cigar Stores and Riker-Hegeman organizations will be exchanged for the new stock on a basis of one share for twenty. On the Curb the new shares were traded in yesterday at prices ranging from $6.75 to $8 on a "when issued" basis.

"The plan for issuing the new stock at a low parity," said the Director who told of the deal, "was evolved for the purpose of permitting employes of both the cigar and drug companies to buy it and share in the profits."

Until the new organization is completed, operation of the companies will be continued as at present. At the next meeting of stockholders of the Riker-Hegeman Company several Directors probably will be elected to represent the new interests, and thereafter steps will be taken to bring both companies into harmonious sales relations.

Contrary to what has been said in a semi-official way, the affairs of the cigar and drug companies will be closely united. Those who have been most active in buying up Riker-Hegeman stock said yesterday that they did not place much credence in reports from Washington that Attorney General McReynolds was not especially favorable to the deal. As the United Cigar Stores Company was not involved in the transaction in its corporate capacity, it was pointed out no objection could be taken to the control of the drug company by leading stockholders in the former concern.

When the new company goes into operation drugs and tobacco products will be handled under separate direction, but in the same stores. It is expected that the United Stores Land & Improvement Company, which has charge of leasing stores for the United Cigar Stores Company, will continue in the same capacity for the consolidated company. The equity which the new stock will have in the large earnings of this company will be adjusted later, possibly through the declaration of an extra dividend.

The United Cigar Stores Company has common stock outstanding of $27,162,000, while Riker-Hegeman common shares aggregate about $5,000,000. The greater part of the drug store shares was formerly held by half a dozen men. The gross earnings of the Riker-Hegeman Company have been running so far this year at a rate of about $15,000,000 per annum, an increase of approximately 35 per cent. over 1912.

6,000-MILE CHASE OF MSS.

Dealer Sends Emissary to America to Get Burns Treasures Back.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 19.—It is stated in reference to the Burns Glenriddel manuscripts that Mr. Hornstein, the London dealer who bought them and sent them to America, on being approached by the Lord Provost of Glasgow, immediately cabled to his agent in New York instructions to withdraw the offer of the manuscripts.

Finding that the situation was rendered all the more difficult from the fact that the agent had sent an emissary with the manuscripts to find a client who was in the Far West, Mr. Hornstein sent out a special representative from England. In the meantime the New York agent dispatched a man in pursuit of the bearer of the precious relics.

When seen to-day Mr. Hornstein expressed hopefulness of the success of the chase. At the same time he pointed out that, as his client was on a wandering expedition, the tracks of the pursuers and the pursued would be bewildering, and even weeks might elapse before definite tidings could reach him.

KRUPP PROFIT $9,000,000.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Nov. 19.—The Krupps' dividend, issued a month earlier than usual, amounts to 14 per cent. on the paid-up capital of $45,000,000, the largest in the firm's history.

The net profit for the year is $9,000,000, exclusive of $1,500,000 carried forward from 1912, an increase of nearly $2,500,000.

Contributions of $500,000 each have been made to the Pensions Fund and the Workmen's Holiday Fund and $750,000 to the Christmas Fund. The number of employés has increased to 80,000.

TYSON & CO. ON TRIAL FOR TICKET DEAL

Instead of John Doe Inquiry, Subscriber Makes a Complaint of Grand Larceny.

OPERA CLERK UNDER FIRE

Denies He Knew Tickets Were to be Hypothecated—Bank Told They Were Not Paid For.

Criminal proceedings against the theatre ticket agency of Tyson & Co., 1,122 Broadway, which pledged its allotment of $153,000 worth of Metropolitan Opera tickets to the Metropolitan Trust Company of 49 Wall Street, as security for a loan of $100,000, were instituted yesterday afternoon by District Attorney Whitman before Magistrate Deuel, sitting by designation in the Criminal Court Building. The action against the ticket agency was based on the complaint of Adolph E. Dick of 244 West Seventieth Street, who charged that Tyson & Co. had unlawfully appropriated his season tickets for the Metropolitan Opera and the money with which he paid for the tickets. The charge against the ticket agency is grand larceny in the second degree.

The proceedings were begun somewhat unexpectedly following a change in the plans for a John Doe investigation, as announced on Tuesday by the District Attorney. Mr. Whitman had said that his office would institute proceedings "with a view of determining whether any offenses against the penal law had been committed." This announcement was made because it was the request of ex-State Senator Frank D. Pavey of 32 Nassau Street, acting as Chairman of a committee of subscribers which demanded the investigation, to make the inquiry an impersonal one.

However, it is understood that Magistrate Deuel preferred not to conduct the proceedings in the nature of a John Doe inquiry, whereupon the District Attorney's office, with the evidence gathered by his assistants, Arthur C. Train and Leslie S. Lockhart, instituted proceedings against Tyson & Co. When Senator Pavey learned this he was unwilling to make any affidavit, so he was called as a witness and not as a complainant.

The first person examined was Mr. Dick. He was followed by ex-Senator Pavey, who was in turn succeeded by Earl Lewis, treasurer of the box office of the Metropolitan Opera House, and Beverly Chew, Second Vice President and acting President of the Metropolitan Trust Company.

One of the interesting features of the examination of witnesses was an admission by Earl Lewis that he had entertained a "suspicion" that the allotment of opera tickets when delivered to Richard J. Hartman, President of Tyson & Co., were intended for security for a loan. Urged by Assistant District Attorney Train to tell something more of the delivery of opera tickets, Mr. Lewis said that he had asked Mr. Hartman if they were not going to be given to the Metropolitan Trust Company as "collateral," but he added that he had asked that question only in a "joking way."

Explained Transaction to Bank.

During the investigation Mr. Train introduced a letter, said to have been written by Mr. Hartman to Vice President Chew of the Metropolitan Trust Company. The letter, after explaining the ticket agency's method of conducting business, suggested that Tyson & Co. desired to open a special account with the trust company. The letter showed that the ticket agency expected to receive its regular allotment of opera tickets, and went on to explain that most of the tickets had been taken up by subscribers, to whom bills had been rendered. According to the letter, the ticket agency expected to collect a large part of the subscriptions by the 1st of October. In it was the suggestion that the checks of the agency's subscribers be deposited on the special account.

In his affidavit Mr. Dick said that on Aug. 30, 1913, he paid Tyson & Co. $151.50 for two season tickets for two seats, numbered A 51 and A 53, in the dress circle; that on Sept. 13 Tyson & Co. received the seats from the Metropolitan Opera Company and hypothecated them with the Metropolitan Trust Company as part security for a loan of $100,000. He stated, further, that his check of Aug. 30 was made out to Tyson & Co. and bore the indorsement of the Metropolitan Trust Company. He also stated that Richard J. Hartman, President of Tyson & Co., had admitted that he got the tickets and hypothecated them with the Metropolitan Trust Company.

Mr. Dick gave up the witness stand to ex-State Senator Frank D. Pavey. Mr. Pavey said that he received a notice from Tyson & Co. during either last March or last April, announcing that subscriptions for Metropolitan Opera tickets were to be renewed, and giving the time within which subscriptions were to be received.

A circular letter was introduced by Mr. Train, marked exhibit 4. It was printed on Opera stationery with the heading, "Metropolitan Opera Company, Metropolitan Opera House, John Brown, Business Comptroller; Giulio Gatti-Casazza, General Manager, April 1, 1912." Under that head began this announcement:

"The Metropolitan Opera Company begs to announce that its subscription books for the season 1912-1913 are now open for subscribers to the present season, who will have the right up to and including May 4, 1912, to renew their subscriptions." The letter closed with "Address all communications to Tyson & Co."

Ex-Senator Pavey could not identify this letter as identical with the notice he had received from Tyson & Co.

The testimony of ex-Senator Pavey for the most part was a recital of his efforts to obtain the tickets for which he had subscribed through Tyson & Co. He also told the court what had been the results of an independent investigation he had made into the transactions leading up the ticket tangle. Mr. Train was particularly interested in that part of Mr. Pavey's testimony in which he recalled conversations he had held with Richard J. Hartman, President of Tyson & Co. He testified that Hartman had told him of the letter, alleged to have been written by Hartman to Vice President Chew of the Metropolitan Trust Company; and said that he further was informed by Hartman that Tyson & Co. had withdrawn $60,000 from the special account with the trust company "for purposes other than meeting the loan."

The delivery of the tickets to Hartman by the Metropolitan Opera House was recalled by Mr. Pavey as that part of the transaction had been told to him by Mr. Hartman. He remembered that Hartman had said that it was only an incident that Earl Lewis, Treasurer of the box office of the Metropolitan Opera House had accompanied him in a taxicab to the Metropolitan Trust Company, where Mr. Lewis received from Mr. Hartman his certified check for $100,000.

Opera Representative's Part.

When Mr. Lewis was placed on the stand he testified that he was at present Treasurer of the Metropolitan Opera House Box Office, and that he had been connected with the Metropolitan Opera Company for the last five years. He testified that it had been customary for the Opera Company to make an allotment of $153,000 worth of tickets to Tyson & Co. each year, and that the subscribers always obtained the same seats.

He testified that on Friday, Sept. 12, Mr. Hartman came to the Metropolitan

HUERTA TOASTS AMERICANS

He Drinks to the People, but Not the Government.

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 19.—"Gentlemen, and you of the Diplomatic Corps, I ask you to drink with me the health of the American people."

In this pointed manner Gen. Huerta this afternoon made a distinction between the American Government and Americans.

The incident occurred at a reception given to the diplomats by Gen. Huerta at Chepultepec Castle.

Mr. and Mrs. Nelson O'Shaughnessy were there and Huerta greeted them effusively, embracing Mr. O'Shaughnessy. After a moment's conversation he raised his glass and called upon the other guests to join him in the toast.

NO GOLD LACE AT WEDDING?

Hint of Decree Against Uniforms at White House Affair.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19.—Representatives of foreign powers and officers of the army and navy are wondering what they are to wear at the White House wedding next Tuesday. Until to-day it was taken for granted that the diplomats and army and navy officers would as a matter of course attend in full uniform. A chance remark at the State Department this morning revealed the fact that uniforms might not be acceptable to the President and Mrs. Wilson, as they assumed it was understood the wedding invitation was non-official and personal.

No Ambassador will speak for publication, but it is well understood that unless President Wilson issues a request through the State Department that all guests wear ordinary afternoon dress, the diplomatic contingent will be ablaze in gold lace with all the gorgeous coloring of court uniforms.

This was the style followed at Miss Alice Roosevelt's wedding, where the diplomats wore the same dress as at the formal reception of New Year's morning.

Among the additional wedding gifts received by Miss Jessie Wilson to-day was a silver bowl from the Spanish Minister and Mme. Rianb. Miss Wilson was the guest of honor to-day at a buffet luncheon at the Congressional Club, with Miss Genevieve Cark, daughter of the Speaker, as hostess.

WOMAN MISSING A WEEK.

Miss Grace La Gendre, Hotel Bookkeeper, Sought In Vain.

Friends of Miss Grace La Gendre, bookkeeper at the Hotel Gregorian, at 42 West Thirty-fifth Street, have been seeking her for a week without success. On Thursday last, between 10 and 11 o'clock in the morning, she left the hotel, complaining of feeling ill and saying she was going to her home, 156 Clinton Street, Brooklyn. When she failed to return to work the next day the hotel management telephoned to the Clinton Street address, where Miss La Gendre had been boarding for some years. There it was said that she had appeared there at noon on Thursday, but had gone away immediately thereafter, since when nothing had been seen or heard of her.

When last seen she wore a heavy gray ulster coat, with black collar and black cuffs, and a brown hat, with pink flowers. She was about five feet in height, of slender build, and had dark hair, somewhat streaked with gray. She was about 32 years old. The only relative known at the hotel was said to be an uncle, Henry La Gendre of Cresskill, N. J.

PRAYED AS MAN WAS SAVED.

Sisters of the Good Shepherd Witness a Rescue from East River.

Two sisters of the House of the Good Shepherd who were strolling in their courtyard on the edge of the East River at Ninetieth Street shortly after dark last evening hurried in to tell the Mother Superior that there was a man crying faintly for help in the water. The Mother Superior telephoned to Police Headquarters, and when Patrolman Kronenfitter of the East Eighty-eighth Street Station came running down to the river, the sisters were able to point to the figure of a man bobbing up and down in the water some distance from the shore.

Then, while Kronenfitter, coatless, hatless, and in his stocking feet, swam out with the tide to the rescue and fought with the frantic man he was trying to help, several of the sisters stood in the courtyard praying that the rescue might be made. The rescue was made, for Kronenfitter, who two years before had pulled a man from the river at almost the same spot, brought this man ashore and landed him with the help of Sergt. Baxter of his precinct.

The rescued man was Robert Kent of 762 Columbus Avenue. Kent either would not or could not tell how he got into the river.

GIRLS IN LEAP TO ESCAPE.

Fall Into Deep Ravine — One Injured, the Other Disappears.

Under cover of the excitement in the Magdalen Home for Girls at Inwood, where preparations were being made for a musicale last evening, two of the girls slipped out into the grounds to the rear, pushed a table against the fifteen-foot wall, climbed to the top and jumped. On the other side, between the wall and the Hudson River, is a deep ravine. There are spots where the drop is only fifteen feet to solid earth, but there are others where the side of the ravine continues the line of the wall to make a sheer drop of forty feet.

In the dark and the rush of their break for liberty, the girls selected one of these latter places. A man who chanced to see them silhouetted for a brief moment as they stood on the wall saw them tumble down into the ravine, and lie there, two motionless heaps.

He rushed to the main entrance with the news and attendants scaled the wall to find one of the girls, May Brown, of 237 Bay Thirty-fifth Street, Brooklyn, lying half conscious at the bottom of the ravine. Her right leg was broken. From her they learned that Mary Allen was her companion in flight. When they asked where she was, the girl only gestured feebly toward the woods.

Around the woods the police of the St. Nicholas Avenue Station formed a cordon while they searched through it in the fear that the other girl had gone further, only to fail, hurt and helpless, in the darkness. At midnight last night they had not found her.

CARRANZA PARLEY ENDED

Rebel Leader Refused to Answer Questions Asked for Wilson—Both He and Hale Leave Nogales.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 19.—That the recent stand taken by the United States is a "bluff" on the part of the Washington Administration, is the opinion generally expressed in Mexican official circles to-day. One Cabinet Minister was quoted as saying that Gen. Huerta had expected the United States to take some drastic action if the new Congress was convened, but that recent advices from Washington indicated that nothing would be done.

Two Americans went to see Gen. Huerta this morning to inquire regarding the possibility of anti-American outbreaks here in case of intervention and to ask his opinion regarding the removal of women and children. Gen. Huerta told them that there was no possibility of intervention.

He said the United States would do nothing and advised his callers to pay no attention to this talk. He did say, however, that mobs might start in the capital should trouble arise, and in that event he might be unable to control the situation. He renewed his offer of transportation to any Americans wishing to leave who were not provided with such transportation by their Government.

Persons close to Gen. Huerta say he is more determined than ever to remain and is fully confident that the United States will not exert anything stronger than moral pressure, which does not affect him.

To the circular sent to the Governors of the States by Gen. Huerta yesterday asking each of them how many men he would be able to furnish for the army in case of foreign trouble replies have come. It is understood that the answers were satisfactory, but orders have been issued to obtain more men if possible.

High Court Judge Arrested.

As an evidence of Huerta's confidence that he controls the situation, he ordered the arrest of a Justice of the Supreme Court last night, showing that he was prepared to adopt the same measures regarding the judicial as the legislative power. The reason given for the arrest of the Justice merely was the fact that he was alleged to have given out false information which was injurious to the Government. While specific charges were not made, the public understood that this was due to the publication of a dispatch from a District Judge at Acaponeta announcing that the place had fallen into the hands of the rebels. This as yet is unconfirmed through the War Department, as is also the case regarding the fall of Juarez, which the Government refuses to confirm.

It is generally believed here that Nelson O'Shaughnessy, the American Chargé, occupies his post here mer

This recalls an incident which occurred during the bombardment last February when the nurses and patients in the British hospital were told by the Federal troops that they had only thirty minutes to leave the place as the hospital was to be used as a barracks. It was generally believed that this sudden removal resulted in the death of two of the patients who only recently had undergone operations.

Hope for Fair Warning.

The majority of the Americans feel that because of the tone of the last warning to Americans to leave it is incumbent upon Washington to give due warning before taking any action which possibly might endanger their lives. Diplomats, however, profess to believe that the United States will not do this because it doubtless feels that the warning issued some time ago was sufficiently clear.

While refusing to make any comments on the situation, diplomats indicate that they do not believe any solution of the situation will be forthcoming in the immediate future.

Regarding the reports current here that Washington is secretly allowing the Northern rebels to obtain ammunition and arms, diplomats indicate this is not unexpected. The Government contends that it has proof that several large shipments were clandestinely smuggled across the border under the noses of the American troops in the last few weeks.

Rumors of Aid to Carranza.

The Government refuses to make any specific charges, and is suppressing the news here, although some officials say that this smuggling has been allowed in an attempt to obtain an agreement with the Constitutionalists upon the suggestions preeented by William Bayard Hale. Considerable feeling has been caused in the army by the persistent circulation of these reports.

More rumors were circulated to-day regarding attempts to cut the Mexican Railway between here and Vera Cruz. The reports say to-day that State guards at the Metlac bridge were attacked by rebels on the morning of Nov. 18, and that the rebels were repulsed. This is a large bridge, and is built on a curve. Its destruction would effectually cut off the road for several weeks. Because of the persistence of these reports many persons are planning to go to Vera Cruz, traveling only during the day and using slower trains.

Revolution Moving Southward.

Tepic, the capital of the territory of that name, was captured by rebels under Martin Espinoza early yesterday morning. These same rebels captured Acaponeta several days ago. No depredations were reported at either place.

These successes are regarded as important because they indicate the spread of the revolution southward from Sinaloa.

Quotes Napoleon in Justification.

Dispatch to The Associated Press.

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 19.—President Huerta, in his message to Congress to-morrow afternoon will quote Napoleon in justification of his arbitrary dissolution of the old Congress, and he serves notice that he will ask the new Congress to grant him a political bill of health.

This fact became known to-night almost at the same time with the fact that Mr. O'Shaughnessy, the American chargé, had received new instructions from Washington to wait at his post for further instructions and that important matters were under consideration in Washington.

No references to international relations is made in the message which Gen. Huerta has prepared. The document was read and briefly discussed at a meeting of the Cabinet to-day, the Ministers agreeing with their chief that he had done well in not attempting to cover too much ground.

The President confines himself to a review of the incidents leading to the dissolution of the old Congress, and a statement in justification for his act.

The message calls attention to the alleged lack of harmony existing between the Executive and judiciary on the one hand and the Chamber of Deputies on the other prior to the dissolution, charging that the Chamber tried to frustrate the Executive, and explains that the Executive did all in his power to prevent a rupture and maintain good relations with Congress, yielding in more than one instance and attempting in many ways to bring about a more cordial feeling of co-operation.

Says Congress Was Rebel Agency.

According to Gen. Huerta, "Congress became, in fact, the centre of revolutionary activity, a sort of open agency for northern rebels engaged with arms in slaughter and pillage, and, what is worse still, in the task of bleeding the fatherland, to expose it, in its weakness and poverty, to danger from abroad; took an attitude of opposition against the Government in the work it was attempting and invaded aggressively not only the province of the judicial power, but also that of the Executive, in order to second in this matter the nefarious activity of the rebels."

The President says that he chose not to be patient under these conditions and resorted at last to the extreme measure of dissolving Congress, using the necessary rigor to face such a delicate situation, and called new elections.

Defending his action, Gen. Huerta says it will always be accounted a noble act, and argues that in any case it is preferable to save the nation, even at the sacrifice of principles, than to preserve intact, at the expense of the people, the rigid, inert precept of justice, the utility of which may be open to controversy.

In this connection he quotes Napoleon to the effect that "the law is not violated when you save the fatherland.

He promises later to give Congress a detailed report of his acts in connection with taking over the direction of the Departments of Finance, Interior, and War.

Congress is told that if it thinks the President's acts are honest, patriotic, and of service it will give him its supreme sanction. But if not, it is invited to place the responsibility upon him who deserves it, with the assurance that neither the President nor any of his secretaries will evade any responsibility, since all had agreed to any sacrifice necessary in behalf of the welfare of the country.

What may be regarded as a hint of the delicate situation which Mexico, as a nation occupies appears in the conclusion of the message, when he reminds the Congressmen that the moment is a solemn one and possibly decisive for the future of the nation. The President says that the eyes of all the people of Mexico, as well as those of the civilized world, are upon them.

The message closes with an expression of the hope that soon all Mexicans may be united and may join in the task of national reconstruction.

Congress Likely to Ratify.

It is expected that Congress will receive the message without protest, thereby giving Huerta a virtual ratification of his acts. It is said that the message will open a way to an immediate discussion by Congress of the late Presidential election, and it is a foregone conclusion that the Congress will declare the election null.

It is thought possible by some that the Congress may name some one else for Provisional President for a period ensuing until the election and inauguration of a permanent Chief Executive, but it would be a big surprise to most Mexicans as well as foreigners if Gen. Huerta should not be instructed to continue at the head of affairs.

The announcement that a British squadron was coming to Mexican waters created keen interest to-day, but the effect upon the Mexican mind was reassuring rather than otherwise, because the Mexican people continue to look upon Great Britain as a friend. In official quarters the dispatch of the squadron was styled an act of courtesy.

Foreigners Make Defense Plans.

The foreign colonies in the Mexican capital are preparing to defend themselves in the event of disturbances in the city, and particularly should the final settlement be left to the Mexicans themselves.

Both Sir Lionel Carden and Admiral von Hintze, the British and German Ministers, respectively, have suggested to their nationals the advisability of perfecting some sort of a defense organization.

No such advice has been given to the Americans, but committees are quietly working out a plan of defense, and it is possible that a general organization will be formed embracing the American, British, German, and Austrian residents.

BRITAIN SENDS WARSHIPS.

Three Cruisers to Join International Fleet in Mexican Waters.

BRIDGETOWN, Barbados, Nov. 19.—The British cruiser squadron in West Indian waters last night received peremptory orders to proceed to Vera Cruz, and the vessels sailed at midnight.

LONDON, Nov. 19.—Great Britain decided to send the warships to Mexican waters from Barbados in order to protect British subjects should the necessity arise. The decision was arrived at by the British Foreign Office as a result of the general news published in the press of the unsatisfactory conditions prevailing in Mexico and of the advance of the Constitutionalists in the vicinity of the Vera Cruz railway.

No special information has been received by the Government here of any danger to the nationals, and it bases its change of policy on the accounts telegraphed to English newspapers from American sources.

BREMEN BACK AT VERA CRUZ.

German Cruiser and the Chester Take Places in Inner Harbor.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

VERA CRUZ, Mex., Nov. 19.—The German cruiser Bremen returned here this afternoon from Tuxpam, immediately taking her usual place inside the breakwater. The United States cruiser Chester also steamed inside the harbor.

It is rumored that the two Maderos who were released on bail from prison here will sail on the Morro Castle to-morrow, the Government being glad to get rid of them.

The rebel chief, Aguilar, commanding in the territory around Tuxpam, has notified the Eagle and Huasteca Companies that they will have to pay a heavy tax before pumping oil from their wells.

Great expectancy still prevails here among the refugees as to what action will be taken by the United States regarding Mexican affairs. They are hoping for a speedy settlement, one way or the other.

The British Consul will not discuss the reason for sending warships here. Señor Alvador, General Manager of the Mexico & Vera Cruz Railway, thinks that as other nations are represented here and the British investors have such large oil and railway interests hereabouts, the home Government thought it desirable to order a squadron to this port.

FINAL BREAK WITH CARRANZA.

Hale Quits When Leader Refuses to Answer Wilson's Questions.

Special to The New York Times.

NOGALES, Ariz., Nov. 19.—"You know the world is full of all kinds of people. Some of them are not only impossible, but highly improbable. Please understand that I am not speaking of the gentlemen across the border who are with such admirable skill preventing their friends from helping them."

The above was all that William Bayard Hale, personal representative of President Wilson, would say when plied with questions as to the cause of the breaking off of negotiations with Gen. Carranza.

Yesterday Francisco Escudero, Constitutionalist Minister of Foreign Affairs, gave out an interview, in which he said that conferences had paused until the United States Government should recognize the Constitutionalist Government and instruct Mr. Hale to present formal credentials. At least such was the meaning, although skilfully veiled in verbiage. The facts, as understood by persons here in a position to know, are quite different.

The probability is that the raising of the question of credentials was a mere subterfuge to cover Carranza's unwillingness to answer certain questions proposed by President Wilson.

Gen. Carranza evaded these questions and then absented himself from two conferences on flimsy excuses. Mr. Hale declined to continue them without the presence of the chief. Thereupon the leaders hit upon the idea of demanding that Mr. Hale reduce his questions to writing and submit them through the Minister of Foreign Affairs, promising that they would be debated in the full Cabinet and a written answer returned.

The President's envoy is understood to have replied that the suggestion was plainly a play for delay, that to suggest such a formality betokened a spirit of evasion, and that it was letting betrayed a lack of frankness, showed an absence of all sense of proportion, and a disposition to trifle in the presence of swift events.

In short, Mr. Hale seems to have made it clear that he expected to do business directly and frankly, face to face, with Carranza, and that an authoritative and immediate answer to President Wilson's inquiries was imperative.

Gen. Carranza left here late to-day on a special train for the south. Earlier Mr. Hale took his departure, thus ending the dealings between the insurgents and the American Government.

On entering the interior of Sonora, Carranza's first act will be to repay a social debt. The special train which conveyed the General, his staff of officers and newspaper correspondents, stopped for the night at Magdalena, midway between Nogales and Hermosillo, the State capital. There Gen. Carranza planned to give a ball to the townspeople in return for the one tendered him recently. It was said the train would proceed tomorrow to Hermosillo.

Carranza will then go on to Culican, capital of the State of Sinaloa, where a civil government is to be organized.

Foreign Minister Escudero and Minister of Fomento Bonillas did not board the train, though their departure had been expected.

They were astounded on learning that Mr. Hale had gone. They had not been apprised, they said, of the latter's intentions to leave the border so soon. It was believed here that Mr. Hale returned to Tucson, although he gave out no word of his intention.

The chagrin of the two Constitutionalists gave indication that they had held to the belief that the United States Government would seek to continue the negotiations, in spite of the change in the attitude of Carranza. In fact, it developed that Carranza's train was held more than three hours, while members of his party made inquiry as to the whereabouts of President Wilson's envoy. When the train departed Bonillas repaired to the American Consulate in quest of Mr. Hale, and there received the information that Hale would deal with no one but Carranza in person.

When told that Escudero had said that Carranza and his Cabinet had met him as individuals and not as a Cabinet, Mr. Hale smiled.

It is known that President Wilson's representative had difficulty in persuading the Carranza Government from receiving him in the hall of the Municipal Palace, attended by all the court formalities. It is also certain that an element that entered into the sudden determination of the Constitutionalist leaders was the discovery of an alleged plot to blow up the Cabinet with dynamite.

TUXPAM AGAIN MENACED.

Battleship New Hampshire to Join the Louisiana There.

VERA CRUZ, Nov. 19. — The battleship New Hampshire sailed from here to-day to join the Louisiana at Tuxpam, where the situation is reported to be threatening and the rebels are said to be preparing to attack the town again.

The exodus of American citizens from Mexico City continues, forty, mainly women and children, arriving here this morning by train. The fugitives report that comparatively few American women and children remain in the Federal capital.

REBEL VICTORIES GIVE HOPE.

Growing Belief at Washington That Huerta Will Be Driven Out.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19.—While official expressions of optimism regarding a satisfactory solution of the Mexican difficulty have not ceased, the general impression here is that it will be brought about more by internal developments in Mexico than by any pressure, diplomatic or otherwise, exerted by the United States.

While disclosures of rebel outrages seemed to have weakened the willingness of the Administration to rush into alliance with the Carranzistas, the victories of the past week or two have gone far toward keeping up the hopefulness of official Washington. Every report of a rebel victory in Mexico raises the hope here that the days of Gen. Huerta's power are numbered. This hope seems to rest more than ever on the belief that he will be ousted by the Mexican rebels without foreign assistance.

Reports from Mexico City citing rumors that Huerta will tender his resignation to the new Congress which will be formally organized to-morrow appear without official confirmation and run counter to everything that has been learned here concerning Gen. Huerta's attitude toward the proposals of Señor Aldape that he cease his hopeless resistance.

No comment was forthcoming at the State Department or elsewhere on the report from London that the British Admiralty had ordered three battle cruisers to proceed from the station in the Barbados to Vera Cruz. At the State Department it was said that it was not customary for one Government to notify another of the movements of its own ships to the coasts of a third country. No notification had been received, it was said, and none was expected. The French Government did notify the United States of a French battleship being sent to Vera Cruz, and the Japanese Ambassador in person informed Secretary Bryan of the object of the Japanese Government in sending a vessel to Acapulco. But these notifications grew out of an exceptional desire to avoid the appearance of putting obstacles in the path of American diplomacy.

At the White House this morning, it was said, nothing had been received there from William Bayard Hale, indicating that Señor Escudero of Gen. Carranza's Provisional Cabinet had demanded Dr. Hale's credentials. But the White House has indicated all along that Dr. Hale had no personal instructions from President Wilson, and it has been inferred that his reports were made to the State Department, where they were withheld from publication.

Praise of President Wilson's course came this afternoon from Senator Sutherland, a Republican member of the Committee on Foreign Relations.

"I sympathize with the attitude of the Administration," said Senator Sutherland. "and I believe that the policy that has been adopted by the President will eventually work out in a manner that will be generally approved. As a matter of expediency, we might be justified in recognizing Huerta on the ground that he is at present the strongest man to work out the Mexican problem, but in doing so we would ignore the moral aspect entirely and would set up a precedent that would result in a chain of recognitions of governments founded upon assassination. No matter how strong the plea of expediency that is offered for recognizing Huerta, the time had to come when our recognitions must be founded on higher moral grounds.

"It was just as well to face the question now. To recognize Huerta's alleged Government after the assassination of Madero meant that we would be compelled to recognize the alleged Government following the possible assassination of Huerta, thereby setting up, as I said, a chain of recognitions based upon assassination."

RECRUITING VERY ACTIVE.

Many Applicants for Army and Navy Enlistment in Pittsburgh.

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 19.—United States recruiting officers in this city are unanimous in the view that more men are offering their services to the army, navy and marine corps than for a number of years.

Capt. H. S. Hathway, of the army recruiting office, said there were more foreign born residents appearing for enlistment than there were Americans. First Lieut. W. A. Howard, of the marines, declared that so many applicants had appeared at his station that greater care in the selection of recruits was being exercised.

HUERTA WON'T YIELD, ALDAPE DECLARES

Will Have Every Patriotic Mexican with Him if War Should Start.

DENIES STORY OF QUARREL

Ex-Member of Dictator's Cabinet, Supposed to be en Route to France, Turns Up in Havana.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

HAVANA, Nov. 19.—"Gen. Huerta will never yield to the demand of the United States that he resign, but will resist to the bitter end. And he will have every patriotic Mexican with him when the first cannon shot is fired, despite the present internal divisions," was the declaration made here this afternoon by ex-Minister Garza Aldape, who arrived here aboard the steamship Espagne after having been reported deported to France by Gen. Huerta.

Señor Aldape made the statement in the lobby of the Hotel Inglaterra after calling on Gen. Felix Diaz, where he went to express his sympathy to the General apropos of the recent attempt to assassinate him. He also assured Gen. Diaz that the attempt was not made through any instructions or knowledge on the part of Huerta.

The ex-member of Huerta's Cabinet said that Huerta's feelings toward the United States were the bitterest possible, and were in every way justified. He added that the feeling was fully shared in by himself. He also said that if the American Government succeeded in ousting Huerta it would only be by force of arms.

Señor Aldape at first objected to discussing any phase of the Mexican situation, but finally did so when Mexican dispatches were shown to him reporting that he had quarreled with Gen. Huerta.

"Those cables are false," he exclaimed. "President Huerta and myself are the best of friends, and my only reason for leaving the Cabinet was due to his belief that my services were more necessary as Minister to France than in the Cabinet. Neither is it true that I have had any differences with the other Ministers. I consider Ministers Moheno and Blanquet warm friends of mine. The story that they forced me out of the Cabinet is false, totally false."

Referring to the revolution, Señor Aldape expressed the belief that the Government soon would dominate the situation. He declared that only two States were completely under rebel control.

Regarding the economic situation, the ex-Minister said he considered it extremely difficult at present, but he said the Government still had sufficient resources to meet the extraordinary expenses arising from the maintenance of the large army employed in combatting rebels.

He said he considered Huerta's continuance in the Presidency as absolutely necessary in order to put down the revolution.

Confers with Ambassador on the Situation in Mexico.

LONDON, Nov. 19.—Lord Cowdray, who possesses so many interests in Mexico, had a lengthy conference at his own request with Walter H. Page, the United States Ambassador, this afternoon.

Lord Cowdray afterward declined to reveal the precise subject under discussion, but it is generally surmised that he desired to obtain information as to how far his Mexican interests were endangered, and was wishful of emphasizing to the American Ambassador his denial of the report that he had given financial assistance to Provisional President Huerta.

POPE PRAYS FOR MEXICO.

Kneels with 200 Pilgrims from That Country.

ROME, Nov. 19.—Pope Pius to-day received a party of 200 Mexican pilgrims, who have just returned from Palestine and who were introduced by the Most Rev. José Ramon Ibarra, Archbishop of Puebla, Mexico.

After imparting the apostolic benediction, his Holiness expressed the hope that the blessing of peace would soon be given to their country.

The pilgrims were accompanied, besides Archbishop Ibarra, by the Most Rev. Leopold Ruiz, Archbishop of Michoacan, and by Bishop José Amador Velazco. There was a most impressive scene when the Pope, surrounded by the Mexican prelates, knelt with the pilgrims and prayed for the peace of Mexico.

CARS READY FOR TROOPS.

M., K. & T. Railroad Officials Preparing for a Possible Emergency.

Special to The New York Times.

JUNCTION CITY, Kan., Nov. 19.—All Missouri, Kansas, and Texas railroad agents were notified to-day to rush to Parson, Kan., all available cars suitable for use in transporting troops. The order provides for 165 cars. The company's officials denied that orders from the War Department had anything to do with this move, and said it merely was a precautionary measure, so that in case orders for sending additional troops to the border were issued the cars would be in readiness. No orders for moving the Sixth Field Artillery have been received at Fort Riley.

National Grange Backs President.

MANCHESTER, N. H., Nov. 19.—President Wilson's attitude in the Mexican situation was indorsed to-day by the National Grange, which is holding its annual meeting here. The Secretary of the organization was instructed to telegraph to the President the Grange's approval of his Mexican policy and the efforts made to prevent hostilities.

Chinese and Japanese potteries and porcelains, sculpture, tiles, plates and plaques will be sold to-day.

WON'T LIFT BAN ON BRANDT.

Glynn Against Unconditional Pardon—Ex-Valet Must Be Silent.

ALBANY, Nov. 19.—No unconditional pardon will be granted to Foulke E. Brandt, formerly a servant in the home of Mortimer L. Schiff of New York, by Gov. Glynn. Friends of Brandt, who was pardoned by Gov. Sulzer on condition that he should not publish his story or tell it from the stage, recently made overtures to the new Governor for an unconditional pardon.

"They came to the wrong place," Gov. Glynn said. "I think Brandt wants to tell his story from the stage and I shall not grant the request of his friends."

Brandt served more than five years of a thirty-year sentence after he had confessed to robbing his employer.

Opera House box office with a check for $100,000 to pay the balance on his allotment of tickets, on which he had previously deposited $53,000. Mr. Lewis said he checked over the tickets, placed them in a box, and that they were delivered to Hartman waiting outside in a taxicab.

Mr. Train asked Mr. Lewis why he accompanied Mr. Hartman in the taxicab to the Metropolitan Trust Company, and the witness replied that he was invited. Asked how it happened that he was invited to ride down to the trust company's offices with Hartman, Mr. Lewis admitted that he had gone out to the taxicab and mentioned the fact that he intended to go down to the Metropolitan Trust Company, whereupon he was invited by Mr. Hartman to go with him.

The admission was obtained from Mr. Lewis that on the way down to the trust company he had "asked in a joking way if the tickets were to be used as collateral on a loan."

"Why did it occur to you that the tickets might be used as collateral on a loan?" asked Mr. Train.

"It was an idea that just sprang up in my mind," replied the witness.

"No one told you about the loan?" queried Mr. Train.

"No one," responded Mr. Lewis.

"Did you not ask Mr. Hartman if he was going to 'hock' the tickets?"

"I did not," said the witness. "It was simply my idea."

"Didn't Mr. Hartman tell you that he was going to put the tickets in a safety deposit vault of the Metropolitan Trust Company?"

"He did not," said Mr. Lewis.

"Didn't you tell Deputy Assistant District Attorney Lockhart that Mr. Hartman made that statement to you?"

"No, I did not," replied Mr. Lewis.

Mr. Train then introduced Mr. Lockhart to the witness and asked if he recognized the Deputy Assistant District Attorney.

Mr. Lewis did recognize Mr. Lockhart, whereupon Mr. Train asked the witness if he did not remember having told Mr. Lockhart that Hartman had told him on the way down to the trust company that he was going to put the tickets in a safety vault, and that Mr. Lewis had remarked that it was a "long way from Wall Street to 1,122 Broadway."

"Positively not," said the witness.

Mr. Lewis next testified that he had given Mr. Hartman a receipt for $153,000 at the Metropolitan Trust Company.

Mr. Train asked Mr. Lewis if it was not customary for the Metropolitan Opera Company's receipts to bear the mark of a rubber stamp. He admitted that it was true.

"Then you must have carried a rubber stamp with you?"

"I may have."

"You mean to say you were provided for such an emergency?"

"I mean to say that I may have carried a rubber stamp."

Mr. Lewis admitted to Assistant District Attorney Train that he had made out two receipts for the $153,000 paid by Mr. Hartman, and that one of these was made out on the night before for "personal reference." Questioned a few minutes later Mr. Lewis said he had made out only one receipt and had stamped it on the night before the tickets were delivered to Tyson & Co. This receipt, he said, he had handed to Mr. Hartman at the Metropolitan Trust Company.

Beverly Chew, Second Vice President of the Metropolitan Trust Company, testified that the trust company never had an account with Tyson & Co. before the receipt of Mr. Hartman's letter dated Sept. 10, 1913.

"Is this the first time you have accepted theatre or opera tickets as security?" asked Mr. Train.

"This is the first offense," answered Mr. Chew.

Mr. Chew said it was customary for his company to open general and special accounts. On being questioned, Mr. Chew said that the special account of Tyson & Co. had run up to $212,000.

"Is it not a fact that had Tyson & Co. seen fit to draw on their special account they could have raised an amount sufficient to meet the loan?"

"That is true," answered Mr. Chew.

Mr. Chew testified that he did not understand the reason for the special account of Tyson & Co.

"Did you intend that this should be an open account or one against which Tyson & Co. should not draw except to pay off the loan?"

"Personally, I didn't consider the matter at all," said Mr. Chew, "until our Secretary, Mr. Hartman, told me that they had begun to draw on the account almost immediately."

Mr. Chew then stated that Mr. Hartman had told him that none of the tickets pledged by Tyson & Co. had been paid for.

An adjournment was taken a little after 5 o'clock, and the hearing will be resumed this morning at 11 o'clock.

MRS. CATT SOUNDS SUFFRAGE WARNING

Women Won't Endure Refusal to Grant the Vote Longer, She Says at Thanksgiving Rally.

LOTS OF ROOM IN KANSAS

Taggart Says That State Could Provide Support for 8,000,000 Persons More Than It Has Now.

Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, President of the International Suffrage Alliance, at a so-called Thanksgiving suffrage rally held under the auspices of the Woman Suffrage Party at Carnegie Hall last night, sounded a warning that the women of America would not endure peacefully the refusal of men voters to give them the ballot.

Senator Lawrence Y. Sherman of Illinois had spoken against militancy among the suffragists, classing it with sabotage and anarchy. In response to this Mrs. Catt said that while she did not believe in war, at the same time women of the United States would not continue longer without the right to vote.

"Twenty years ago I began to work for the enfranchisement of women," said Mrs. Catt. "They said at that time that they were afraid of the masses of women who would vote. In the years that have passed since they have been admitting into this country men who did not care about the vote, and they have thrust this crown upon them. In these twenty years they have admitted to these shores and given citizenship to more men—foreigners—than there were women of the voting age in this country when I first began to work for their enfranchisement. And they still say—to the women: 'There are too many of you.' Reason will stand no more. We are going to be a government of the people or know the reason why.

"I think so little of war that I think our civil war was a mistake. For the money it cost we could have bought all the slaves and supported the Government for twenty years, and the worst of the war was the enmity engendered by it, which still lingers.

"I do not believe in war, but I say to you, fellow-citizens, that if the women are going on making their demand and election after election the voters are going against them at the polls, I tell you we will not endure it."

Congressman Taggart of Kansas had told the audience that the high cost of living was due to the fact that persons flocked to the cities. He said that 8,000,000 persons, men and women, could be supported in his State if they could be induced to go there from the cities. Mrs. Catt said that she would be one of the first to accept a home there if women did not obtain the ballot in New York State in 1915.

Senator George E. Chamberlain of Oregon and Senator Henry F. Ashhurst of Arizona were to have spoken at the meeting, but telegrams were received from them saying they would be unable to be present. They said in their messages that the women's vote in their States had been of great value.

The meeting was one of thanksgiving for the suffrage victories won in the States in this country and abroad in the last year. Mrs. Catt spoke of the foreign countries and Dr. Anna Shaw, the National Suffrage President, told of what had been done in the United States. Miss Mary Garrett Hay, head of the Woman Suffrage Party, presided.

A collection was taken up for the campaign work. It began with an anonymous gift of $1,500 from "a woman friend." Mrs. Richard Aldrich gave $500, Mrs. James Lees Laidlaw $500, another "friend" $500, and these and other gifts brought the sum pledged to more than $7,000. Outside Carnegie Hall before the meeting began Miss Joan Wickham, Mrs. Pankhurst's Secretary, carrying an English suffragette flag which had been presented to Miss Christabel Pankhurst at one of the times when she was freed from prison, gave out notices of Mrs. Pankhurst's meeting at Carnegie Hall on Nov. 24.

withdrawn the difference between the Filipinos and the Moros, who are mutinous and have no sympathy with the Filipinos and have a racial hatred for them, will at once develop. The Moros have notified us that they will not stand Filipino government and the Filipinos say they cannot take over the islands unless they take over all of them.

"For us to leave the islands and to guarantee to the nations of the world, in exchange for their treaties of neutrality with respect to the islands, that law and order will be preserved and that there will be no civil commotion in which law and order cannot be maintained, would be an evidence of lack of sanity that I cannot think the American people would ever display. If they should it would not be a year before we would have to go back into the Islands in order to maintain the peace that we had guaranteed to the world. As one prominent Filipino expressed it to me, 'Your vessels carrying away your Government would hardly get through the passage between Maravales and Corregidor in sight of Manila, but the throat cutting would begin.'"

Mr. Taft then admitted the delicacy of his own position as a critic of the Administration which had succeeded his own.

"It is very rare," he said, "that a minister called from a party to sit in a jury can hear with judicial fairness the sermons of the man who supplants him, but in respect to the Philippines I have a different feeling than on almost any other governmental issue.

"I am out of politics. I have no desire but the success of this Administration, though I have differed with it on the tariff and have prophesied that the changes now made would disturb business. But I would rather have my prophecies proved wrong than have hard times, and I am no calamity howler or seeker in the hope that my party may climb into power through destruction of business. But I feel that I know so much more about the Philippines problem and its difficulties than any of the gentlemen in this Administration that I have a duty and a right to call their attention to some of the dangers that beset them."

The present Administration, Mr. Taft pointed out, was burdened by the criticisms of the Republican policy in the Philippines made in the last National Democratic platform, and he expressed the belief that it felt that it should do something to vindicate the stand the party had taken in the matter. Then the speaker went on to discuss the situation as he saw it. He said:

Wilson Administration's Policy.

"The present declaration of the Administration that they are looking forward to ultimate independence has been accepted by the politicians of the Philippine Islands as a great boon, although Mr. McKinley, Mr. Roosevelt, and I promised it from the first and have always promised it; but we were a little more definite in saying that we did not think it was coming for a generation, and probably not for more than that time.

"The present Administration clearly fixes no time, but their attitude heretofore has been such that the mere declaration of their intention to furnish ultimate independence is accepted by the Filipino people as a promise of early independence. Under these conditions when the Filipino people find that they are no nearer independence under Democratic administration than they were under Republican administration, they will think themselves deceived and this may lead to some agitation and some disturbance which will have to be put down with a strong hand.

"The Administration has enlarged the Filipino membership in the Commission so that it becomes a majority and legislation will now go through the Assembly under the impulse of the politicians of the islands and by arousing popular clamor in its favor they will force their legislation through the Commission, however much the intelligent Filipino members of the Commission may wish to avoid it. Some of the legislation will have to be vetoed, and it will have to be vetoed by the Secretary of War at Washington because the Governor General has not the power to veto. I am inclined to think that the veto at Washington, after it has been exercised a number of times, will be less satisfactory to the Filipino people than the obstruction to unwise legislation by the Commission in the islands in which Americans predominated.

Incapacity of Filipinos.

"One embarrassment in making the Filipino representation in the Commission controlling is that the Commission is vested with sole power over the Moro tribes and country, and also over the non-Christian tribes. In no respect have the Filipino educated classes shown their incapacity for just government as in their treatment of the Moros and non-Christian tribes. The hard experience of these peoples makes them very well aware of this, and if Filipino views of what ought to be done with them are to be allowed to prevail, trouble will instantly follow. Perhaps this danger may be avoided by the influence which Mr. Harrison and his American colleagues in the Commission can exercise over the Filipino Commissioners in matters in which the National Assembly has no voice. I earnestly hope this will prove to be the case and the hope is sustained by his promise to the Moros, in reply to their protest that he would not set a Filipino Governor over them.

Mr. Taft then declared that the only criticism which could be made against the Government of the Philippines so far was that it had given to the Filipinos too much increase in their powers, and he prophesied that although for a time there would be satisfaction among the Filipinos there would soon be a demand for the election of that Commission.

"Then," he said, "will be the agitation for the Jones bill, so-called, now pending in Congress, which I hope the Administration has had the good sense to hang up permanently in an innocuous condition of suspense.

"Upon the arrival of Mr. Harrison in Manila, and as soon as he had announced his policy, he called for the immediate resignation of the heads of six or seven of some of the most important bureau chiefs in the islands, and announced his intention of appointing Filipinos to some of these places, and Americans from the United States to others. Among these bureaus are that of customs, of public lands, of internal revenue, and of health. These are bureaus that require for their proper administration a thorough knowledge of the islands, and a technical familiarity with special statutes and bureau regulations. Upon the personal attention and skill of the head of the health bureau the physical welfare of the people of the islands directly depends, because in that part of the world the diseases to which flesh is heir press constantly for victims and increasing vigilance is the price of immunity from them. I sincerely hope that this sweeping removal of most competent officers is not the result of a tendency toward the spoils system.

"The universal testimony will bear out the statement that in the thirteen years of government under Mr. McKinley, Mr. Roosevelt, and myself, partisan considerations were given no weight in appointments or policy. Judges and all other American officials were selected indifferently from Republicans and Democrats, and it will be a serious impairment of efficiency in government if any departure from this course is taken."

Harrison's Hasty Removals.

Mr. Taft then complained of the "offishness and suspicion" which prevented Mr. Harrison from giving to those persons in this country or the Philippines who could really give him information about the islands and their needs, and went on:

"What gives me most concern is the quickness with which Mr. Harrison has acted on his removals. It indicates that he has consulted with some one before reaching the islands. He had no such familiarity with men or conditions to make these removals of his own motion and knowledge. He went to the islands with Mr. Quezon, the Philippine delegate to Congress. I am told there was a secret agent of the Philippines on the islands gathering information who made a report. It was, in my judgment, most unwise for Mr. Harrison to act on such information until he had been long enough in the islands to have confirmed his facts received from such sources.

"I speak quite within bounds when I say that Mr. Quezon, the Philippine Congressional delegate, is not a dependable or safe adviser. The egregious bounders into which he has led Mr. Jones in his attack upon Governor General Forbes, which the latter has exposed in a reply, are sufficient proof of that, and I am advised that there is other evidence of it easily available to Mr. Harrison in the islands.

"Word comes that it was given out that advice and information from Filipinos were sought by Mr. Harrison, but none from Americans. It is reported that this attitude and the sudden removals, together with rumors of reductions of salaries of American officials created a panic among the American civil servants so widespread that Mr. Harrison in the Moro country found it necessary to send a reassuring dispatch back to Manila on the subject. Of course, the community of American civil servants is comparatively small and exaggeration is a characteristic of an Oriental city and country.

"It may be that these reports are unfounded or much colored. But the wholesale removal of able and experienced heads of bureaus was certain to cause terror in the whole service and to paralyze its efficiency until the character of the new policy becomes understood. If the American civil service in the islands breaks down disaster will certainly follow.

Wilson Theories Quoted.

"In spite of these disturbing reports from the Philippines, I am still optimistic and still hopeful that the structure of government that has been erected there with so much effort and success will not be seriously or permanently injured under President Wilson. It was, perhaps, to be expected that the radically unsound views of Mr. Bryan would have some influence at first and that the mistaken declarations of previous Democratic platforms would create some embarrassment. But even if mistakes are made, hard experience will teach some salutary lessons.

"When by whatever hard knocks his representatives shall learn the truth as to conditions in the islands, as they will, and communicate it to President Wilson, I have confidence that he will direct them to retrace any steps which may have led them away from the course marked out a decade ago by McKinley and Root and successfully followed down to March 4, 1913. My confidence is based on the language used by President Wilson in his work on Constitutional Government in respect to our duty in the Philippines where he says:

"'Self-government is not a mere form of institutions, to be had when desired, if only proper pains be taken. It is a form of character. It follows upon the long discipline which gives a people self-possession, self-mastery, the habit of order and peace and common counsel, and a reverence for law which will not fail when they themselves become the makers of law; the steadiness of self-control of political maturity. And these things cannot be had without long discipline.

"'The distinction is of vital concern to us in respect of practical choices of policy which we must make, and make very soon. We have dependencies to deal with and must deal with them in the true spirit of our own institutions. We can give the Filipinos constitutional government, a government which they may count upon to be just, a government based upon some clear and equitable understanding, intended for their good and not for our aggrandizement; but we must ourselves for the present supply that government. It would, it is little, be an unprecedented operation, reversing the process of Runnymede and America has before this shown the world enlightened processes of politics that were without precedent. But we cannot give them self-government.

"'Self-government is not a thing that can be given to any people, because it is a form of character and not a form of constitution. No people can be 'given' the self-control of maturity. Only a long apprenticeship of obedience can secure them the precious possession, a thing no more to be bought than given. They cannot be presented with the character of a community, but it may confidently be hoped that they will become a community under the wholesome and salutary influences of just laws and a sympathetic administration; that they will after a while understand and master themselves, if in the meantime they are understood and served in good conscience by those set over them in authority.

"'We of all people in the world should know these fundamental things and should act upon them, if only to illustrate the mastery in politics which belongs to us of hereditary right. To ignore them would be not only to fail and fail miserably, but to fall ridiculously and belie ourselves. Having ourselves gained self-government by a definite process which can have no substitute, let us put the peoples dependent upon us in the right way to gain it also.'" M'GUIRE OPENS NEW LEAD FOR WHITMAN

His Demeanor Angers Inquisitor, but He Makes Some Asphalt Revelations.

TRACING THAT $2,500 GIFT

Witness, Daring Perjury Indictment, "Corrects" Testimony—Ex-Gov. Dix Is Drawn Into the Case.

George H. McGuire of Syracuse went on the stand yesterday afternoon at the resumption of the John Doe inquiry into the charges of graft in State contracts. He withstood a most searching examination at the hands of District Attorney Charles S. Whitman. McGuire, the man who went to pieces on the witness stand a week ago when he was forced to retract previous testimony, baffled his inquisitor. Mr. Whitman was fired with anger at McGuire. He obtained many admissions from McGuire, but the witness persisted to the end that everything he knew about graft on the State highways and on the barge canal was hearsay.

McGuire was a genuine surprise. Persons who have listened to witnesses in many criminal cases said that they had never seen a man who under oath so persistently shielded his friends. They predicted that McGuire would not be able to endure another three-hour ordeal on the witness stand. He will get another chance to-morrow, when he again will be called upon to testify. If he does not then yield it is believed that Mr. Whitman will rush his case before the Grand Jury and seek his indictment on at least three counts.

McGuire read into the court record yesterday a twenty-page statement correcting the testimony he gave on his first appearance before Chief Magistrate McAdoo. Even in this statement he contradicted himself time and time again. McGuire maintained that he knew nothing of "sandbagging" of contractors of his own knowledge. The only man he did not spare was William Sulzer.

Witness Puzzles Magistrate.

The examination grew so warm on one occasion that Chief Magistrate McAdoo made this observation:

"The witness is certainly a hesitating witness. I don't know whether his hesitancy is due to slow mental processes or not."

One of the admissions made by McGuire was that he and his brother, James K. McGuire, former Mayor of Syracuse, and now the Albany representative of the Barber Asphalt Paving Company, got a commission on all sales of the company's products made to the State and to contractors on State work. This arrangement, he asserted, was made upon the inauguration of Sulzer as Governor. McGuire admitted that he had talked with Sulzer while he was Governor, with State Highway Commissioner Carlisle, and with other officers of the State Highway Department, and that he had urged them to favor the Barber Asphalt Paving Company's product. This company, he admitted, after he had made his gift of $2,500, which, he asserted, was for Sulzer, helped to reimburse him to the extent of $750. McGuire involved himself in embarrassing contradictions in answering questions about his brother and the Barber company, and he failed to account for all the money received from the Barber company.

As the result of his contradiction James S. Johnson, New York State sales agent for the Barber Asphalt Pardy Company will be summoned before Mr. Whitman to-day. It was Johnson, according to McGuire, who helped to reimburse him after he had given the $2,500 to John A. Hennessy.

In the course of his testimony the witness said that James K. McGuire, his brother, sailed for South America three days ago. Mr. Whitman had hoped to have a word with James K. McGuire about his relations with the so-called asphalt trust.

Another admission which Mr. Whitman got from McGuire was that it was talk about Albany that Norman E. Mack, Everett Fowler, G. Gordon Reed, once head of the Highway Department, and Gov. John A. Dix conferred in the Dix chambers in the Executive Mansion in 1911, and that Fowler was designated at this conference as one of the up-State collectors of campaign funds. As the result of this testimony Mr. Whitman expects to call ex-Gov. Dix as a witness in the John Doe proceedings.

Once, when Mr. Whitman shook his finger in McGuire's face and told the Chief Magistrate that McGuire purposely was concealing important facts, the witness nearly cried. He appeared to be on the verge of breaking down, but it was only for a moment, and then he regained his composure.

"If I knew about these things, I'd tell you," said McGuire. "I'd tell you, Mr. Whitman, if I knew. You're going to find out anyway. There would be no object in my not telling."

"Oh, yes," retorted Mr. Whitman, "never mind what I am going to find out. Was there any object in your not telling me the truth last week? Why didn't you tell the truth then?"

"I had no advice of counsel then," begged McGuire.

"Did you need advice to tell the truth?" shouted the District Attorney.

"I was demoralized then, Mr. Whitman, I was sick," replied McGuire, not even raising his voice. "But now I'm telling the truth."

"As a matter of fact, you were protecting some one, weren't you?" continued Mr. Whitman.

"No, Sir, Mr. Whitman," said McGuire. "I have no one to protect."

Mr. Whitman could not get beyond McGuire's inevitable "I can't recall who told me." McGuire changed his testimony four times in five minutes, but he never for a moment lost his temper. He was the calmest person in the courtroom.

It was noted when McGuire walked into the courtroom at 2:30 P. M. with his lawyer, Henry A. Wise, that a change had come over him. According to Mr. Wise last week, McGuire was a "mental and physical wreck." He beamed upon every one yesterday.

It was 3 o'clock when Chief Magistrate McAdoo and Mr. Whitman arrived. McGuire took the witness chair without being called. Mr. Whitman started right in on a new tack. It had been expected that he immediately would question the witness about the famous "M" telegram and the list of contractors which McGuire, at the last hearing, had denied giving to John A. Hennessy. When Mr. Whitman asked the witness whether he had been in Cooperstown on July 5, 1913, McGuire drew from his inside coat pocket a typewritten statement.

"Your Honor," he said, addressing the court, "I want to correct my former—"

Mr. Whitman objected, and made it plain that he didn't want to take up time by listening to corrections just then. McGuire, after receiving instructions from the court to answer the question, returned the document to his pocket.

Regarding the Cooperstown visit, it was inferred from the District Attorney's questions that McGuire had a conference there in July with John A. Hennessy and ex-Judge J. Linn Arnold, editor of the Knickerbocker-Press. But McGuire denied that any conference had been held.

The examination turned to ex-Gov. Sulzer and the asphalt interests. McGuire persisted, vigorously at first, that he didn't think he had ever talked with Sulzer about the Warner-Quinlan Asphalt Company, a competitor of the Barber Asphalt Paving Company, but, after much hesitation, acknowledged that such a conversation had been held. The admission was made when Mr. Whitman asked him whether he was willing to swear that he had never had such a conversation. The witness obviously was in fear of the word "swear."

Little by little McGuire's relations with the Barber Asphalt Paving Company came out. He was a holder of 100 shares of the Barber Asphalt Paving Company's stock, he said. He owned these shares, he admitted, when he talked to Sulzer about "specifications."

"Your brother owns a large amount of stock in the Barber Asphalt Company, doesn't he?" Mr. Whitman asked.

"I don't know," replied the witness.

"I never asked him."

"Didn't you tell some one exactly how much your brother owns?"

"I don't recollect," came the reply, a reply which was probably written down three hundred times in the course of the examination.

Ultimately McGuire told this story about his relations with the Barber Asphalt Paving Company:

"There was a controversy in Albany as to the enforcement of certain specifications which described certain materials to be used on roads. I had heard that these specifications were not enforced. I may have heard this from engineers, or contractors, or from the sales agent of the Barber Asphalt Paving Company. His name is James S. Johnson. I don't remember telling Gov. Sulzer what I heard, but I'll concede that I did tell him. There were two sets of specifications for asphalt. One described 'natural solid asphalt' and the other described 'residual asphalt.'

"Yes, I admit that I knew that the Warner-Quinlan Company made one kind and the Barber Asphalt Company the other. There were companies, however, which handled the same kind of product as the Barber Company. No, I don't believe I told the Governor that the Barber Asphalt Company was the only company which could make the product defined in the approved specifications. I don't believe I did, for it wasn't true. I believe there is a Cuban company which makes the same product."

"Did this Cuban company bid on any New York State work?" interrupted Mr. Whitman.

McGuire Cannot "Recall."

"I don't recall. You see so many things have happened—"

"Yes, and some more are likely to happen," shouted Mr. Whitman.

Mr. Wise jumped to his feet and Mr. Whitman turned on Mr. Wise. He told him flatly that he had no legal standing in the proceedings. Mr. Wise's request that the court should defend the witness was lost in the noise. Magistrate McAdoo sustained Mr. Whitman and told Mr. Wise that he must not interrupt.

Then McGuire denied that he had ever told Gov. Sulzer that if the Barber Asphalt Paving Company's products were demanded for all of the State work there would be all the money for Sulzer that he wanted. Following this the admissions that he and his brother shared in the profits of all sales by the Barber company was made.

According to McGuire the Barber Asphalt Paving Company, while Sulzer was Governor, sold 275,000 gallons of oil and asphalt to the repair division of the Department of Highways at a cost of 11 to 12 cents a gallon. The company also sold approximately 90,000 gallons of oil and asphalt during this time, he said, to contractors on State work. He and his brother, he said, got a commission of one-half to one cent a gallon on all this material.

"And you went to the Governor to explain the situation about specifications because you and your brother were getting a commission on everything you sold, isn't that true?" asked Mr. Whitman.

"No, that isn't true," said the witness after some delay.

Pressed further, McGuire pleaded that he was not an expert and could, therefore, not go into details about matters of specification. He admitted finally what he had just denied—that he wanted his commission, and "perhaps" told the Governor that the Barber products conformed to the specifications.

"Isn't it a fact that you gave Sulzer $500 in the hotel bathroom at Syracuse, $2,500 through Mr. Hennessy and another $500 for his Direct Primaries bill because you had got exclusive control in the State for the Barber Company?" asked Mr. Whitman.

"No, Sir. I gave the money out of sympathy for the Governor," persisted McGuire.

"I admit that I thought it might help me," he admitted a few seconds later.

McGuire's Testimony Tangled.

McGuire became tangled in his testimony about his commissions from the Barber Asphalt Paving Company. At first he said that he had received $1,300 or $1,400 in commissions and that he had deposited this in the joint account of himself and his brother. There was perhaps $8,000 or $10,000 in this joint account, he said. When he got into deep water he said his brother deposited most of the money. This was the brother, James K. McGuire, who had just sailed for South America on business relating to asphalt. Later he said that he received only $750 from the Barber company and that this money was paid by check through Johnson. Still later he said that he was not sure that this money from Johnson came from the Barber company. Perhaps the company still owed him money, he volunteered. The $750, he recollected, was paid by Johnson to help reimburse him for his gift of $2,500 to Sulzer. He could not tell, he said, whether this $750 was charged against his commission or not. The company, he said, had not settled with him yet, nor with his brother.

"If the $750 was a commission money, what did you do to earn it besides talk to Gov. Sulzer?" asked Mr. Whitman.

Says He Urged Carlisle.

The witness hemmed and hawed and finally blurted out that he had also seen Commissioner Carlisle and other persons in the Highway Department and that he had asked them to buy the Barber company's product. Incidentally he dropped the information that he was also getting commissions from the United States Asphalt Refining Company for the sale of oil to the State.

"Didn't the Governor send for you and tell you that you and your brother were making a lot of money out of contracts and that the Barber Asphalt Company ought to help him out?" asked Mr. Whitman.

"I gave Sulzer $2,500, but nothing was said by the Governor about contracts," replied McGuire after more hesitation.

From the United States Asphalt Refining Company, McGuire said, he received a check for $600 for the sale of 250,000 gallons of oil. This was for him and his brother, he said, but he failed to show how he could get only $600 when his commission was one cent a gallon.

"I'd likes to explain why my brother went to South America," the witness started to explain when there was a lull in the proceedings.

"I don't care why he went," retorted the District Attorney. "I'm more interested in knowing when he is coming back."

The Alleged Dix Conference.

It was not until he had been questioned for two hours that Mr. Whitman gave McGuire another chance to draw from his pocekt his typewritten statement of "corrections." This statement read very much like a law book. McGuire admitted that his lawyer had helped him prepare it. Mr. Whitman interrupted the witness many times while McGuire was reading it to the stenographer. During one breathing spell the matter of the alleged conference in Dix's office was brought up. This is the testimony on that point:

Q.—In your conference with Hennessy at the Hotel Utica in Utica, did you tell him about a meeting at the Executive Mansion? A.—I told him I had heard of such a meeting.

Q.—Where did you hear it? A.—It was talked around Albany.

Q.—What did you tell Hennessy? A.—About a meeting of Reel and Mack, where contributions were discussed.

Q.—Who told you about the meeting? A.—It was just a rumor. Probably fifty others had heard the rumor.

Q.—Give me the name of one of the fifty. A.—I can't recall any name.

Q.—Didn't you tell Henessy that Everett Fowler was appointed collector for the Western part of the State? A.—I told him that I had heard that this had been discussed at a conference.

Q.—What kind of a conference was this? A.—One in which campaign contributions were discussed. I told Hennessy that I had heard of a conference of Reel, Mack, and Fowler.

Q.—So Fowler was there? A.—I heard it.

Q.—You heard that there was a meeting of Fowler, Mack, Reel, and Dix, didn't you? A.—Yes.

Q.—What happened at that meeting? A.—I heard that Fowler was to raise contributions.

Q.—As a matter of fact, William H. Kelley told you about that conference, didn't he? A.—Who? Kelley? No, not Kelley, I didn't know him well enough for that.

Q.—Who did tell? A.—I can't recall.

Q.—If you take two days more of rest, don't you think you can recollect? A.—I don't know.

Q.—Was it a rumor among contractors at Albany that Fowler was designated as collecter? A.—Yes.

Q.—Wasn't it common talk among contractors? A.—Yes.

Q.—And they were friends of yours? A.—Yes.

Q.—And they told you about this conference? A.—I can't say that, Mr. Whitman.

Q.—Do you mean to tell his Honor that you can't remember the name of a single contractor who told you this? A.—I have talked to so many contractors that I can't recall.

By Magistrate McAdoo:

Q.—Have you tried to recall? A.—I have tried it, but I don't want to be forced into telling things I can't recall.

In making his "corrections" McGuire admitted that John A. Hennessy had written a list of names of contractors just as they were given by McGuire at the conference at the Hotel Utica.

"I gave him the names of contractors whom I had heard had contributed," read McGuire, "and also such as I thought had contributed. I told him that most of the contractors had been asked and that I had heard that a good many had contributed."

"You told him that you had heard that the Barber Asphalt Company had contributed $5,000?" asked Mr. Whitman. "Now, who told you?"

"I don't know. I have no recollection whatever."

McGuire said that he had never asked Fowler for a contribution, but he couldn't recall whether Fowler ever had asked him for a contribution. Kelley had asked him, he said, but only for local campaigns in Syracuse.

"You don't remember a single man who told you anything?" asked the District Attorney, wrathfully.

"I can't honestly tell you a single name," answered McGuire.

"Never mind the 'honestly,'" retorted the District Attorney.

One of the "corrections" ostensibly was a minor one, but Mr. Whitman seized upon it and drove it home. McGuire, it seems, had testified last week that he had talked to any one who had said that he had paid Kelley any money. In making his corrections he said that he wished to withdraw that statement and substitute that he had "no recollection of talking to any one who had paid Kelley money."

"You changed that, didn't you," shouted the District Attorney, "because you were afraid of having it proved against you that you did talk to certain persons who had paid Kelley money? You were afraid I might produce these persons, weren't you?"

The witness explained at length, but did not succeed in answering the question, and Mr. Whitman did not press it.

The hearing will be resumed at 2:30 o'clock to-morrow, and it is expected that James S. Johnson, the Barber Asphalt Paving Company's sales agent, will be on hand to testify. Mr. Whitman, it is expected, will also have a transcript of the three bank accounts which the McGuires maintained in the National Bank of Syracuse. One of these is the account of McGuire & Co., Incorporated. Another is the joint account of George H. McGuire and James K. McGuire, and the third is a personal account of George H. McGuire.

Information has reached Mr. Whitman that less than a month before McGuire made his gift of $2,500 the State Highway Department, then dominated by Sulzer, advertised and let twenty contracts for the repairing and construction of highways amounting to $470,037.80. Mr. Whitman, it is expected, will show by records of the Department of Efficiency and Economy that between Aug. 4 and Oct. 7, 1913, the Barber Asphalt Paving Company furnished 36 per cent. of all materials and 40 per cent. of all asphalt used in the repairs and maintenance of State highways. It is expected that he will show how this material was bought by the Highway Department.

OSBORNE TAKES UP TASK.

Will Make for Gov. Glynn State-Wide Search for Graft.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Nov. 19.—James W. Osborne, former Assistant District Attorney of New York County; after a conference this afternon with Gov. Glynn, said that he would undertake a State-wide investigation of the charges of graft. He convinced Gov. Glynn that he would need $15,000 for the purposes of the investigation.

Osborne accepted an appointment as Commissioner under the Moreland act and immediately named Arthur C. Warner as his assistant. Warner has been associated with Osborne in several investigations.

As soon as Osborne accepted the appointment many reports made by John A. Hennessy were turned over to him. He and Warner then began preparing for their investigation.

Broad authority has been given to Osborne. Gov. Glynn instructed Osborne to aid District Attorney Whitman in his John Doe inquiry as much as possible. Osborne has not yet been made a Deputy Attorney General.

Effort probably will be made soon to find several graft inquiry reports which disappeared about the time of the departure of Sulzer. If Osborne should trace any of this material, and should need it, he could demand by subpoena that it be produced.

Whether Sulzer or John A. Hennessy will be called at any time to testify regarding any feature of the inquiry has not been determined. After Jan. 1 Sulzer can refuse to testify on the ground that he is a member of the Legislature.

The testimony regarding asphalt contracts given by George H. McGuire in the John Doe proceedings to-day threw new light on charges recently made against Highway Commissioner John N. Carlisle.

Carlisle was accused by representatives of independent asphalt manufacturers of attempting to give the State asphalt business to the Barber Company. This was to be accomplished, it was alleged, by having specifications for asphalt adopted which only the Barber Company could fulfill.

An attorney for the independents made this charge before Gov. Glynn, and was told to put the allegations in writing. This has not been done.

A rumor current at the time the charges first were made was that Carlisle's dismissal was sought by certain politicians. He is a Sulzer appointee. The opponents of Sulzer and his followers hope to see established a connecting link between McGuire, Sulzer and Carlisle in the asphalt specifications.

EX-GOV. DIX MAKES DENIAL.

Calls Story of Fowler Conference "Absolutely False."

ALBANY, Nov. 19.—Emphatic denial that he ever took part in a conference at which Everett P. Fowler was appointed collector of Democratic campaign funds was made to-night by ex-Gov. John A. Dix.

"I never heard of such a meeting until I read about it recently in the newspapers," he said. "Further than that, I don't believe that Fowler ever was in the Executive Mansion during my incumbency.

"At no time have I been interested in collecting campaign funds for my candidacy or that of any other candidate for Governor. When I made my race I paid my own expenses, and what other candidates for Governor did I do not know. The story is absolutely false."

The appointment of Mr. Osborne then was referred to, and Mr. Dix said:

"Some very interesting features should develop in Mr. Osborne's investigation. He has a good foundation to work on, for he began the prison investigations for me. He will not need to stop when he goes over the ground covered by Hennessy. There is much more to be done."

"Will you lend your assistance?" he was asked.

"In every way I can," ex-Gov. Dix replied.

BAR RHODES MEN BECAUSE TOO ABLE Foreign Freshmen at Oxford Are Post-Graduates, While Home Rivals Are Boys.

ONE DECISION CRITICISED

Putting of Age Limit on Those Who Enter for Oxford University Sports Regarded as Unfair.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, Nov. 19.—The decisions of the Oxford University Athletic Club officials in reference to the Rhodes scholars have aroused widespread discussion.

In some quarters they are regarded as showing that the British have been taught another lesson on the necessity of specializing, and in others it is felt that the decisions require defending.

The committee's resolutions included a clause to the effect that residence at any time in another university or similar institution should disqualify an undergraduate from competing in the freshmen's sports. This is a bar to Rhodes scholars at junior competitions.

It has been patent for some time that English public school recruits are placed at a disadvantage in freshmen's sports owing to the competition of the post-graduates from America and the over-seas dominions. The majority of these are Rhodes scholars, who, by the laws governing the Rhodes request, must needs show athletic as well as mental ability. It has thus frequently happened that American and colonial champions have become students of Oxford University.

An authority on the subject, writing in The Pall Mall Gazette, says:

"Matters were brought to a head this year by the victory of the 'foreigners' at the freshmen's meeting, when an admittedly poor lot of English schools recruits were pitted against a powerful lot of Rhodes scholars, including many champions."

Not much fault is found with this decision, the Rhodes scholars themselves admitting its justice, but the second clause of the committee's resolutions, placing the age limit at 24 on competitors in university sports, is regarded as distinctly drastic in every sense.

The same writer says this latter move is palpably unfair to the Rhodes scholars and other "foreign" athletes. It is apparently a travesty on the old-time axiom, "Youth will be served." He adds that by common consent the presence of the "foreigners" at Oxford has raised the standard in sports.

Another writer on the subject says it is quite erroneous to suppose that the Rhodesites have been clearing the board in inter-'varsity sports.

Reviewing past records, this writer points out that, on the nine occasions when Oxford has won the inter-'varsity sports since the first Rhodes scholar appeared, the dark blues won five times without the assistance of the Rhodesites, and of the ninety events the Rhodesites claim only sixteen wins. But he doubts if the Englishmen will be able to hold their own in future. He says, judging from the returns of the Oxford Freshmen's sports, the Oxford team next March will be mainly composed of Rhodes men. He adds:

"The Rhodesites are what may be called specialists. They excel in field events, and very seldom at other forms of sport, whereas Englishmen in most cases only indulge in athletics as a side-line."

G. C. Vassall, ex-President of the Oxford University Athletic Club and a member of the committee, says the object of the decisions is to encourage the average public school boy to devote himself more closely to athletics. The clause dealing with university sports does not, he adds, apply to inter-'varsity sports, but only to Oxford sports.

CUBAN AMNESTY BILL AGAIN.

Amended to Include Carrera and May Pass Despite Protests.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

HAVANA, Nov. 19.—The joint committee of the Senate and House has approved the amnesty bill to which the United States Government objected so strongly last April, when the Liberals attempted, under the cloak of amnestying the negro rebels, to free the Liberal employes who were guilty of delinquencies during the Gomez régime.

The Joint Committee amended the bill to include Rafael Carrera, former Secretary of Public Works, who became a fugitive from justice after being held in $10,000 bail on the charge of malversation of public funds.

Senator Bustamente, a Liberal himself, denounced the bill as infamous in the Senate to-day, and appealed to his hearers, regardless of party, to defeat it; but there is a strong probability that the measure will pass, as the Liberals are in the majority, owing to the recent disaffection of the Asbertistas, who were the Administration's allies.

SUIT OVER $2,000,000 DEAL.

English Court Refuses to Interfere In Quarrel Between New Yorkers.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, Nov. 19.—Dr. S. O. Golden of New York asked the Chancery Court to-day to order his brother-in-law, F. Tanini Tagliania, a stock and bond dealer of New York and London, to render a financial statement of transactions relating to $2,000,000 worth of bonds in the National Bituminous Company. Dr. Golden claimed that he was entitled to half the profits on the sale of these bonds under two agreements witnessed by Julian B. Shope, a New York lawyer.

There was much contradiction in the evidence regarding the genuineness of these documents. Tagliania said one of the alleged agreements had been altered from a document left with Dr. Golden for the purpose of enabling the latter to raise money, while the second agreement was a blank document containing his (Tagliania's) signature, given to Golden, to be used if necessary during Tagliania's absence from America.

Golden's counsel described these charges as untenable, and said that if they were persisted in they would have to be met at a trial.

The court said it was not satisfied that either of the parties was more credible than the other. If what Tagliania said was true, there was nothing to fight about. The court therefore refused to interfere.

BULGAR CHAMPION WORSTED

Officer Who Tried to Fight Loti Is Wounded by M. Breittmayer.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

PARIS, Nov. 19.—Lieut. Torkof, who came to Paris to challenge Pierre Loti, the French author, on account of the latter's articles condemning the alleged atrocities by Bulgarians, to-day crossed swords with Georges Breittmayer, the well-known writer and fencer, and sustained two wounds. M. Breittmayer had also been responsible for newspaper articles reflecting on the behavior of the Bulgarian troops.

The duel was fought at Montmorency, near Paris. The mysterious challenger proved to be a short, thick-set man with a swarthy face and fierce, bristling mustache. From the first M. Breittmayer had a great advantage in skill and reach.

At the end of the third bout the Lieutenant suffered a wound in the right wrist. He insisted on continuing, but he had to retire at the end of the sixth bout owing to a more serious wound in the chest.

The opponents shook hands after the duel and exchanged compliments, Lieut. Torkof crying, "Vive la France!"

TOO PIOUS FOR PRINCESS.

Swedish Court's Slowness the Cause of Princess Maria's Divorce.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, Thursday, Nov. 20.—A telegram from Christiania to The Daily Mail, says:

"The Czar has in principle granted the demand of Princess Maria Pavlovna for a divorce from her husband, Prince William of Sweden. Negotiations for a final settlement are progressing amicably between Stockholm and St. Petersburg. There will be no financial difficulties for the Princess's fortune is placed in Russia.

"On her wedding day the Czar presented to her a beautiful palace in Stockholm. This will fall to her only child, Prince Lennart, aged four.

"Princess Maria's friends in Paris, where she now is, state that the real cause of the divorce is that the Princess finds life at the Swedish Court, with its piety, strict ceremonial, and abstinence from all amusements, too triste for her vivacious temperament."

Chinese Continue Panama Boycott.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PANAMA, Nov. 19.—Chinese stores in the republic continue closed, the shopkeepers explaining that they are taking stock; but the real reason is that they wish to give Panama a foretaste of the privations that are likely to ensue if the Government enforces the new registration act against the Chinese and insists on the payment of a $250 head tax. They have a monopoly of gardening, provisions and laundries. Prices are already soaring.

ROYALTIES QUARREL OVER BIG FORTUNE

King of Bavaria and His Brother Leopold in Dispute Regarding Estates Worth $7,500,000.

MONEY BEQUEATHED IN 1769

Income Was to Go to the Second Son of Each Elector of Bavaria—King Says His Son Should Have It.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

BERLIN, Nov. 19.—The new King of Bavaria is engaged in a serious quarrel with his younger brother, Field Marshal Prince Leopold, according to the Vossische Zeitung, over the right to the revenue from an endowment left in the eighteenth century.

The annual income from this donation is estimated at about $150,000. The estates which yield this sum were bequeathed by Duke Clement of Bavaria in 1769, with the condition that the income from them should go for life to the second son of each Elector who succeeded to the Electorate of Bavaria, which only became a kingdom in 1806. The object was to compensate the younger son for the loss of his succession to the throne.

The last member of the royal family who could prove his title to the endowment was the insane King Otto, now deposed, who ceased to draw the income as soon as he succeeded his brother to the throne in 1886. Since then nobody has drawn the income.

Now, however, King Louis claims the revenue for his second son, Prince Charles, arguing that under the terms of the will Charles is the only existing son of a reigning monarch. Leopold, however, claims that the money was left to compensate whichever of two sons of each generation has not ascended the throne. As his brother has succeeded, he argues that he is entitled to the money.

The capital value of the estates is about $7,500,000.

SAXON PENNIES SOLD.

High Prices at the Carlyon-Britton Auction—One Brings $250.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, Nov. 19.—Two silver pennies of Burgred of Mercia, A. D. 853-874, brought $355 to-day in the sale at Sotheby's of the Carlyon-Britton collection of coins. One of them, from the Evans collection, is an extremely rare type.

A scarce penny of an uncertain King of East Anglia, in the time of Saint Eadmund, was bought by Quaritch for $250. This curious piece, 21.2 grains, was apparently struck contemporaneously with the large memorial coinage of the martyred King Eadmund.

Parsons gave $215 for a penny of Ecgbeorht of Wessex, A. D. 802-828, weight 21.7 grains. It is in fine condition, is extremely rare, and came from the Rashleigh collection. This coin was found near St. Austell.

Colnaghi obtained for $485 two pennies of Eadmond of Wessex, A. D. 940, both well preserved and rare types.

The total to-day was $4,900. The sale will be continued to-morrow.

TABLET ON WRONG HOUSE.

Memorial to Franklin in London Not Where He Lodged.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, Nov. 19.—A curious mistake has been discovered in connection with the tablet which the Royal Society of Arts set up at 7 Craven Street in 1875 to commemorate the residence of Benjamin Franklin in London.

It was known that Franklin, during his visits to London between 1757 and 1775, always stayed at the house of Mrs. Margaret Stevenson, 7 Craven Street. Recently, however, Sir G. Laurence Gomme, Clerk of the London County Council, found that Mrs. Stevenson was given in the rate books of that period as the tenant of another house in the same street.

The street has since been renumbered on two occasions, and No. 7 has now become No. 36. Therefore the true house in which Franklin lodged is No. 36, on the other side of the street.

"Monday last is a date of profound importance in the history of navigation and the intercourse between nations."

STORM JIM LARKIN'S MEETING IN LONDON

Students Make an Organized Attempt to Upset It—Many Persons Hurt.

BURN FIREWORKS IN HALL

Agitator from Dublin Able to Proceed with His Speech After Partial Restoration of Order.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 19.—"Jim" Larkin got a hostile reception from a body of students on the occasion of his first appearance in London this evening. He addressed a huge audience in the Albert Hall.

Some hundreds of students from South Kensington colleges marched on the generating station that supplies the hall with electric light with the intention of plunging the building into darkness, but the police had been forewarned and were able to repel the attack.

The students then proceeded to the Albert Hall, breaking street lamps and windows as they went. The police were unable to defend every door of the hall, and some of the students forced their way in and attempted to reach the platform.

Fierce fighting followed, the stewards vigorously defending the position. There was the utmost confusion, sticks flying in the air, sounds of breaking glass being heard, while squibs were thrown into the struggling mass.

Finally the stewards by weight of numbers got the upper hand and pressed back the invaders into the street, where scrimmages between the police and other students had been going on for some time.

LONDON, Nov. 19. — When "Jim" Larkin, head of the Transport Workers' Union of Dublin, or "King Larkin," as he is now dubbed by his adherents here, was liberated a week ago from Mountjoy Prison, Dublin, where he was serving a seven months' term for sedition, he announced that he was going to England "to raise the fiery cross," and he predicted a general strike throughout Great Britain. There was much interest, therefore, in what he might say to-night.

Many persons were injured in free fights before the meeting could proceed. Fireworks were let off amid scenes of pandemonium, and for a time there was danger of a panic. The organist continued playingment in connection with the Dublin strike. The leader of the transport workers showed himself to be master of a rough, discursive style of eloquence.

DEATHS FROM NEW BACILLUS

Cause of Mysterious Mortality in a French Town Is Discovered.

NANTES, Nov. 19.—The recent poisoning of fifty of the guests at a wedding at Cholet, a town in the Department of Maine-et-Loire, was due to a bacillus heretofore unknown to science, which Dr. Rappin, Director of the Pasteur Institute at Nantes, announces that he has succeeded in isolating.

As a result of the poisoning eight persons died, and later other deaths from a mysterious cause occurred in various parts of the town among persons who had not attended the wedding.

The new bacillus varies from one-thousandth to five-thousandths of a millimeter in length and is of a peculiar color. It has been named the "Bacillus Hypertoxicus."

Dr. Rappin is continuing his investigation into the nature of the bacillus.

B

But—

The hardest thing we have to do is to induce business men to try the Library Bureau way. They read our advertisements—we know that. They listen to what we say—we know that, too. They admit—to themselves, if not to us—that "L. B." methods would help them.

But—

Consider, for example, this matter of taking stock. As usually done it is as slow as molasses in January. The "L. B." method is easy, quick, exact.

You use cards. As many clerks as you like can work—without interfering with one another—without noise or confusion. The "shut-down" period is greatly reduced. In fact, in many cases there is no shut-down at all.

"Skips" are guarded against, and extension of prices is easily figured.

Raising the Total for the Campaign to $2,663,011—Some Pledged Conditionally.

APPEAL FOR $1,000 GIFTS

Committee Says Those Who Have Given Largely Expected Others to Help More.

There was an appreciable increase of joy yesterday at the Y. M.-Y. W. C. A. headquarters, at 25 Broad Street, when the leaders of the campaign to raise $4,000,000 by Nov. 24 announced contributions totaling $72,935, after the slump Tuesday, when only $33,650 was obtained. Yesterday's collections bring the grand total to date to $2,663,011, and the workers have redoubled their efforts to raise the $1,336,900 necessary to complete the fund in the required time, as more than $1,000,000 of the amount subscribed thus far has been given on this understanding.

Executive Chairman George W. Perkins announced yesterday that $100,000 must be subscribed before to-day's luncheon in order to enable him to collect two subscriptions of $25,000 each. A strong impetus toward getting this amount was given yesterday when George Grant Mason of 10 Wall Street gave $10,000 to the fund. He made his contribution through John Sloane, Captain of Team 11 of the Men's Committee.

It is understood that Mr. Rosenwald, who has made numerous other contributions for buildings erected for colored men and women, stands ready to give $25,000 toward a building for colored people interested in Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A. work in any city whose citizens will contribute $75,000, making the total building fund $100,000.

The Executive Committee, in a statement yesterday, said:

It is of the utmost importance that the citizens of New York should understand the present status of the work in connection with raising the four-million-dollar fund.

The Executive Committee and its friends secured as many large contributions as they possibly could to announce the opening day. Three of these were for $25,000 each, three for $50,000, four for between $200,000 and $250,000, one for $300,000, and one for $350,000, resulting in an aggregate of nearly $2,000,000. Part of this money is conditional upon our securing the total sum of $4,000,000.

Since the campaign opened over 4,000 subscriptions of less than $500 have been received. The large subscriptions with which the campaign opened show the willingness of men and women of wealth to help this worthy cause. The large number of small subscriptions already received show the strong desire among people of moderate means to secure for the use of young men and young women of this city the number of buildings which it is proposed to erect.

What is needed right now to substantially further the campaign is subscriptions in $500, $1,000, $2,500, and $5,000 amounts. There are a great many people in this city who would make contributions of this size if they could be found and made to understand the importance of this undertaking, but in a city of this size, scattered over so much territory, it is extremely difficult to locate many of these people, and this appeal is made through the press to such people to ask if, without waiting to be solicited, they will not send to H. P. Davison, Treasurer, care of J. P. Morgan & Co., 23 Wall Street, their pledges by letter for such amounts as they feel they can contribute.

If such people will respond to this appeal it will help the Executive Committee materially in its efforts to secure other large contributions as the campaign draws to a close, as the feeling at the present moment among some people who are able to make large contributions is that people amply able to give $1,000 to $10,000 are not responding as generously as are the people of large wealth and those of moderate means.

Remember, the actual money will not be called for at once. The subscriptions are payable in four semi-annual installments covering the years 1914-1915, and the first installment being due Feb. 15, 1914, the second six months thereafter, and so on. A prompt and generous response to this appeal will materially help the campaign.

The campaign for which this appeal is made has been scheduled to close on Nov. 24.

SEEKS NEW RUSSIAN TREATY

President Has Not Abandoned the Idea, Says Dr. Wise.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19.—After a conference with President Wilson to-day Dr. Stephen S. Wise of New York issued a statement saying that the President and Secretary Bryan had not abandoned the idea of pressing a new commercial treaty with Russia that would recognize the passports of American citizens "without distinction of religion or race."

"The President is in a far better position to-day than he was six months ago to negotiate through the State Department and Secretary Bryan the commercial treaty with Russia," says the statement in part. "The President has become in an extraordinary degree the leader of his own party and has come to command the confidence and respect of the whole American people.

"In his dealing with the Mexican problem he has shown the high wisdom and patience of international statesmanship free from unworthy ambitions. Russia will know that in pressing for a treaty that will recognize the passports of American citizens without discrimination of religion or race, the President represents the American people as well as his own fixed and inflexible convictions."

WOULDN'T QUIT SHIP BLISTERED BY FIRE

BESET BY STIFLING SMOKE

Stokers Could Stay at Their Post on Burning Ship for Only Five Minutes at a Time.

When the Cunard Line's steamship Pannonia arrived at her pier yesterday morning bringing the 103 men, women, and children rescued from the burning steamship Balmes in midocean on last Friday, Capt. Robert Capper and his officers said that the heroes of the disaster were Capt. Juan Ruiz and the members of his crew, who fought the flames day and night until they dropped on the deck. Chief Officer Harry McConkey of the Pannonia, who was in command of the first lifeboat, went on board the Balmes with Surgeon Doherty and Purser Williams as a fireman was hoisted from the stokehold of the burning ship in a bowline. He was unconscious from the smoke from the burning cotton, which he had inhaled.

Capt. Ruiz told the chief officer of the Cunarder that the cotton was on fire in No. 2 hold, and that the smoke had penetrated through the wooden bulkhead into the stokehold and engine room, and that it was impossible for the men to stay below for more than five minutes at a time. Under those conditions the engineers and firemen kept steam up from Thursday night until the steamer arrived at St. George's Bermuda, on Sunday morning, where she was beached.

"It was a fortunate thing for the Balmes," said Capt. Capper, "that the wireless operator on the Pannonia managed to get the S. O. S. call sent out by her operator at 1:15 o'clock on Thursday morning, as we were the only ship apparently that received it. The call was so indistinct that I asked to have the message repeated, and then got her position, which showed that she was 287 miles to the south. When Capt. Ruiz flashed the message that his ship was on fire and the passengers were in peril, I replied that the Pannonia was coming to the rescue. The watches in the engine room and stokehold were doubled, and we started to meet the Balmes in a southerly gale and head sea, which reduced our speed down to nine knots. We had no other message from the burning steamer for twelve hours, and could not get her with our short range wireless, which made me anxious, as I was afraid that something might have exploded in her cargo.

"At 2 o'clock in the afternoon we got another message from Capt. Ruiz, stating that the fire was gaining on them and to come as quickly as possible. He also said that his ship was steaming toward us at about five knots an hour. At 7:20 the same night we came up close to the Balmes and hove short under her stern.

"When I got within half a mile of her, Capt. Ruiz signaled that he had sixteen women and fourteen children among the 103 passengers on board and ninety-one of the number were in the steerage. I suggested to him that the transfer to the Pannonia should be made at once if there was any immediate danger, and he replied that his men could manage to keep on till daylight, and it would be safer for the women and children then, as half his crew were laid up, and the rest were fighting the fire.

"On Friday morning, after daylight, I had four lifeboats lowered in charge of the chief, first, third, and fourth officers, with eight seamen in each boat. There was a short, choppy sea on, and I was anxious to get the passengers on board, as the barometer had fallen in the night and there were indications that a storm was coming on. Chief Officer McConkey returned to the ship at 7:08 o'clock with the first load, thirty-seven women and children, who were handed up the accommodation ladder by a chain of stewards and passed along to the second cabin, where there was plenty of warm clothing waiting for them. This had been prepared by the passengers in the first cabin and the stewardesses.

"The next three boats arrived soon, bringing the men passengers, and at 9:16 o'clock the chief officer came back from his second trip with thirty-five passengers. His boat was hoisted to the davits just as the storm broke, and a sea dashed over the upper deck. We finished just in time, and steamed for Bermuda. We kept about two miles away on the starboard beam of the Balmes until we arrived at St. George's on Sunday morning."

All the passengers were rescued, Purser Williams said, and transferred without suffering a scratch, and one woman was 86 years old. Maria Fernandez, who had three children with her, fainted when she arrived on the Pannonia and saw that her little ones were safe.

In the midst of his fight against the fire in the forward part of the ship on Saturday night, Capt. Ruiz, whom the officers of the Pannonia described as "a grand old seadog," remembered that the 103 extra passengers might inconvenience the commissary department of the Pannonia, and he sent this message in broken English to Capt. Capper:

In view, many extra passengers have previsions if you need. We follow without improvement. Smoke is now coming out coal cellar by the wall of wood. Difficulty to throw out coal. I hope that you will accompany me to the last moment.

Earlier in the day he had asked Capt. Capper's advice as to the wisdom of taking the hatcher fro mnumber 2 hold so as to get at the bottled rum, which was stored over the burning cotton. Capt. Ruiz feared this might explode, but the Cunard Captain said that as the crew of the Balmes was exhausted he thought it would be better to save their energy to keep up steam so as to reach Bermuda quickly.

Nicholas Arbornies, an engineer from Cuba, who was a passenger on the Balmes, spoke in the highest terms of the gallant conduct of Capt. Ruiz and his crew and their fight to keep the fire under. At 4 o'clock on Thursday morning the decks forward were so hot, he said, that planks had to be put down for the sailors to walk upon. The passengers stayed up all that night watching the Jannonia as she manouvered around the stern of their ship. They were glad when dawn came on Friday, he asserted. Purser Williams said there was not a murmur from any of the rescued passengers when they came on board the Pannonia. They all wanted to see Capt. Ruiz and his crew rescued and then to save their baggegs. This was accomplished on Sunday at Bermuda, he said.

Chief Wireless Operator InocencioV. Michavila, on the Balmes, who was at his instrument from Wednesday night until Sunday morning, was complimented by Capt. Ruiz in the presence of the Pannonia's officers, who went on board the burning ship. Stanley G. Rattee, senior operator on the Panonnia, had to do double duty throughout the rescue, and he was exhausted when the ships got to Bermuda. His assistant, Edward Murphy, was in the ship's hospital suffering from a mild attack of pneumonia. When told that Rattee was worn out, Murphy insisted on going to the instrument while his chief had a rest. He worked for four hours wrapped in blankets.

Capt. Ruiz sent his photograph to Capt. Capper, with an inscription thanking him and his officers and crew for their aid. The passengers from the Spanish ship were taken to Ellis Island, and will depart on the Pannonia on next Saturday for Cadiz. Capt. Capper spoke in the highest terms of the conduct of his officers and crew. His ship was delayed three days and a half in going to the assistance of the Balmes.

Often Ill Health

Can be traced directly to wrong food and drink.

This cause, more than any other, creates personal discomfort—often disease.

Your doctor can confirm that coffee contains a drug, caffeine, which is the common cause of headache, biliousness, indigestion, nervousness, heart trouble, and a long train of aches and ills which bring misery to many who might otherwise be well and happy.

Anyone who values health enough to make an easy test can be free from coffee ills by changing to

POSTUM

This pure food-drink, made of prime wheat and the juice of southern sugar-cane, is absolutely free from the coffee drug, caffeine—the cause of coffee troubles.

Postum now comes in two forms:

Regular Postum—must be well boiled.

Instant Postum—is a soluble powder. A spoonful dissolved in a cup of hot water, with sugar and cream to taste, makes a delicious beverage instantly.

NYACK, N. Y., Nov. 19.—Mrs. William N. Bannister, a widow, 80 years old, was burned to death at her home in Midland Avenue to-night. She was alone in the house. As she lighted a lamp it fell to the floor, setting fire to her clothing.

Firemen responded to an alarm, and William Jupp risked his life in trying to carry the woman from the burning building. He was severely burned when he reached the street with Mrs. Bannister in his arms. The woman was burned beyond recognition.

MERRITT SHORT $140,000.

Tuckahoe and Bronxville May Be Brought Near Bankruptcy.

Special to The New York Times.

TUCKAHOE, N. Y., Nov. 19.—It developed to-day in the investigation of the affairs of Former Supervisor Henry C. Merritt of Tuckahoe, who has been missing since a week before election, that the financial affairs of the town of East Chester, which takes in Tuckahoe and Bronxville, are badly tangled and apparently about $140,000 is missing. Accountants from the State Controller's office have completed their investigation of Supervisor Merritt's books, and their report will be filed at Albany to-morrow.

The State's representatives reported to the Town Council last night that there was credited to "Henry C. Merritt, Supervisor," $97,775.51 as town funds, in two Westchester County banks. In the Gramatan National Bank at Bronxville there is $66,524.30 in Merritt's name as Supervisor and $1,109.97 to the credit of the highway fund. In the Westchester Trust Company, Yonkers, there are town funds amounting to $30,141.24.

Supervisor-elect Frederick Close, who before election charged Merritt with mismanagement of the town funds and forced his resignation, has filed his bond, but it is said that he may have trouble getting possession of the town moneys because they are deposited in Merritt's name. There is considerable apprehension among the taxpayers, because if it should be true that Mr. Merritt is short $140,000 or more and the town is unable to collect only a part of it from his bondsmen the town may be on the verge of bankruptcy.

The State auditors found that $260,000 of sewer bonds had been sold and about $100,000 of this sum had been paid out on contract work. There is still a large sum due the contractors, which they were unable to collect from Merritt. What has become of the general town account and the California road improvement funds has not been reported.

It is also said that no trace can be found of a certificate of indebtedness which had been issued on June 29, 1918, for the sum of $38,862.79 to George M. Hahn & Co.

Judge Mayer, in the United States Court, has appointed Benjamin M. Freeman of Mount Vernon receiver for Merritt.

There appears to be no trace of Merritt, and it was learned on the highest authority to-night that his wife has not received a word from him since he disappeared. Mrs. Merritt, as well as Merritt's mother, who is 80 years old, are heartbroken, and it is feared that grief will kill the latter. Merritt has been traced to Philadelphia, where he visited an eye specialist. It is believed he is in some sanitarium near that city or else has gone to Europe. He was nearly blind in one eye and was under treatment when he left Tuckahoe.

SCHMIDT'S TRIAL GOES OVER

Counsel for the Priest-Murderer Asks for Alienists for the Defense.

The trial of Hans Schmidt, the priest, who has confessed that he murdered and dismembered Anna Aumuller, was postponed until next Tuesday when the case was called yesterday before Judge Foster in Part V., Court of General Sessions. The adjournment was made at the request of William M. K. Olcott, who said that as counsel for Schmidt he had been called into the case too late to prepare a defense.

Mr. Olcott made an application for the appointment of two alienists to examine Schmidt. Judge Foster will hear argument to-day on this application. Mr. Olcott said that one of the two alienists of the defense had said that it would be "slaughter" to proceed with the trial while Schmidt is in his present condition. Judge Foster questioned the word "slaughter," but Mr. Olcott insisted that the alienist had used that term.

Mr. Olcott said that the defense relied wholly on the insanity defense. He said that Schmidt's mental state made it impossible to confer with him. Schmidt, according to Mr. Olcott, did not consider himself insane. The prosecution has four alienists who will testify that Schmidt is sane and that his appearance of insanity is a sham. They are Dr. Carlos F. MacDonald, Dr. William Mabon, Dr. George H. Kirby, and Dr. Henry Diefendorff.

A special panel of 250 talesmen was called for the trial. Schmidt was kept in an ante-room and taken back to the Tombs after the adjournment of the case without appearing. Alphonse G. Koelbe and Terence J. McManus, in addition to Mr. Olcott, appeared for the defense.

Mayor Kline Has the Grip.

Mayor Kline is confined to his home in Jamaica with an attack of grip. He is expected at the City Hall today. Secretary Robert Adamson said that the Mayor had to cancel his engagement at the Horse Show as well as an engagement at the Republican Club, where a dinner was to have been given in his honor last night.

CARROLL MEN THREW VOTERS FROM POLLS

Witnesses Corroborate Defendant Who Testified for State in Primary Fraud Case.

ONE MAN EJECTED TWICE

Got Into Brooklyn Primaries Finally by Pretending to be a Carroll Supporter.

At the third day of the trial of State Senator Daniel J. Carroll, Democratic leader of the Fourteenth Assembly District, Brooklyn; Lawyer Luke O'Reilly, and three others on charges of conspiracy and the intimidation of election officials at the primaries in March, 1912, before Justice Kelby in the Supreme Court of that borough yesterday, the testimony of Thomas Owens on the preceding day as to the disturbances at the polling place, 95 North Sixth Street, was corroborated in many details.

Owens is one of the defendants in the trial, but he turned State's evidence. He said that gangsters were in the polling place to support the Carroll faction, and that no attempt was made to stop repeating. Voters were watched in the booths by Carroll supporters, he asserted, to see how they marked their ballots. He said that at a signal from O'Reilly some voters who were suspected of not being Carroll supporters were ejected from the polling place.

David M. Rosenthal of 151 Grand Street, the first witness examined yesterday, testified that he was thrown out of the polling place twice before he was able to vote. He said he was standing in line waiting to vote, when he was approached by a man whom he recognized as a Carrol supporter. Rosenthal wanted to vote for McKeon, who was opposing Carroll in the contest for the leadership of the district. The witness said he told one of Carroll's followers that he was going to vote for Carroll, and was then told to go around in back of the polling place and knock on the door three times.

"It was pitch dark," said the witness, "but I went through an alley to the back of the polling place. As I reached the door, one of Carroll's men was there. He lighted a match and, seeing me, said, 'I know you,' and nodded to another man. I was hustled out of the alley and thrown into North Sixth Street. I made another attempt later to get into the place, and two men standing in the entrance threw me out again. Half an hour later I tried for the third time, and managed to get into the rear room, where there was a crowd. There was an argument between two men there and a fight started. While the row was on I forced my way into the front room, where the voting was going on."

"Tell us what happened when you tried to vote," said Assistant District Attorney William P. Allen, who was examining the witness.

"I finally got my ballot after pushing my way through the crowd, who were all trying to vote. I then took my ballot to the nearest booth in the front room and marked it. As I was leaving the booth I saw O'Reilly give a signal by a jerk of his head. I was jostled, and some man, a stranger to me, grabbed the ballot from my hand. I shouted for my ballot, and then I saw Owens grab it."

On cross-examination by Robert H. Elder, the witness admitted that Owens put his ballot in the ballot box. Owens was an election inspector at the polling place. The witness admitted that he knew it was unlawful for him to enter the polling place by the rear entrance.

Herman Goeman, a machinist of 227 Wythe Avenue, who was a ballot clerk at the polling place, testified that voting went on after the hour for the polls to close. Goeman then told of a disturbance when Michael Rosenthal, an election inspector for the McKeon faction, tried to interfere on behalf of his party. The witness said that he heard Daniel J. Carroll shout, "Put that man out." Rosenthal was lifted over a partition and thrown out into the street, he said.

McCOMBS WON'T HELP.

As National Chairman He Can't Join in Anti-Tammany Warfare.

William F. McCombs, Chairman of the Democratic National Committee, does not intend to take an active part in the overthrow of Tammany Hall or the establishment of a rival Democratic organization in New York City, according to a statement he made yesterday. Before he left for Washington Mr. McCombs said:

"I have seen the reports in the papers intimating that I might take some part in the factional differences in the Democratic Party in this city. As Chairman of the Democratic National Committee my duty lies in strengthening the Democratic Party wherever I can be of assistance.

"I have given no intimation that I might take part in any local dissensions, but have merely listened to what has been said. My proposed visit to Washington has nothing to do with the New York situation. I wish to devote as much of my time as possible to my private affairs, so long neglected."

It was said yesterday that, while Mr. McCombs has no intention of taking an active part in the plan for the reorganization of the Democratic Party in the city, nevertheless he was willing to cooperate quietly with the forces seeking to bring such a condition of affairs about, and that he was merely carrying out the desires of President Wilson, who also was interested in the rehabilitation plan, but preferred to have his connection with it kept secret, for some months at least.

Several of the stanchest district leaders in the Fourteenth Street organization laughed yesterday at the idea that Murphy could be dethroned. Thomas F. Foley, leader of the Second District and Murphy's right-hand man, said:

"All this talk of dissension among the leaders and a movement to depose Mr. Murphy just makes us laugh. By a stretch of the imagination there may be two leaders who cannot absolutely be counted upon. I will not give their names, because I may be doing them an injustice. Why should we turn on Murphy? We know the truth about the campaign and we know that our defeat was not his fault."

FIRE DRILL AVERTS PANIC.

Used with Good Effect at Blaze in Philanthropic Hospital.

When fire was discovered in a storeroom on the third floor of the Philanthropic Hospital, at Fifth Avenue and 128th Street, yesterday afternoon, the regular drill of the institution sent every physician, nurse, and orderly to his or her place. Fire escape doors were opened, stretchers were carried to those of the twenty-four patients unable to walk, and nurses took up the work of preventing panic.

Meanwhile Mrs. Josephine Munro, the Superintendent, together with several nurses and physicians, had gone to the storeroom, and with fire extinguishers succeeded in putting out the blaze without need of the Fire Department, and before it had done more than $500 damage. There was not so much as a breath of excitement during the entire episode.

BARNES WON'T BE DRIVEN.

Waits to See What State Leaders Thinks of His Resignation.

William Barnes, Jr., Chairman of the Republican State Committee, told his friends yesterday that he had no intention of resigning, unless at the conference of Republican State leaders, to be held on Dec. 5 in this city, it was the unanimous opinion of those present that his resignation would aid in the rehabilitation of the party. Mr. Barnes would make no comment on the matter yesterday, but one of his friends said:

"Mr. Barnes wants it distinctly understood that he does not intend to be coerced or forced from the Chairmanship. Mr. Barnes feels that he knows the attitude of nearly all Republican leaders, and that there will not be any effort made at the coming conference to force him to resign. He has spent much of the past fortnight in interviewing the leaders and they all agree that the only reason that would justify the Chairman's resignation would be the best interests of the party, and these interests Mr. Barnes has at heart."

The purpose of the conference on Dec 5 is to discuss plans for the reorganization of the Republicans in the State and to consider measures which will be taken up by the Republican members of the Assembly at the coming session in Albany. Senator Elihu Root will make the principal speech at the opening of the conference, and leaders from all over the State will be heard.

SET FAST PACE FOR FUNERAL

Policeman Says Auto Was Making 32 Miles an Hour.

Magistrate Leach in the Long Island City Police Court gave a hearing yesterday to Christian Frickey of 474 West 140th Street on a charge of violating the automobile speed laws. Frickey is a chauffeur employed by a Manhattan undertaker who uses an automobile hearse and automobiles for mourners.

A funeral procession led by an automobile in which were heaped many floral pieces and followed by an automobile hearse and other automobiles crossed Queensboro Bridge on Tuesday afternoon and started up the Queens Boulevard toward Calvary Cemetery.

Frickey was in charge of the leading automobile and according to Policeman Harry P. Shelly he set a swift pace for the procession. When Shelly finally caught up with Frickey he says his automobile was going at the rate of thirty-two miles an hour. A summons was served on Frickey ordering him to appear in court. Frickey was released on a suspended sentence by Magistrate Leach.

WANT CHURCHILL OUT OF SCHOOL BOARD

Seth Low and Other Educators Ask Mayor Kline Not to Reappoint Him.

SAY HE HAS HURT SYSTEM

Churchill Says He Knew of Plan to Attack Him and Defends His Supporters in the Board.

President Nicholas Murray Butler of Columbia University and twelve associates sent to Mayor Kline yesterday a letter advising against the reappointment of Thomas W. Churchill as a member of the Board of Education. Mr. Churchill is the President of the Board. He has conducted a vigorous campaign to curtail the powers of City Supt. W. H. Maxwell. In this policy he is said to have had the approval of the late Mayor Gaynor.

On behalf of Mr. Churchill, it was stated that it was his belief that the death of his sponsor, Mayor Gaynor, was the cause of the present move to prevent his reappointment. His term expires on Jan. 1, but Mayor Kline is expected to name his successor or to reappoint him during the present month.

The general view expressed by members of the board yesterday was that Supt. Maxwell was probably directly responsible for the fight against Mr. Churchill, and that the raising of the "free speech" issue by Mr. Maxwell a few weeks ago was merely preliminary to the present move. Mr. Maxwell's term of office does not expire until March 16, 1916.

On seeing a copy of the letter addressed to Mayor Kline Mr. Churchill said he had expected this fight for some time, and had been so confident that it would be made in the way it has that he had written to an evening paper protesting against the plan. He added:

"I must have made a pretty vigorous President or I wouldn't have stirred up such men as these."

This is the letter sent to Mayor Kline:

New York, Nov. 18, 1913.

To the Hon. Ardolph L. Kline, Mayor of the City of New York, City Hall, New York City.

Sir: The undersigned citizens and taxpayers, who are especially concerned with education and who take a deep interest in the organization and conduct of the city school system, being zealous for the maintenance of the reputation which the schools have gained during the past twenty years for efficiency and non-political administration, respectfully ask that men and women of the highest possible type be sought to accept the appointments to the Board of Education that are soon to be made by you.

During the past two years the Board of Education has steadily and rapidly deteriorated. The merit system of promoting and appointing teachers has been interfered with and endangered. Steps have been taken to weaken or to nullify the authority and the responsibility of the professional officers of the school system for the purely scholastic work of the schools. Legislation has been advocated in open defiance of the best civic and educational sentiment.

We urgently ask for a prompt return to the higher standards which long existed in the Board of Education. In particular, we ask that the present President of the Board of Education, Mr. Churchill, to whose influence the present unhappy condition of the city school administration is chiefly due, and those who have been closely associated with him, be not reappointed.

Respectfully,

Nicholas Murray Butler, President of Columbia University; Henry S. Pritchett, Felix Adler, Julius Sachs, Frederick J. E. Woodbridge, Dean of Graduate Faculties, Columbia University; Wallace Buttrick, Abraham Flexner, Seth Low, Charles C. Burlingham, Henry W. Taft, Felix M. Warburg, Frederic R. Coudert, Otto T. Bannard.

Four of the signers—Henry W. Taft, Felix M. Warburg, Frederic R. Coudert, and Charles C. Burlingham—are former members of the Board of Education. The others are well known for their interest in educational matters.

Late last night Mr. Churchill gave out this reply to the letter:

I have read the open letter to Mayor Kline. It is alleged that during the past two years the Board of Education has steadily and rapidly deteriorated. Whether this means through my influence, or through the new members appointed by the late Mayor Gaynor during that period, I do not know. In so far as it affects me personally, I have nothing to say. In so far as it affects the Board of Education, I feel that I should say this:

The board consists of forty-six members. During the last two years eleven new members were appointed. Their names are: Mrs. Deba C. Bamberger, Mrs. Ella W. Kramer, Joseph Barondess, Henry J. Bigham, Ernest F. Ellert, the Rev. James M. Farrer, Isadore M. Levy, Henry P. Morrison, Morton Stein, Ernest W. Stratmann, and Ira S. Wile, M. D.

They represent men and women active in educational and charitable work, many of whom have served the schools through prior membership in the local school boards, and all of whom have given freely of their time and services for the interest of the schools. It cannot lie in the mouth of any man knowing these members to say that they have been the cause of deterioration in the Board of Education or any other board.

Any one who knew Mayor Gaynor and his interest in the schools must believe, first, that there were no political considerations in these appointments, and, secondly, that fitness and the best interests of the public school were his only guide.

My personal observation for the last two years, during one of which I have been President, is that the members of the Board of Education have acted from the loftiest motives, and with a view to what was deemed best for not only maintaining what was good in it, but for improving the curriculum, methods, and results where possible.

The letter of the gentlemen attacking the Board of Education was addressed to the Mayor. If it should seem necessary to furnish the Mayor with any defense of the policies of the Board of Education the board may be depended upon to communicate with him.

Dr. Thomas Hunter, President Emeritus of the Normal College, issued a statement indorsing Mr. Churchill, in which he said it would be a serious loss to the city and to the children in the schools if Mayor Kline failed to reappoint President Churchill.

President Butler was asked at his home last night how the letter to Mayor Kline came to be written. He said he was too pressed with important engagements to go into details, but that Abraham Flexner no doubt would be glad to explain them. At the home of Mr. Flexner it was said he was out of town and would not be back for a week.

ASSAILS LUTHER'S MORALS.

Mgr. McMahon Holds Him Responsible for Lax Standards.

In the first lecture of the Catholic Library Association's course for the season of 1913-14, delivered yesterday in the grand ballroom of Delmonico's, at Forty-fourth Street and Fifth Avenue, Mgr. Joseph H. McMahon outlined the attitude of the Roman Catholic Church toward Martin Luther. The subject of the lecture was, "A Discredited Religious Reformer."

Mgr. McMahon told of the researches of Father Denifle, the Dominican scholar, who died in Munich a few years ago while on his way to Oxford, England, to receive the degree of Doctor of Letters from the university there in recognition of his historical discoveries. He also dwelt upon the works of Father Grisar, who, he said, had vindicated the scholarship of Father Denifle.

"In studying the life and work of Martin Luther," said Mgr. McMahon, "we must recognize frankly that he was one of the greatest personalities in the history of the human race; that he possessed a remarkable and fascinating individuality and a mind so masterful as to dominate those about him and to impress its stamp upon the subsequent political and religious history of the world."

Mgr. McMahon said that Luther's moral teachings were responsible for the modern conception of the flexibility of morals as opposed to the Catholic doctrine of an absolute standard of morality. The modern ideas of marriage and divorce, the debilitating effect of the so-called study of sex hygiene, were both traceable directly, he maintained, to the trend of thought inspired by Luther's teachings.

"Until recently," said the lecturer, "no scholarly effort has been made to get at the real facts concerning Luther's life. Writers have taken their facts, or alleged facts, from the contemporary pamphleteers who wrote during Luther's life, and from those who succeeded him. During that period theological hatred, that blackest and most bitter emotion to which the passions of men are susceptible, was rampant in Germany. Writers on both sides had little or no regard for accuracy. As a result legends have been told in histories written on both sides which have been accepted with a credulity which astonishes us."

Mgr. McMahon said that the writings of Luther discovered by Father Denifle in his researches proved that the great reformer was a thoroughly immoral man—that he was consciously immoral. The writings of Luther published by Denifle, he said, were untranslatable into English, because of their actual obscenity. As a result of Luther's immoral teaching, the lecturer maintained, he could not rightly be recognized as a religious reformer, or the founder of a true ethical system. That he was so regarded, Mgr. McMahon said, was because he had attacked evils in the body of the Church which in that day was sunk in iniquity and corruption.

FENDER ORDER STIRS WRATH OF THE B. R. T.

President Williams Makes Bitter Personal Attack on Commissioner Maltbie.

HE CHARGES 'INSINCERITY'

"Vituperation," Says Maltbie, Should Not Cloud the Issue—Offers Aid to B. R. T.

A brisk controversy devloped yesterday betwen Col. Timothy S. Williams, President of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company, and Commissioner Milo R. Maltbie in reference to the recent order of the Public Service Commission requiring the B. R. T. to install certain types of safety appliances on its surface cars. In his opinion, which accompanied the order, Commissioner Maltbie made reference to the cost of the new devices, which he estimated at $150,000, and said that this was not worth haggling about when the lives and limbs of men, women, and children were at stake.

In a formal statement issued yesterday, Col. Williams said:

"We have received the order of the Public Service Commission in the matter of projecting fenders on surface cars of this system, but not the opinion of Commissioner Maltbie thereon. The published extracts of the opinion indicate the willingness to disregard the facts and pervert the testimony in this action which have characterized Mr. Maltbie's entire course in this matter. The published quotations would make it appear that the Brooklyn Rapid Transit system held the safety of its passengers merely as a matter of dollars and cents."

Col. Williams then suggests that if the Public Service Commission believes there has been too much delay in the matter "surely must have some specified type of fender in mind which it can recommend, and asks that Commissioner Maltbie inform him what it is. He then reviews the history of the case, asserting that it shows the "gross hypocrisy" of Commissioner Maltbie in the matter.

The wheel guards, Col. Williams admits, which were installed in 1910, have proved successful, but the tests made by the commission itself show that the fenders have been failures and have added to the dangers of the street. Three types of fender were tested, and the rigid type now in use on the B. R. T. apparently was the best. The Public Service Commission, however, condemned its use, and also that of the fender operated from the platform by the motorman, and has said of the third type, the automatic fender:

"We are of opinion that it would not be wise to attempt its use at present in Greater New York."

Col. Williams in his statement quotes the opinions of such experts as H. B. Fleming, Vice President of the Chicago City Railway Company and R. B. Hamilton, Vice President of the Philadelphia Rapid Transit Company, opposing the use of any projecting car fender in crowded streets. In conclusion, Col. Williams says:

"The commission did not produce at any of the hearings to which our company was a party one syllable of evidence indicating that there was any type of projecting fender yet devised or in process of invention which would obviate the dangers above pointed out. In the face of this situation, this company in its desire that every safeguard shall be placed around the lives of those who use its lines and those who go about in the public streets, could take no position other than the one it has always occupied, namely, that the projecting fender is a menace in and of itself, and where wheel guards are installed, produces more accidents than it prevents.

"The foregoing summary of the record in this case is given in order to demonstrate the insincerity and misrepresentation characterizing the action of Commissioner Maltbie in this instance."

In reply to Col. Williams, Commissioner Maltbie had this to say yesterday:

"No amount of personal vituperation should be allowed to confuse the issue. Col. Williams's companies opposed the installation of wheel guards, but their installation was ordered by the commission, and he now admits they are effective. His companies opposed the installation of air brakes and took the order of the commission to the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court, which unanimously affirmed the order.

"He is now opposing the installation of fenders on cars operating in the outlying districts of Brooklyn, where cars are operated at high speed. Yet fenders are operated to the satisfaction of the companies in other districts in Greater New York and in other cities, and in Queens alone they have saved a score of human lives.

"The company has expressed its willingness to operate the present antiquated type of fender, has admitted that it is not the most effective type, and yet opposes the installation of a better type. If Col. Williams and his staff cannot find a more efficient type than they are operating, I am sure the commission and its engineers would be glad to assist them. When Col. Williams has read the opinion of the commission, which he confesses he has not done, he will be in a better position to speak of its contents."

FAILURE HITS VANDERBILT.

Harold S., J. P. Morgan & Co. and Others Hold Auto Company's Notes.

Harold S. Vanderbilt, J. P. Morgan & Co., William Earl Dodge, Robert Troescher, and Ralph Sanger are mentioned as creditors in the bankruptcy schedules of the Atlantic Vehicle Company of 357 Oraton Street, which were filed yesterday in Newark.

According to the figures Mr. Vanderbilt appears to be hardest hit by the failure. A short time ago he lent the vehicle company $5,000 worth of New York Central bonds, which the company pledged with Gray & Wilmerding, New York brokers, for a loan of $4,000. Mr. Vanderbilt also holds two notes for $12,500 each, said to be secured, and notes for $1,500 and $2,000 which are secured by the assignment of sums to be paid on certain contracts accepted by the firm before the failure.

Mr. Vanderbilt and Mr. Dodge held the company's notes for $10,000 jointly. Mr. Dodge also holds a note for $12,500, dated Oct. 17, 1913, and unsecured, together with another note for $10,000, dated June 19, 1913, which is secured by a debenture bond of the vehicle company bearing date of Dec. 2, 1912.

Mr. Sanger, who is Vice President and General Manager of the bankrupt company, appears as a creditor for $18,500 for cash advanced. He holds the firm's notes for that amount, unsecured.

Mr. Troescher has the company's note for $2,500, dated July 12, 1913. J. P. Morgan & Co. hold a note for $10,000, which is secured by the assignment of a contract for the building of five auto trucks for the Boston Edison Illuminating Company.

The assets of the concern include $6,500 worth of accounts receivable and $123,000, which is given as the value of the plant and stock in trade. The total liabilities, it is said, will amount to about $130,000.

Two Firemen Hurt in Collision.

In running to a small blaze in a Lexington Avenue kitchen yesterday afternoon, Engine 39, one of the biggest pieces of motor apparatus in the Fire Department, crashed into a Third Avenue elevated pillar at Sixty-second Street, and in the collision Lieut. Nelson and Engineer Owens were seriously hurt. Both men were thrown to the ground and are now in Flower Hospital, suffering from internal injuries.

RESINOL SOAP FOR THE SKIN AND COMPLEXION

A toilet soap that helps your skin and hair

ANY soap will clean your skin—a five-cent bar of laundry soap will do if you do not care what becomes of your complexion.

But you know that laundry soap contains harsh drying alkali that would ruin your skin and hair, so you never think of using it.

Many toilet soaps contain this same injurious alkali, though in less degree. Even wonderfully scented imported soaps, for which women pay three and four dollars a cake, are not free from it. A French scientist says the average is 4½% free alkali.

Resinol Soap, costing but 25 cents a cake, contains absolutely no free alkali, but to it are added the Resinol balsams. These give it a wholesome, refreshing odor, and soothing, antiseptic properties which tend to prevent skin irritations, to clear the complexion, and to keep the hair rich and lustrous.

There is no artificial coloring matter in Resinol Soap. Its rich coppery brown is entirely due to the Resinol balsams.

You will find Resinol Soap wherever toilet goods are sold. For guest-room size cake, free, write Dept. 5-F, Resinol, Baltimore, Md.

MARTING AND DUNN WORRY COACHES

Neither Player Is Now Fit to Enter Harvard Game—Guernsey for Full Back?

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 19.—The injured knees of Henry Marting and Dave Dunn are making trouble for the Yale football coaches. Dunn was unable to play to-day in the first scrimmaging of the week, the only actual football which the coaches will order for the Harvard game. Dunn probably will not start the game Saturday at Cambridge, although he may be available for part of the play. The coaches to-day tried Otis Guernsey in his place and the chances are that he will be sent against the Crimson as first string selection for full back.

Guernsey's career has been meteoric. He and Jack Blossom, the baseball Captain, were fellow athletes at the Taft School, and Guernsey captained the freshman eleven last Fall. He has been substitute half back all the Fall and only succeeded Hal Pumpelly for the Princeton game as pinch drop kicker because of the injured knee of that player. His goal yielded Yale her only score in the Princeton match, but he showed general football enough for him to be thrust into the vacancy at full back when Dunn's knee failed to respond to treatment after the game. Unless he retires from the Harvard game, Pumpelly will have practically no chance of getting into the game, even as a substitute, as Guernsey is superior to Pumpelly in even the drop kicking specialty.

Marting was at snap back to-day, but limped appreciably. Russell Cooney, the former guard, is being groomed for his place in case his lameness does not improve, but Trainer Mack said to-night that he expected to have Marting sound as a gold nugget before Saturday.

There is just a possibility of the final selection of "Red" Brann for right end, displacing Carter, whose knee is not quite right, but Carter fought through to-day's practice and was in gilt edge form. Fifteen minutes' driving play to-day showed the 'Varsity attack irresistible against a scrub eleven that included the first 'Varsity substitutes and Capt. Sheldon and Half Back Easton of the freshman team that closed its season last Saturday. Two scores were quickly reeled off, Knowles taking the ball across for a touchdown and Guernsey sending a leather over the cross piece for a field goal. The 'Varsity was not held during the trip down the field on either occasion.

Following the scrimmaging the scrubs were given the ball fifteen minutes and rammed the 'Varsity with Harvard formations that seemed to have no carrying power. A series of moves, labelled "Brickley plays," were thrown back with a loss. Guernsey's goal closed the practice. He sent the ball over from the thirty-five-yard line, one of the neatest plays of the season. Visiting coaches included Fred Daly, the former Yale Captain, now Williams College coach; Sam Hammond, George Goss, Jim Rodgers, and Burr Chamberlin.

To-day's practice closed Yale field work for the season and marked the end of that historic gridiron and grandstand plant. The occasion was celebrated by an undergraduate parade of 1,500 to the field, where the players, coaches, and the old field were cheered as a farewell for everybody. The substitutes piled up their old uniforms, blankets, and pieces of football equipment on the gridiron, set fire to it and danced around, singing their famous "Omega Lambda Chi" song.

The regular squad of 30 players was announced to-night to leave to-morrow at 2 o'clock. They will have a special car which will be detached from the regular express at Auburndale about 5 o'clock. Another squad will leave here Saturday mornng to reinforce the Yale squad in the Stadium.

The squad leaving here to-morrow does not include Oakes, Madden, Castles, Malcolm and Roberts.

The players chosen are as follows:

Capt. Ketcham and Marting, centres; Pendleton, Cooney, Harbison, Arnold, Robinson, Caldwell, end Way, guards; Talbott, Warren, Loughbridge, and Stillman, tackles; Avery, Carter, Brann, Hubbard, and Washburn, ends; Wilson, Wheeler, and Hammer, quarter backs; Knowles, Ainsworth, MacLeish, Taylor, Wieer, and Cornell, half backs, and Dunn, Guerney, and Pumpelly, full backs.

HAUGHTON IS CONFIDENT.

Harvard Coach Tells Students That Crimson Will Beat Yale.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 19.—Except for a brisk drill on signals to-morrow before a throng of undergraduates who will come down to the Stadium to sing their songs and cheer their team, the Harvard 'Varsity eleven is ready for Saturday's big game with Yale. For two hours the men were on the field this afternoon, busy every moment, although there was no scrimmaging. After running through their plays the regulars lined up for dummy work against the scrubs, who after putting all the football that the scouts have brought up from New Haven, stood up against the Varsity attack, but without tackling the man carrying the ball. All except two of the regulars were in this long drill, the absentees being Rex Hitchcock and Bradlee.

Hitchcock turned his lame ankle in the Brown game, and although he covered it up in Monday's drill, he now is a little lame, and no chance was taken with him to-day. Bradlee is also unable to get up speed without showing lameness, but the week's rest is expected to bring him around into trim.

Much attention was given the kickers this afternoon, Brickley kicking goals and coming through with the great majority of his tries. Mahan's punting also is right up to the mark, and much is expected of him in the Yale game.

The coach rushed the team to all parts of the field, putting down a football and quizzing the players on what play should be used according to the position of the ball, the distance to be gained, and the down. Later Haughton, working the team on defence for drop kicks, pulled off a couple of goals in true 1898 form. In fact, to-day Haughton's old Captain, Ben Dibblee, Captain-leader of the 1898 Crimson 'Varsity that beat Yale in a 17 to 0 game, was on the field, as were Bob McKay and Paul Hollister, besides Richmond Fearing, the tennis and racquet player, who is one of the very few Harvard men distinguished for having won 'Varsity letters in three branches of sport. Fearing was in college twenty years ago.

To-night the entire student body turned out in the college yard and marched to the Union for a mass meeting at which songs and cheers were again rehearsed. Percy Haughton addressed the boys and said that his team was ready to play its best game, which would be needed to beat this year's Yale team, which has come along so fast in the late season. He is confident that Harvard will win.

To-morrow the players will be taken to the Vesper Country Club at Tyngsboro, Mass. They will not play any football, however, as their clothes will be left behind. The trip is taken to provide a good rest. Saturday morning the eleven will return to Cambridge, arriving a few hours before the game.

ARMY FORWARD PASSES FAIL.

Cadets Sing and Yell — Getting Ready for Big Game Here.

Special to The New York Times.

WEST POINT, N. Y., Nov. 19.—Urged on by their six hundred fellow cadets assembled in the stands, who hurled defiance to the Navy in songs and yells, the army continued their secret work to-day in preparation for the game with the middies in New York Nov. 29. The plays that will be used against Springfield on Saturday were also rehearsed in a forty-five minute scrimmage with the scrubs with good effect. Capt. Hoge and Milburn each scored touchdowns. Hoge was the only one of the regular back field men in the rough work today. Hodgson is still out of it and Hobbs was used only in the punting drill. Benedict, Woodruff, and McEwan had a long drill at the kicking game. Woodruff's work was good, but Benedict and McEwan had a hard time locating the goal posts in the goal from placement practice.

Coach Daly waxed wroth when the Army's forward pass drill went to smash again to-day. This part of the workout was far from satisfactory. McEwan's place at centre was taken by Waddell. Prichard was in for a few minutes at quarter back, Doe doing the bulk of the work. The latter behaved well in the position. Huston watched the line men work from the sideline. His improvement is slow.

Assemblyman-elect Hamilton Fish, Jr., of Garrison, Captain of Harvard, '99, assisted the coaches in charge of the Army forwards in to-day's practice.

Navy Team Averages 183 Pounds.

Special to The New York Times.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Nov. 19.—Fast work continued during the practice of the Naval Academy team this afternoon. After some preliminary work, in which special attention was given to kicking, passing, and signal practice, there was a spirited line-up against the scrubs. Leonard, who has been on the sick list, has entirely recovered and was in the line-up for a larger part of the afternoon. Nicholls and Mitchell were both at quarter, and other men used in the back field were Meyers, Failing, Harrison, Blodgett, Miles, and Alexander.

The official figures of the weights of the players show that the team will be one of the heaviest, if not the heaviest, that ever represented the Naval Academy. The average of the whole team is 183 10-11 pounds, that of the line 186¾ pounds and that of the back field 177¾ pounds.

Cornell Guards Against Fumbling.

Special to The New York Times.

ITHACA, Nov. 19.—For more than an hour on a wet gridiron the Cornell 'Varsity football team repulsed the attack of the strong scrub eleven, which used for the most part the Pennsylvania plays as the scouts had reported them. The scrubs were unable to make any headway against the 'Varsity, the secondary defense being particularly alert to block forward passes and trick plays. The practice was the most encouraging of the week, and developed improvement on the part of the Cornell backfield, which pleased the coaches a good deal. Collyar, Philippi, and Lahr, who only got into the regular backfield position two weeks ago, not only showed more speed in getting started, but their plunges were better directed, and there was nowhere as near so much uncertain handling of the ball as in the Lafayette game, when fumbling marred a lot of the play. Based on to-day's showing, the coaches are hopeful that fumbling will be practically eliminated by the time the team goes out on Franklin Field.

SPEEDWAY BRUSHING CLOSES FOR SEASON

Denver and Oakland Boy Match Race, However, Is Postponed Until Sunday.

The Fall racing season on the Harlem Speedway concluded yesterday after two postponements due to the inclement weather of the past two Sundays. The season just ended was considered from all angles to be the most successful in the history of the drive, and with an interesting card of twelve events the closing racing and the cup presentation which followed served as a fitting climax. Three special races were carded for the final day's sport, but one of these a match race between Nathan Straus's gray gelding Denver and James A. Murphy's bay gelding Oakland Boy was declared off and will be contested next Sunday. At the beginning of the afternoon's brushing a heavy mist overhung the half-mile stretch, and the surface covering was heavy and not just suited for fast going.

This was largely responsible for the calling off of the Denver-Oakland Boy race, but it was stated that in view of the poor condition of the drive in the early morning, Mr. Murphy had his horse worked several heats, thinking it would be impossible for the race and under the conditions did not care to send the horse out against Denver after these workouts. Mr. Straus was out behind Denver and brushed the speedy veteran gray a half dozen heats.

A number of exciting finishes were seen, particularly a dead heat in the Class A. A. A. pace between J. J. Archibald's bay mare Fanny D., driven by John Lawrence and H. Crossman's bay mare Bessie Pandit. The first two heats showed each horse a winner, and their third meeting showed both on even terms at the finish line after a whipping drive in the last 100 yards. To determine the supremacy a fourth heat was necessary in which the Pandit mare came home first, winning the race.

I. V. Hunt's famous pacing mare Clover Patch, in another special class for sidewheelers, was pitted against the bay mare Pickles of the Murphy stable and annexed the victory in straight heats. Both heats were close, and the time of the first heat, 1:03 1-8, made by the Hunt mare, was considered exceptionally fast under the track conditions. When the brushing was concluded a party of 200 club members and guests went to the club rooms in Dyckman Street, where eleven silver cups were presented by Dr. John H. Ferster to the owners of the season's highest point winners. The cups were divided, five for pacers and five for trotters, with the eleventh going to the champion colt. Irving V. Hunt scored a double victory by heading the list of both pacers and trotters. His champion mare Clover Patch took first cup for pacers with a tally of 28 points for the season's work, and his trotter Fair Maiden topped the list of winners in its class with 24 points. Second cup for pacers went to H. Crossman's Bessie Pandit, with seventeen tallies, and a four-cornered tie resulted for the remaining three cups between Funston, Sidney Patchen, Ouida, and Guerilla.

On the toss to decide the three winners of cups E. Bass, owner of Funston, drew the blank and was eliminated. Vermont Bellini, Belle Isle, and Eva Tanguay finished in the order named behind Fair Maiden, with a two-cornered tie between Kippewa and The Trip, the toss favoring Kippewa. Impromptu brushing will be continued next Sunday and the match race, weather permitting.

Indiana Taking It Easy.

CARLISLE, Penn., Nov. 19.—The Carlisle Indians put in a light afternoon practice to-day, only running through signals after usual fundamentals. Coach Warner is trying to keep his men keen, and has every hope now of keeping up till team until Thanksgiving. Several new formations were introduced at signal drill, but they could hardly be in shape for use before the game with Brown at Providence.

JOHNSON TO BOX MORAN.

Heavyweights to Battle for World's Title at Paris in January.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

PARIS, Nov. 19.—Jack Johnson, heavyweight champion, was matched to-day to fight Frank Moran in this city during the second week of January, 1914, for the heavyweight championship of the world. Two clubs, the Nouveau Cirque and the Wonderland Français, are now bidding for the match, and the decision will be made known Saturday.

The Nouveau Cirque, which holds its bouts at the Velodrome D'Hiver in Passy, will seat 30,000 persons, and it has offered Johnson 50 per cent. of the gross receipts, with 25 per cent. for Moran. Arrangements have already been made for taking moving pictures of the fight. The Wonderland Club, which is under the control of Theodore Vienne, the leading fight promoter of France, will submit its bid to-morrow. It is said that both parties favor Vienne's club, as the fight would be held in Luna Park, Paris, thereby drawing a great society crowd.

Johnson is very anxious to defend his title because of the recent action of the International Boxing Union, which declared the championship vacant. The report that Johnson finds it necessary to re-enter the ring because of low finances is erroneous as the champion and his wife have jewels valued at $30,000. Johnson recently took over an apartment rented at $100 per month and has purchased a new automobile.

SHUGRUE DEFEATS HARVEY.

Jersey City Lightweight Has Eight Rounds in Bout at Fairmont A. C.

Joe Shugrue, the Jersey City lightweight, clearly outclassed Johnny Harvey of New York in a ten-round bout at the Fairmont A. C. of the Bronx last night. Several times in the late rounds of the contest it appeared as if the Jerseyite would be able to knockout his opponent but Harvey managed to stay on his feet all the time until the final bell sounded a welcome relief. The New Yorker bled from the nose and mouth during the greater part of the bout and his eyes were swollen at the close.

In only two of the ten rounds did the New Yorker show to advantage, Shugrue having a decided advantage in the other eight. Harvey's two rounds were the first and fourth. In the opener, before Shugrue really warmed up to the struggle, Harvey jabbed the New Jersey boy repeatedly with his left hand and got very little return. In the fourth Harvey shook up Shugrue with a hard left swing to the jaw and followed up the advantage so well that Shugrue found it to his advantage to clinch.

Aside of these two rounds Harvey ran a poor second. Shugrue was the aggressor all the way, and did telling work with both hands. Harvey relied principally on his right, but his more experienced opponent kept out of range, and many of the New Yorker's hard swings were wasted in the air. Harvey got over one right swing which cut Shugrue's right eye. This was the only mark that the Jerseyite carried from the ring. At the finish Harvey was very tired from his efforts, while Shugrue was going as well as at any stage of the bout. The ringside weights were 136½ pounds for Shugrue and 135 pounds for Harvey.

In the ten-round semi-final Battling Reddy gained the honors over Young Marino. It was a fast contest all the way, with Reddy showing more cleverness and a better knowledge of boxing. He kept close to his opponent all the time and did his most effective work at close range. Reddy weighed 117 pounds and Marino 115¼ pounds.

TAFT SPEAKS AT GOLF ANNIVERSARY

St. Andrews Club Celebrates Twenty-fifth Year of Game in America.

William H. Taft, formar President of the United States, whose golfing proclivities are well known, paid a tribute to his favorite game last night by his presence at the twenty-fifth anniversary dinner of the St. Andrews Golf Club at Delmonico's. He joined his fellow-golfers at tha "nineteenth hole."

To all golfers the silver jubilee of St. Andrews marks the twenty-fifth anniversary of the introduction of the royal and ancient game in the United States, for it was John Reid, the guest of honor last night, and a few colleagues who brought the game to America.

Tables were set for 200, and the ancient cross of St. Andrew, tha club emblem, together with a plentiful supply of American flags, furnished the chief scheme of decoration. Austen G. Fox, President of the club, was the toastmaster and introduced as the first speaker the venerable Mr. Reid, who told of his part in American golf.

Then came Nicholas Murray Butler, President of Columbia University, Vice President of St. Andrews. In a witty speech he bared the faults of his clubmates in merciless fashion, closing with a parody on the philosophy of Aristotle as applied to golf. I. Irving Fletcher further elucidated on the philosophy of the game and told in witty fashion of his experiences in bunkers and hazards.

Owing to an address in Brooklyn at the Hamilton Club, former President Taft was late in arriving. In fact, it was nearly midnight before the far-driving erstwhile Chief Executive put in an appearance. None the less his reception was cordial in the extreme. He spoke extemporaneously, and told of his pleasure at being present at the twenty-fifth anniversary of the introduction of his pet game in the United States. He told in humorous fashion a few of his golfing experiences.

Seated on the dias were such famous men as Justice Reid, Nicholas Murray Butler, Walter J. Travis, former international champion; Louis B. Stoddard, and F. S. Douglas, former national champions; H. C. Tallmadge, William H. Taft, P. F. Murphy, Robert C. Watson, President United States Golf Association; William F. Morgan, H. J. Whigham, one of the early national title holders; John B. Upham, and Max Behr.

Coach Sheldon to Quit Indiana.

BLOOMINGTON, Ind., Nov. 19.—Indiana University is on the lookout for a football coach. Coach James Sheldon, who has been directing Indiana's football teams for eight years, has announced that he will retire after next Saturday's game here with Purdue, which closes the season. There is a strong sentiment among students and particularly the alumni for an Eastern man to succeed Sheldon. A number of Yale, Harvard and Princeton gridiron players are consideration. A man who is capable of coaching both the football and baseball teams is being urged by many of the alumni.

Purdue's Coach Ill with Malaria.

LAFAYETT, Ind., Nov. 19.—Andrew Smith, Purdue University's football coach, has been stricken with malaria and to-day it was said he probably would not be able to handle the squad again this season. Coach Smith's illness at this time is regarded as a hard blow, as it comes on the eve of the boilermakers' most important game of the season —that with their old rivals, Indiana, at Bloomington next Saturday. Coach Smith has been in poor health all Fall, suffering from malaria, but refused to quit his work until given positive orders by his physician yesterday.

Phillips-Andover Football Captain.

ANDOVER, Mass., Nov. 19.—At a meeting of the Phillips-Andover academy football team, this afternoon, Stewart H. Buckie of Grand Junction, Tenn., was elected Captain of the team for the next season. Buckie played end last year and was in school this year, but was ineligible.

NEWS OF THE BOXERS.

Manager Billy Gibson of the Garden A. C. announced yesterday that he still has hopes of staging the bout between Carl Morris and Jess Willard at Madison Square Garden Dec. 2, although no action has yet been taken toward raising Willard's suspension by the State Athletic Commission. Willard boxes George Rodel, the Boer heavyweight, in a ten-round bout at Milwaukee to-day, and he will leave Milwaukee to-morrow for this city. It is his intention to appear before the commission, and it is likely that both Manager Gibson of the Garden A. C. and Manager Murray of the Buffalo club, which caused Willard's suspension, will also attend the hearing. It is thought that arrangements satisfactory to the Buffalo promoters will be made for Willard's appearance here on Dec. 2, and his appearance at the Buffalo club at a later date.

Tommy Bergen of Lewiston, Me., known in boxing circles as the Lewiston Bearcat, has become totally blind during the last few days, and experts on eye troubles have declared that his sight will never return. Bergen came to New York more than a year ago, and since his arrival here he performed often at local clubs. He was noted more for his ruggedness and ability to take punishment than for his cleverness as a boxer. His last appearance in the ring was only three weeks ago against Tommy Teague, the Brooklyn middleweight. Collections for the benefit of the unfortunate boxer are being taken up at various boxing clubs. He will be taken back to his home in Lewiston this week.

William Rothwell, former featherweight champion, who was known in boxing circles as Young Zulu, accepted the position of boxing instructor and referee at the Canadian A. C. of Montreal. The club is the leading boxing organization of Montreal and the gymnasium where bouts are held every two weeks will accommodate a crowd of almost 2,000 people. The club membership includes many of the most prominent citizens of Montreal.

Johnny Dundee and his manager, Scotty Montieth, have gone to New Orleans, where Dundee is booked for a ten-round bout with Charley White of Chicago on Thanksgiving Day. Shortly after their return from the Southern city the pair will start on their third transcontinental journey of the present year, as Dundee has been signed for the New Year's Day bout at Tom McCarey's Vernon arena.

Few hotels can say as much

Not an ounce of cold storage food is admitted into the Claridge kitchens.

The reason being, we regard it as unhealthful and unfit for human consumption.

Oftener than not, cold storage products are bordering on putrefaction when they are put into storage.

And even if a cold storage product is good when put into storage, a freezing temperature destroys its flavor and saps the natural juices.

Besides, The Claridge kitchen exists for the purpose of disclosing and accentuating the palatability of foods, and not to disguise its absence by excessive seasoning and sauces.

MISHAP AT HORSE SHOW---GOV. TENER TO BE PRESIDENT OF NATIONAL LEAGUE

JUMPER SCATTERS CROWD AT GARDEN

Commander Smashes Gate and Injures Spectator During Horse Show Water Jump.

LORD SEATON BEST IN GIG

W. H. Moore Captures Sir James Cup—Big Crowd Watches Sensational Events.

The first real flutter of excitement during the week of the Horse Show at Madison Square Garden occurred last night during the international water jumping competition, which was the feature of the evening's entertainment. The accident threatened a serious termination, and for a few moments the spectators were wrought up to a high state of excitement.

Lieut. Fred Alpers, a prominent rider at the country club race meets, rode a big strapping bay gelding, Commander, the property of Squadron C, N. Y. N. G. As the horse completed his third jump he broke away from his rider's control and made a dash for the gates leading to the arena. Lieut. Alpers had planned to pull up his mount by degrees, but before he was aware of the fact Commander had crashed into the gates.

Massed around the entrance, and standing on the promenade were several hundred spectators, who had scarcely time to escape the heels of the restive charger. A number were thrown to the ground, while the others in the vicinity made a wild scramble to escape injuries. Several grooms and helpers rushed to the assistance of the rider, and after a short while the horse was brought under control. The rearing and plunging of Commander had cleared the space, and the persons thrown to the floor in the haste to avoid the enraged animal were assisted to their feet. Max Tolive, a manufacturing tailor of 536 Kosciusko Street, Brooklyn, received a slight cut on the forehead, and Miss Kilovsky, his designer, was badly shaken up and had her dress torn. Several of the other women also had their clothing torn.

A peculiar feature in connection with the sensational incident occurred just before the class was called into the ring, when Lieut. Alpers said, "Watch me; I show them something before I get through," meaning that he expected to give his horse a smart performance. During the excitement Lieut. Alpers kept his seat and with his horse escaped injuries. He was loudly applauded for his pluck.

This is the second time this Fall that Lieut. Alpers has figured in a sensational contest. During the recent race meeting of the Meadow Brook Club at Belmont Terminal, when riding Mrs. Payne Whitney's Web Carter during a steeplechase race, he was thrown heavily at the Liverpool jump. He recovered his horse, remounted, and finished the race, securing a place among the first three horses.

Foreign army officers made a clean sweep of the event, which was for the Fairburn Cup. Several American horses qualified up to the last round, when four only were entered for a clean record. These were Sunrise, ridden by Lieut. Le Compte Albert d'Oultrement of Belgium, the winner; Ramuncho, with Chevellier Edward de Selliers de Moranville, also of Belgium; Romeo, piloted by Lieut. Marquis d'Orgeix of France, and Halcyon, owned by Col. Spencer Berden, U. S. A., and ridden by Major Putnam.

In the final round Halcyon, the only remaining American entrant, struck the water with his hind feet and was put out of the competition. Sunrise followed with a perfect score, while Ramuncho and Romeo committed slight faults and were penalized. They were placed by the judges in the order named, with Halcyon fourth.

Flashing around the brown tanbark ring teams of polo players clad in silk blouses of contrasting colors that would make a jockey's jacket look as subdued as a Quaker's gray or dim the richness of Joseph's coat were something new at the show yesterday. The kaleidoscopic changes marked the judging for a special cup between trios from the Great Neck, Rockchester, Country, Judith, Fishcatchers, and Cincinnati Polo Clubs. It is patriotic, as well as sporty, to be a polo enthusiast in these days, a feeling not unconnected with the defeat of successive challenging English polo teams on Long Island and the brilliant success of a certain cup. Consequently the spectators warmed up to the team class.

The polo ists did all they would have done in a game except to use mallets and a ball. The men rode each other off, displayed the speed of their ponies at sprinting and twisting about, and in all furnished an enlivening spectacle. Great Neck won the cup, which is merely incidental, as the picturesque was more enthralling than the competitive rivalry of the teams to the average beholder.

Fashion, high fashion, in the personnel of many charmingly attired women and young girls once again added animation to the assemblage, day and evening. Their escorts, quite as accurate and artistic sartorially, formed the proper background for the society chaperons and débutantes. Then there was the usual stream of casuals, dividing their glances equally between the fashionables and the horses, while over the rails and clustered in groups on the upper rows of seats were the eighteen-carat, dyed-in-the-wool horsey folks, quite oblivious of all save the competing horseman or horsewoman on the tanbark. Society bores these heartfelt horse enthusiasts.

"A fine horse show this," observed a waspy stable groom, turning with indifferent eyes from the sight of an expensive evening gown. "But there's too many swells about in park harness, says I."

Naturally, in the twenty-nine years of the New York show, the sort of horse best adapted for the different kinds of pleasure driving and riding has been thrashed out very thoroughly. Models from half the countries in the world have been used to set the types. At first the prizes for French coachers, English hackneys, Shetland ponies, Arabs, Irish hunters, and what not were won by the imported horses. Now the show has passed that stage. The exhibitors now win with home breds all down the line, and, as a consequent aid in advancing this happy consummation, classes now crop up for horses best suitable for this or that purpose. It is the interest in these developments, all of which are hastened by the use of the standard bred American trotter as an outcross, that keeps up the enthusiasm of the horsemen and gives a stamp to the fixture far beyond its value as a mere show or as a society fête.

For instance, that class for horses suitable to become middleweight hunters, none to be over 6 years and each to be up to carrying 180 pounds to hounds. No Dublin horse show, that nursery of hunters for the world, could bring forward better individuals than the eight lined out to be judged, but they have fifty there for five that is even now raised here. There was no jumping—only judging on the conformation, quality, paces, and so on—but every gentleman breeder and all of the cult down to the midget stable boys was in an obsession, entranced by the movements of the blue-ribbon aspirants and oblivious to all else until the judging was over. That's the way a horse show hits true horsemen! Edward B. McLean won this class with a big chestnut that he calls Highball, a statuesque beauty, a four-year-old, and "Daredevil" Dick Donnelly, who has sent more horses over seven-foot jumps than any rider of the shows, had the mount. Hunters had their innings day and evening, to the joy of the spectators. Canada, through the merits of the mare Mayfair, won the contest between fifty-six hunters or officers' horses over four flights of five-foot fences, with Russia second to the power of the mare Genga, Capt. Paul Rodzanko riding, and very cleverly, too.

The pretty girls looked sympathetic and sighed in sweet thrills when Capt. H. B. Parker, who broke his collar bone in a spill with a hunter Tuesday, appeared to ride with Miss L. L. Pfeiffer's man with his left arm strapped to his side with splints. The class was for pairs of saddle horses, owned by the same exhibitor, one to be ridden by a lady and the other by a gentleman. The prize, a cup won by Louis Sherry, went to Walter H. Hanley's Sir Evelyn and Glittering, Miss Rasmussen and J. H. Collins up; second were Evangeline and Sheila, riders Miss Belle Beach and Wright Allen; third, with Beau Sabreur and Grey Plover, Miss Fleitman and the undaunted Capt. Parker, while fourth were Dr. Garner and Talisman, the riders Mr. and Mrs. N. J. Hess, chatting and smiling together as though they were passing through a shaded country lane instead of in review before a throng.

Another plucky English rider was Major Richardson, who, since he sprained his ankle while exercising a hunter on Tuesday morning, has ridden all his hunters on only the left stirrup. Virtually he vaults from his crutches to the saddle, sticking on thereafter by sheer grit and consummate skill.

Next in the programme was a run-about class, the popular improvement on the side-bar road wagon that originated in New York some fifteen years ago. The winner was from Providence, R. I.—Walter H. Hanley, with the dainty stepper Jed—none of our local whips being "in the running." Gigs, the jaunty, high-wheeled carts, seldom seen now outside a show ring, were in evidence to make old-timers think of old times in the competition—the first for the Sir James Challenge Cup, the gift of Alfred G. Vanderbilt, in recognition and thankfulness because he won out the Nala Cup for gigs last year. These cups for high steppers have three strings to them, for they have to be won that many times, and they keep up the interest in gig classes. A man who wins one, puts up another, but stands out, and so on.

There were six in for the Sir James Cup, including two women—Miss Long and Miss Viau—which was unusual, the gig being essentially one when in real vogue for gay bachelors going a-racing and a-courting. Judge William H. Moore won in the easiest possible way with Lord Seaton. Miss Long was reserve, with Consternation.

Willow King, a magnificent ladies' hunter, rounded out twenty-two straight victories when Miss Mary L. Thompson of Rye piloted the Glen Ridden Farm's entry over the jumps without a blemish. Compared with the riding of the men in the jumping classes, the clever work of the women in the saddle showed a decided superiority.

Women came into their own in the class for ladies' saddle horses, ridden by women on side saddle. Avoca, an exceedingly well mannered horse, ridden by Miss L. Webb, found favor with the judges after a close contest with Searchlight, with Miss Van Wyck in the saddle. Avoca is a splendid type of saddler of rich chestnut color and answers to all the requirements of a saddle horse. Searchlight, the winner of the second prize, showed up well under the paces, but was somewhat deficient in build.

Roadster pairs showed both speed and quality and the appearance of Ruby and Lasca, from the stables of E. T. Stotesbury of Philadelphia, repeated their former successes in this division by capturing the blue award in one of the best aggregation of light harness horses seen in the Garden.

The Sherry Cup for pairs of saddle horses ridden by a woman and man was a difficult class to judge, owing to the different types of the pairs. This was particularly the case with Miss H. D. Atterbury's Nickel Plate and Quicksilver, both of which have been notable winners on the Summer circuit. Individually the pair compares favorably with any saddle horses in the Garden, but when judged as a pair failed to meet the requirements of the class and got the gate. The blue rosette went to Walter H. Hanley's Sir Evelyn and Glittering Glory, a strapping pair of bays, which were ridden by Miss Helen Raemussen and J. H. Collins respectively. Miss Claribel Jefferson's Evangeline and Sheila, cleverly handled by Miss Belle Beach and Wright Allen, were placed second.

The jumping class was divided into two sections the first being judged during the morning session, while the second closed the afternoon show. It was the first open jumping event in which the foreign and American army horses competed against American jumpers. It proved another victory for the Canadians, who have been very much in evidence in the jumping classes. Mayfair, a sturdy type of the cross-country horse, entered by Capt. J. W. Sifton and ridden by Jack Hamilton, was easily the best of the fifty-six entries, while Skyscraper, another of the Sifton entries, accounted for the fourth award. Russia got into the money with Capt. Paul Rodzanko's Genga, which was placed second. America's sole representative in the ribbons was Why Not, from Boston.

SOCIETY IN CUBIST COLORS.

Gowns Similar to Early '70s Also Worn—Mrs. Gary's Rope of Diamonds.

All the boxes were filled last night at the Horse Show, and there was also a large attendance of society at the afternoon session. While the colors of fashion revealed much gobelin and peacock blue, cerise, white and black, and scarlet, the cubist note was struck in several instances. Mrs. Edward B. McLean of Washington, D. C., who had Miss Margaret Andrews as her guest in Box 51, wore a gorgeous cloak of salmon pink and yellow with yellow fur, and her bandeau had all the cubist colors combined. Mrs. Lyttleton Fox, who was with Mrs. Reginald Vanderbilt at the night performance, had cubist flowers on her hat.

Mme. Bakhméteff, wife of the Russian Ambassador, wore a brique colored cloak with sables at the afternoon performance, and an immense diamond horseshoe brooch. Mrs. E. H. Gary's glittering rope of diamonds attracted much attention last night. Miss Marie Tailer, one of the prettiest débutantes of the season, appeared in a fetching costume of black, slashed with geranium red. Mrs. J. Lee Tailer was in black. Bryce Wiley was with them.

Some of the gowns worn harked back to the early 70s, notably the black velvet costume worn last night by Mrs. Mitchell Henry, who was the guest of Mrs. Alfred Vanderbilt, with the old-fashioned decolletage of ermine. Mrs. Reginald Vanderbilt wore an afternoon gown of bottle green edged with fitch fur, and Miss Kathryn Bache, the débutante daughter of Jules Bache, who was with his daughter, appeared in a cloak of peacock blue with white fox. Mrs. Alfred Vanderbilt's beautiful white fox furs were seen at the afternoon session. Miss Vera Van Buren wore a stunning plum-colored costume at the afternoon session, edged with fitch fur, with a huge muff of the same fur.

Justice Goff a Spectator.

Justice Goff looked down on the brilliant assembly last night from the omnibus box of the association club rooms, directly over the entrance. There were newcomers seen on every side. J. Henry Alexandre, who is to marry Miss Anne Loomis in Detroit on Nov. 29, paid a visit to the Reginald Vanderbilt box, No. 14, during the evening. Mr. and Mrs. W. Lanier Washington, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Ryle, and Mrs. Philip Rhinelander were in Box 39 with Robert Booraem. Mr. and Mrs. E. Francis Hyde, who have the box for the week, were at the opera last night, entertaining Judge and Mrs. George C. Holt, Miss Sylvia Holt, and Harry Moore.

Mr. and Mrs. Marsden Perry of Providence entertained Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Duer Irving and McDougall Hawkes in an arena box, and Mr. and Mrs. James C. Barr of Boston were in Box 11 at both sessions, having with them Mrs. Barr's daughter, Miss Jane Fairfield, who is to be a débutante next season.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph W. Harriman had a party of young men with their débutante daughter, Miss Miriam Harriman, and Miss Mary Alexander, the débutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Alexander, last night. Mrs. Harriman was in rich peacock blue brocade, with a large black velvet hat, and Miss Alexander wore a simple frock of white charmeuse and chiffon, with a small hat lined with black velvet and topped with gardenias, which encircled a crown of panne velvet. Miss Harriman was in white, with a large black velvet hat, and she wore a Murat collar of ermine.

Mrs. J. McCarty Little was with Mrs. Alfred Vanderbilt during the afternoon, and for a time nine persons were seated in Box 13, including Lieut. R. M. Stewart of the Eleventh Hussars, who is now forced to use a crutch owing to the injury to his ankle; also Mrs. J. Gordon Douglas, little Miss Cathleen Vanderbilt, in a rose-colored frock, and a young girl friend, were with Mrs. Vanderbilt for a time.

Mrs. Frederic Nellson, in black, paid a visit to the exhibition last night. Mrs. Edwin Gould, in chocolate brown, for the first time was seen on the promenade during the afternoon, when a rumor was circulated that Miss Helen D. Huntington, Vincent Astor's fiancée, was in Box 15. When the box instantly became the target for the camera men, but they had to withdraw in disappointment to Ward H. Hanley's Sir Evelyn and Miss Rasmussen and J. H. Collins up; third, with Beau Sabreur and Grey Plover, Miss Fleitman and the undaunted Capt. Parker, while fourth were Dr. Garner and Talisman, the riders Mr. and Mrs. N. J. Hess, chatting and smiling together as though they were passing through a shaded country lane instead of in review before a throng.

Another plucky English rider was Major Richardson, who, since he sprained his ankle while exercising a hunter on Tuesday morning, has ridden all his hunters on only the left stirrup. Virtually he vaults from his crutches to the saddle, sticking on thereafter by sheer grit and consummate skill.

Next in the programme was a run-about class, the popular improvement on the side-bar road wagon that originated in New York some fifteen years ago. The winner was from Providence, R. I.—Walter H. Hanley, with the dainty stepper Jed—none of our local whips being "in the running." Gigs, the jaunty, high-wheeled carts, seldom seen now outside a show ring, were in evidence to make old-timers think of old times in the competition—the first for the Sir James Challenge Cup, the gift of Alfred G. Vanderbilt, in recognition and thankfulness because he won out the Nala Cup for gigs last year. These cups for high steppers have three strings to them, for they have to be won that many times, and they keep up the interest in gig classes. A man who wins one, puts up another, but stands out, and so on.

There were six in for the Sir James Cup, including two women—Miss Long and Miss Viau—which was unusual, the gig being essentially one when in real vogue for gay bachelors going a-racing and a-courting. Judge William H. Moore won in the easiest possible way with Lord Seaton. Miss Long was reserve, with Consternation.

Willow King, a magnificent ladies' hunter, rounded out twenty-two straight victories when Miss Mary L. Thompson of Rye piloted the Glen Ridden Farm's entry over the jumps without a blemish. Compared with the riding of the men in the jumping classes, the clever work of the women in the saddle showed a decided superiority.

Women came into their own in the class for ladies' saddle horses, ridden by women on side saddle. Avoca, an exceedingly well mannered horse, ridden by Miss L. Webb, found favor with the judges after a close contest with Searchlight, with Miss Van Wyck in the saddle. Avoca is a splendid type of saddler of rich chestnut color and answers to all the requirements of a saddle horse. Searchlight, the winner of the second prize, showed up well under the paces, but was somewhat deficient in build.

Roadster pairs showed both speed and quality and the appearance of Ruby and Lasca, from the stables of E. T. Stotesbury of Philadelphia, repeated their former successes in this division by capturing the blue award in one of the best aggregation of light harness horses seen in the Garden.

The Sherry Cup for pairs of saddle horses ridden by a woman and man was a difficult class to judge, owing to the different types of the pairs. This was particularly the case with Miss H. D. Atterbury's Nickel Plate and Quicksilver, both of which have been notable winners on the Summer circuit. Individually the pair compares favorably with any saddle horses in the Garden, but when judged as a pair failed to meet the requirements of the class and got the gate. The blue rosette went to Walter H. Hanley's Sir Evelyn and Glittering Glory, a strapping pair of bays, which were ridden by Miss Helen Raemussen and J. H. Collins respectively. Miss Claribel Jefferson's Evangeline and Sheila, cleverly handled by Miss Belle Beach and Wright Allen, were placed second.

The jumping class was divided into two sections the first being judged during the morning session, while the second closed the afternoon show. It was the first open jumping event in which the foreign and American army horses competed against American jumpers. It proved another victory for the Canadians, who have been very much in evidence in the jumping classes. Mayfair, a sturdy type of the cross-country horse, entered by Capt. J. W. Sifton and ridden by Jack Hamilton, was easily the best of the fifty-six entries, while Skyscraper, another of the Sifton entries, accounted for the fourth award. Russia got into the money with Capt. Paul Rodzanko's Genga, which was placed second. America's sole representative in the ribbons was Why Not, from Boston.

GOV. TENER TO HEAD NATIONAL LEAGUE

Pennsylvania's Chief Executive Will Be Only Honorary President Until Jan. 1, 1915.

PHILADELPHIA, Penn., Nov. 19.—Gov. Tener, upon his arrival here tonight from Harrisburg, stated that he had agreed to accept the Presidency of the National League of Baseball Clubs for a term of four years. He has been assured of the unanimous support of the eight club Presidents, four of whom consulted with him to-day at the State capitol, while the others were informed of the progress of the negotiations by long-distance telephone.

Although he has agreed to accept an election at the next meeting of the National League in New York on Dec. 9, Gov. Tener declared that he will not assume any duties that will interfere with his responsibilities as Chief Executive of Pennsylvania. Until his term as Governor expires in January, 1915, he will not accept any salary from the National League, and will head that organization merely in an honorary capacity, the Governor declared. He declined to say what his salary will be when he has completed his term as Governor and assumes all the duties of the Presidency of the National League.

HARRISBURG, Penn., Nov. 19.—Gov. Tener said to-night that only a few minor details were to be arranged before his acceptance of the Presidency of the National League of Baseball Clubs. He made this statement on his way to a train for Philadelphia after a four-and-a-half-hour conference with a committee of four representing the clubs of the league, and Charles H. Ebbets of the Brooklyn Club stated that he regarded the matter as all settled.

The offer of the Presidency of the league was accompanied by assurances of the votes of all clubs from H. W. Hempstead, representing the New York Club; Harry Ackerland, representing Chicago; Charles H. Ebbets, representing Brooklyn, and W. F. Baker, representing Philadelphia. Barney Dreyfuss, Pittsburgh; B. B. Britton, St. Louis; August Herrmann, representing Cincinnati, and J. E. Gaffney, Boston, were unable to be here, but it was stated that they were in accord with the proposition to elect the Governor as President at the meeting in New York on Dec. 9.

The committee members were guests of the Governor at luncheon and spent the whole afternoon closeted with him at the Executive mansion. They left at 5:30 for Philadelphia, where the Governor is to attend a function to-night.

On the way to the train the Governor said:

"We had hoped the matter would be settled, but some minor points in the negotiations remain to be considered, and the representatives here will consult with their colleagues who are not present. These matters will be taken up later."

"We regard the matter as all settled," said Mr. Ebbets when asked for a statement.

The Governor then continued: "In case I accept the Presidency of the National League I will not resign as Governor. Neither will I give my attention to the affairs of the league for the balance of my term as Governor."

It was suggested to the Governor that it looked as though he would be chosen and he replied:

"It looks that way. I do not know that the terms in detail are of any special interest, but I will accept when they are all arranged."

It is understood that the Governor desired to have some further communication from the club owners not here, but from all accounts all have declared that they desire him and the representatives here said they considered it as closed.

The term will be for five years and $25,000, according to reports circulated, but about which the Governor and the representatives would not make any official statement. Neither would they say what were the minor points referred to by the Governor.

Fritz Maisel's Life Contract.

Special to The New York Times.

BUFFALO, Nov. 19.—Fritz Maisel, third baseman of the New York Americans, signed a life contract to-day. The young chap, for whom Frank Chance paid $12,000 to Manager Jack Dunn of the Baltimore team, this morning escorted Christine Hoerl of Baltimore into the City Clerk's office here, and got a marriage license. Jack Riley, the license clerk, umpired the signing of the contract, and remarked that Fritz had scored the home run. Later the Baltimore Baseball Internationl League team escorted the blushing pair into the City Court, and Judge Thomas Noonan quickly performed the wedding ceremony. Mrs. Maisel is 22 years old and pretty.

American League Meets Here Mar. 7

CHICAGO, Nov. 19.—The annual Spring meeting of the American League will not be held in New York until March 7, according to an announcement to-day by Ban B. Johnson, President of the league. The meeting usually is held in February for the purpose of passing on the league's playing schedule, but will be postpone d,owing to the absence of President Comiskey of the Chicago Club, and McAleer, who will be due on March 6.

Lafayette Runners Win.

Special to The New York Times.

EASTON, Penn., Nov. 10.—Lafayette smothered Rutgers in a cross-country meet this afternoon, which was run over the Lafayette course. The score was 19 to 36, with the lowest score winning the meet. Otto of Lafayette came in first, his time being 31 minutes 45 seconds. The course was 5½ miles, running from the Northampton Country Club to March Field and lapping the quarter-mile track once. The time of the race was not particularly good. The run was hotly contested till the very end, when Lafayette forged ahead and won easily.

Federal League Wants Marquard.

Special to The New York Times.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Nov. 19.—Pitcher "Rube" Marquard of the New York Giants was approached here to-day by an agent of the Federal League, asking if he would consider a proposition to join that league. Rube turned it down, stating that he expected a contract from Secretary Foster this week which he intends signing for next year.

GIANTS SAIL FOR JAPAN.

World-Circling Baseball Clubs Close American Exhibition Tour at Seattle

By JOHN J. McGRAW,
Manager of New York Giants.

Special to The New York Times.

SEATTLE, Wash., Nov. 19.—With the calling off of the games scheduled for Tacoma this morning and Seattle this afternoon on account of rain, our American portion of the globe-circling trip came to a close. To-night we are scheduled to sail on the steamship Empress of Japan for that long part of our journey which will keep us away from the United States until next March.

The calling off of to-day's games was a big disappointment to all concerned. Had we been able to go through with the programme we would have completed thirty-three games in thirty-three days since we began our tour of the States at Cincinnati on Oct. 18. We had only two previous postponements—at Abilene, Texas, on Nov. 4, and at Sacramento on Nov. 12—but two games on Nov. 16 at Oakland and San Francisco made up for one game, and the double-header to-day would have made up for the other, and thereby have given us a game per day record. However, both Mr. Comiskey and I feel that we were very fortunate in playing as many games as we did. Both the crowds and the receipts have been up to expectations, and we leave America confident that the tour will be a success.

Players of both teams were eager to get into action to-day, as many bets were to be decided by one of the teams winning both games. The long jaunt brought out many good natured arguments and not a few wagers between the boys as to which team would win the greater number of games before we left Vancouver for Yokohama. When we left Oxnard, Cal., on the night of Nov. 11, it seemed a certainty that the Giants would be leading at the time of sailing, but the boys came through with some fine playing since that time and my boys were able to get only two victories out of seven games. Each team had fifteen victories and one tie at the close of yesterday's game in Portland, and naturally all the players were anxious to break the deadlock to-day.

Since we opened at Cincinnati on Oct. 18 we have played games in twenty-seven different cities and towns and were ready to play in four other cities where rain prevented any game being played. These games were played in eleven different States and we passed through other States during the tour. In every city that we visited we were royally received and banquets were arranged wherever we found it possible to stop. The American tour has given us a big start toward making the big trip a financial success.

To Interpret Basket Ball Rules.

The annual interpretation meeting of the basketball rules committee of the National Collegiate Athletic Association is to be held at the Hotel Astor, on Friday afternoon, Nov. 28, according to notices which have been sent out by Ralph Morgan, Secretary. Although there have been few changes in the rules of the game since the close of the last season, it is the purpose of Dr. Joseph E. Raycroft, Chairman of the association, and Mr. Morgan, to see that officials are thoroughly instructed in various points which have given rise to dispute. A report will probably be made at that meeting of the work of the board of officials which assigns officials for basketball contests much the same as the similiar board of the football rules committee.

Rutt Not Coming for Cycle Race.

Andre Perchicot, the crack French sprinter, is to mee Frank Kramer in a three cornered match race at Madison Garden on Dec. 5, the Friday night preceding the start of this years six-day grind. Jackie Clarke, the Australian speed king, will probably be the third entry. This will make the race an international affair with America, Australia and Europe competing for the World's sprinting championship. Perchicot is to take the place of Walter Rutt, the big German star who had a bad fall two weeks ago while riding in Paris, and will not be able to come here for his proposed match race with Kramer or to ride in the six-day event.

De Stefano Wins Road Race.

C. De Stefano, running unattached, finished first last night in the weekly road race of the St. Vincent Ferrer Athletic Club over a distance measuring about four and one-quarter miles, part of which was run around Central Park. A large field faced the starter, but Stefano had little difficulty in maintaining the leading position almost from the start of the race, and crossed the finish line a winner in 23:03. J. Egan was the first St. Vincent Ferrer runner to cross the line, and he was tenth in 26:24. The order of the finish follows:

C. De Stefano, unattached, 23:03; J. Brunson, Salem-Crescent A. C., 24:06; T. Harris, Salem-Crescent A. C., 24:15; J. Braccia, Trinity Club, 24:41; M. Collins, Union Settlement of the, 25:13; F. Hughes, unattached, 20:50; J. Hughes, unattached, 30:51.

Tome Working Hard for Last Game.

Special to The New York Times.

PORT DEPOSIT, Md., Nov. 19.—The Varsity squad of the Tome School for Boys is working hard this week in preparation for its game on Saturday with the Pennsylvania State Normal School of Millersville. Coach Smith has high hopes of winning this game which is Tome's final one of the season. He says his team is in far better shape than it has been this season. A fine spirit pervades the squad, and in spite of the unfortunate year, they are working hard and faithfully up to the last moment. In the intra-school football games, the Olympians have been uniformly victorious, defeating their rivals, the Pythians in every game so far.

SEVEN MEN TEAMS IN HOCKEY LEAGUE

Amateur Hockey Body Votes Against Reducing Number to Six Contestants.

There was a protracted session of the Executive Committee of the Amateur Hockey League last night at the St. Nicholas Rink, which was occasioned by questions which usually vex the legislators of the chief Winter sport at this time of the year. Those who took action on what they deemed for the best interests of the game were William Russell, Hockey Club, Chairman; R. L. Von Bermuth, St. Nicholas Skating Club, Secretary; Richard Condon, Wanderers Club; James O'Brien, Irish-American A. C., and Sterling Martin, Crescent A. C.

The discussion of the McGrath case, which touched upon the reinstatement of the member of the Wanderers, who, with Ernie Garon, was expelled at the finish of the season two Winters ago. McGrath applied for reinstatement last Spring, and last night's session is the first at which the organization was able to take action, which resulted in his desire for reinstatement being acceded to, so that he will be in the line-up of his team at an early date.

What developed into the longest discussion of the evening was that in connection with the six men versus seven men team proposition. Up to date the teams as they have played in championship matches hereabouts have been composed of seven men, and it was stated prior to the meeting that the St. Nicholas S. C and the Hockey Club, the present champions, were opposed to the change from seven to six men teams. It was further stated that the Crescents and the Irish-Americans were in favor of the six-man proposition.

When it came to a vote, however, it developed that the Wanderers, I.-A. A. C., and Crescents wanted six men, while Russell, Von Bermuth, and O'Donnell, acting for the New York A. C., stood out for seven men. The vote being a deadlock, Russell as President cast his vote for seven men, and as such the teams will play during the coming season. The players will be numbered, this having been made obligatory.

The new Governing Committee elected was William Russell, R. Von Bermuth, and Richard Condon. The Schedule Committee, composed of the Governing Committee and W. Dobby, Crescent A. C., and L. De Casanova of the Hockey Club will meet on Friday night and prepare the schedule for the season's games.

Y. M. C. A. Athletics.

The athletes of the Twenty-third Street Branch of the Young Men's Christian Association contested in their first se tof bi-monthly indoor games of the season in the clubhouse gymnasium last night, and some keen competition resulted. The closest competition was witnessed in the twenty-five-yard dash, the final of which event was won by James Murphy in 0:03 1-5. An unusually large field faced the starter in the event, and four heats, in all of which the running was of the nip-and-tuck variety, were necessary to decide the contest in the final heat. The high jumping event was al soa close affair, a tie resulting for second honors between Lhuilier and A. Williams. Both athletes crossed the bar at 5 feet 4 inches, and the toss of a coin decided in favor of Williams for second honors. The summary:

25-Yard Dash.—Won by J. Murphy; R. Engle, second; Johnson, third. Time—0:03 1-5.

600-Yard Run.—Won by S. H. Cobb; Johnson, second; O. H. Clayberger, third. Time—1:19½.

High Jump.—Won by Johnson, with a jump of 5 feet 6 inches; A. Williams, second, 5 feet 4 inches; Lhuilier, third, 5 feet 4 inches.

Twelve-Pound Shot Put, Handicap.—Won by J. Beachy, scratch, distance 48 feet 6¾ inches; L. Sharpe, (1 foot,) second, distance 39 feet 3¼ inches; George Schneider, (1 foot,) third, distance 38 feet 2¾ inches.

Two-Lap Relay Race.—Won by The Intermediate Group; General Group, second; Graduate Intermediate Group, third. Time—1:23 2-5.

Pastime's Fine Entry.

The five-mile handicap road race of the Pastime Athletic Club, which is scheduled for next Sunday over the Brazilian Cross course in the Bronx, starting from the club house at Jerome Avenue and 162d Street, has attracted a number of the best distance men in this territory, and a good race seems assured from a glance at the list and the prizes which will reward the best men at the finish. Handicapper Oborne has announced that he will receive entries up to Saturday morning of this week, and in accordance with his custom of giving away long marks to the novices anticipates the receipt of a number of combinations of non-winners. A bronze statue will be awarded to first man at the finish, a similar prize to second, and a silver cup to third. A handsome plaque will be the team prize in addition to a gold cup for each of the winning team. There will also be fast time and novice prizes. Practice runs are held from the clubhouse every Thursday evening.

Bronx Church House Games.

The second annual athletic games of the Bronx Church House and the Second Battery will be held Dec. 6 at the Battery armory, 168th Street and Franklin Avenue. The open events include a 75-yard dash for novices, a 75-yard handicap, 1,320-yard handicap, five-mile handicap, one-mile handicap walk, one-mile handicap relay for small clubs, running high jump and putting the 12-pound shot. Spiked shoes may be used on this track which is considered one of the best in the Metropolitan district. An effort is being made to secure Howard Drew to run in the dashes.

THE WAITING POLICY.

What some of our people are inclined to call Mr. WILSON'S want of a policy toward Mexico is very likely the best possible policy. It would not have been BISMARCK'S way—he would have forced HUERTA'S hand by intolerable provocations. But BISMARCK'S purposes would have been different. The aims of his policy would have been, first war, then conquest. We want to avoid war, and conquest is no part of our design.

Some problems solve themselves. There is still a very great probability that this problem will be solved by the action of the Mexicans. We have confined ourselves to the single declaration that we cannot recognize the Government of HUERTA. We have had no thought of deposing him. That is for the Mexicans themselves. It is a process we cannot hasten. Before HUERTA goes out there must be a provisional Government to take his place. Until such a Government has been created, it can be no part of our policy to hasten HUERTA'S departure, for without a Government there would be anarchy. It is for that reason, that the temporary arrangement for carrying on the work of administration in the City of Mexico must be made by the Mexicans. If peace and public order are to be preserved, the temporary Government must be acceptable to them, must be respected by them, and the steps it may take to order a new election must be such as they will approve. These matters are necessarily beyond our control. We cannot very well hasten them, save as persistence in our policy of not recognizing HUERTA tends, as more and more it must tend, to convince the Mexicans that in their own interest HUERTA must yield his executive power into other hands.

In this policy it seems certain that time works with us and against the Dictator. He cannot indefinitely hold out; he is threatened on too many sides. Not only the Constitutionalists, armed, in the field, and winning occasional victories, are a serious menace to him, but he is losing support among the better men of Mexico. Some of them have withdrawn from association with him; others he has disposed of. Moreover, he knows now that instead of giving him aid and comfort, the European Powers are content to leave the problem in our hands for solution. For him it is a process of starvation, slow but almost certainly sure. It is not at all likely that by any act of violence or by encouraging or permitting any lawless outbreaks against Americans or American interests HUERTA will hasten the coming of his doom. That would be an act of incredible hardihood and folly. The waiting policy naturally prolongs our period of anxiety—we want peace and security on our border; we want order formally established in Mexico. But the alternative is action by armed force, the very thing we are most anxious to avoid. There is as yet no visible reason why we should depart from our policy of letting the Mexicans bring about the needed readjustment of their affairs.

A LAW TO GUARD DESIGNS.

At the meeting about to convene in this city of several hundred manufacturers and importers, representing seventeen trades in the conduct of which original designs play an important part, an attempt will be made to draw a Federal bill permitting the registration of these designs at a low fee. At present designs and patterns are often pirated unless covered by patents which are difficult and costly to obtain, slow of issuance, and not easily defended in the courts. The fact that the designs of foreign merchandise which will be exhibited at the Panama-Pacific Exhibition in San Francisco will be amply protected by the terms of the new Kahn law, while American manufacturers are not only unprotected, but exposed to new dangers of foreign infringement, makes the work of drawing a new bill necessary.

It will be difficult to frame a proper bill. Mr. A. P. HAIRE, editor of Dress Essentials, notes that under our present patent laws an importer may be prosecuted for infringement of a lace design bought by him in good faith from a European manufacturer who has pirated it and offers it for sale among hundreds of other designs. Some method must be provided by which American importers may know whether textile designs brought in from Europe infringe upon American patents.

Another grave difficulty presents itself in the case of designs prepared by adapting ideas embodied in old historic laces, tapestries, paintings, armor, and books. As some of the best "creations" are derived from historic sources, and the adaptations require the services of skilled artists, it would seem that they should have protection as well as original designs. But the Federal Constitution provides that Congress shall have power to promote the useful arts by issuing patents only upon writings and "discoveries." Can the definition of discoveries embrace these adaptations of old ideas? Of course, the Interstate Commerce clause of the Constitution, which gives Congress full and broad powers of regulation in interstate trade, may be invoked at this point. Certainly it would be unfortunate if new designs which represent a steady development of the best thought and practice of the past may not be protected.

FAST MAIL MOTOR CARS.

It is possible to overreach one's self in an argument. Mr. JAMES STEWART, Second Assistant Postmaster General, in his letter to the Board of Aldermen, arguing that mail wagons should be exempt from the regular traffic rules and be permitted to exceed the speed limit, says that the running time to the railroad terminals, as a rule, does not "exceed nine miles an hour."

If that is so, then why exempt the mail wagons? The speed limit is fifteen miles an hour under the regular traffic rules—subject, of course, to reasonable care in avoiding collisions. Mr. STEWART'S talk about the impossibility of maintaining the Post Office schedules if the mail wagons are subjected to the requirements applying to ordinary traffic is futile, granted that nine miles an hour is the speed required to keep to the schedules. Within the past two months the big mail trucks have killed half a dozen people and injured several more. It might be thought that the lives of pedestrians are of even greater value than the maintaining of mail schedules. Why does Mr. STEWART wish his nine-mile-an-hour trucks to be exempted from a speed limit of fifteen miles?

THE PERIL TO THE SCHOOLS.

Within the last few days Mayor KLINE has received protests against the reappointment of Mr. CHURCHILL to the Board of Education that, we should suppose, would make it practically impossible. One of these protests was from the Public Education Association, setting forth facts with which the readers of THE TIMES are already familiar. The second was from a number of "citizens and taxpayers who are specially concerned with education." These are the names signed to the protest:

NICHOLAS MURRAY BUTLER, President of Columbia University.
HENRY S. PRITCHETT.
FELIX ADLER.
JULIUS SACHS
FREDERICK J. E. WOODBRIDGE, Dean of Graduate Faculties, Columbia University.
WALLACE BUTTRICK.
ABRAHAM FLEXNER.
CHARLES C. BURLINGHAM.
HENRY W. TAFT.
FELIX M. WARBURG.
FREDERIC R. COUDERT.
OTTO T. BANNARD.
SETH LOW.

Here is a list of names of men whose knowledge and experience in education entitle them to the highest respect. They have and can have but one aim, the welfare of the schools and of the pupils in the schools. They point out the specific directions in which this welfare is being sacrificed to class and personal interests. There are two principles which cannot be abandoned without the gravest danger. One is the selection and promotion of teachers in accordance with their merit; the other is the administration of the schools through responsible professional officers. Both these principles have been not only abandoned but violated, and this in a systematic, persistent, and ingenious fashion that has all the earmarks of careful design. In this work Mr. CHURCHILL and his immediate associates have been intimately concerned.

The worst feature of the situation is that it has led to the formation among the teachers of something very like a trade union in which naturally it is not the best who lead. And this in its turn has led to the introduction of methods and aims closely akin to those of the politicians. We have seen to what lengths this movement could be carried in the notorious McKee bills pushed through the Legislature last Winter, and which were perfect and detestable examples of the worst form of special legislation of the extreme Tammany sort. The main object of these bills was to take power away from responsible officers and centre it in the Board of Education, with the addition of a special provision for the advantage of one of the chief manipulators of the movement. It can easily be seen how completely the whole teaching force would be demoralized if this system were to have full sway, as it would have if Mr. CHURCHILL could accomplish it.

The fundamental principle in the organization of the educational department in this city is that the board shall attend to the business side and the professionals to the teaching side. If faithfully and intelligently applied, this is undoubtedly the best conceivable principle. Mr. CHURCHILL and his associates do not think so, and they have done all that lay in their power to overthrow it. Had Tammany regained control of the city there is no telling what would have been the limit to the revolution in the schools. Fortunately Tammany was routed all along the line. It happens that in the next few weeks Mayor KLINE has the appointment of the successors to Mr. CHURCHILL and a number of his closest supporters. It is not to be expected that in the use of the power thus lodged in his hands the Mayor will care to follow the policy that Tammany would have pursued. We think that he can be relied on to select other and better men. In rejecting those that have proved unfit for their trust he will be amply sustained by the best public opinion.

MUDDLING THE BANK BILL.

"Lawful money" has gone into and out of the Banking bill so often that interest whether it is in or out is succeeded by curiosity as to the reasons why it appears and disappears. The one sure thing is that the phrase is not put in and out on any principle of banking. Principles do not work both ways. If the committees would adopt some sort of principles to guide their work they would spare themselves labor and the public mystification.

The new notes are not to be legal tender, according to the latest phase, but the banks are to be allowed to redeem them in lawful money. The reserves are further to be deteriorated for an uncertain length of time by allowing half of them to be commercial paper suitable for rediscounts. Commercial paper as assets has no superior. As bank reserves payable on demand it is a novelty, and leaves something to be desired. The plan would seem likely to remove the last fear of contraction of currency. Under the present system a bank with a million of reserves could grant credits of four millions. It has been calculated that under the new system, with a lower percentage of reserves, and with the rediscount privilege, the ratio of reserves to loans would be between twice and thrice that. There can be no doubt that there will be much shifting of reserves, but it does not follow that there need be contraction of loans for that reason. Loans can be shifted as well as reserves, and the bankers of Wall Street in particular can be trusted to work the plan, if it is workable, in the manner least trying to borrowers.

Congress is trying both to draft and work the bill. If it will draft the bill right it will have done its share. In whatever form the bill is passed it will have to go through a process such as the Treasury regulations made familiar in the case of the income tax. The wit of man is not competent to foresee all contingencies, and to enact provision for them in a statute. That politicians ignoring principle, rejecting banking advice, thinking only of the votes of the least informed, or most misinformed, portion of the community, should succeed altogether in their patriotic endeavors is least likely. Their daily behavior is an unconscious revelation of the manner in which such a law should not be prepared.

THE SALE OF BICHLORIDE TABLETS.

Marketed in sixteen varying sizes, five different shapes, and five different colors, not a single preparation of antiseptic tablets containing the deadly poison known as corrosive mercuric chloride, bichloride of mercury, corrosive sublimate—or simply "bichloride" or "sublimate"—is put up with a label properly indicating the fact that it contains highly toxic materials. Persons who mistake these tablets for a medicine cannot tell by the form or color that the tasteless composition is dangerous. In the latest report of the Public Health Service at Washington, Dr. MARTIN I. WILBERT, Technical Assistant in the Hygienic Laboratory, suggests that a type form of the pastilles be introduced into the United States Pharmacopeia; perhaps the description of mercuric chloride tablets included in the German Pharmacopeia should be adopted as the international form in view of rapidly growing trade in drugs between the different countries of the world.

The German Pharmacopeia provides that pastilles containing this poison be made of equal parts with common salt, that they be colored bright red with aniline dye, have a cylindrical shape, and be twice as long as thick. Wrapped individually in black paper bearing the word "poison" in white letters, with a stated weight of tablet, which is to be wrapped and dispensed only in suitable glass bottles or tubes. This official form would gradually become popular and discourage the sale and use of preparations in other forms. In addition, Dr. WILBERT suggests to purchasers that the tablets be kept apart from other non-poisonous preparations; moreover, "restrict "newspapers from publishing unnecessary details in regard to the "nature and kind of poison used in "cases of accidental or intentional "poisoning."

Suicides are neither prevented nor made by reports in newspapers. It is true that since the publication of noted cases of mercuric chloride poisoning persons who might have killed themselves in some other way have chosen this means of suicide. But sufferers from melancholia are extremely sensitive to suggestions of any sort, which may be perfectly harmless to a normal mind. A news report of mercuric poisoning might, indeed, offer an occasion for suicide; it could hardly be its cause, any more than passing by an open window would be a cause of suicide, or crossing a street in front of moving cars. The remedy is to guard closely persons who show symptoms of abnormality. Nevertheless, it would be wise to put up in distinctive form any poison in common household use, so that it might never be mistaken for a harmless preparation.

MISSOURI ADMITS BEING SHOWN.

The Attorney General of Missouri dismissed on Friday his suits against 134 insurance companies as a conspiracy in restraint of trade. What could not be done with a club has been done by reasonable consideration of the merits of the case. Instead of trying to force insurance rates down the State has been brought to see that rates were not unreasonably high, considering the losses of the business which were made possible by weak regulation, not of the insurance companies, but of their customers' risks.

When the State became reasonable the companies became amenable. The business is to be made safer and the rates are to be cheaper, and better proportioned to the various sorts of risks. Both companies and the State are pleased and all is well. The same result might have been reached more easily by the light of reason, but that is not the politicians' way.

TAMMANY'S INCOME.

Sub-section G (a), of the Income Tax act, provides exemption to "civic leagues or organizations not organized for profit." The terms "civic league" and "organizations not organized for profit" may, possibly, be construed as having been used disjunctively. An enthusiastic Fusionist who has studied the act raised the question whether the Tammany Society is exempt from payment of a tax on its income.

Tammany Hall, of course, is exempt because, unfortunately, its membership has been identified with the Democratic Party of this State. It is believed that the Tammany Society, an entity kept in close partnership with the Hall, can have no other reason for being than profit. Is it, therefore, out of the category exempted? The difficulty lies in considering the status of the Society, not as organized for profit, but for legitimate profit. We have already suggested that the levy of 1 per cent. on Mr. MURPHY'S campaign assessments would be a sort of "collection at the source," and perhaps that solves the difficulty.

MILEAGE GRAFT.

Some Congressmen are demanding that Congress shall adjourn in order that they may collect the money allowed them for travel to and from their homes. They are not asking for the perquisite in order that they may spend the money going home, for that would leave nothing in their pockets. Neither do most of them want to go home, for they are there already in such numbers that the lack of a quorum is a scandal. What the Congressmen want is such an addition to their salaries as would come from the difference between their travel cost and their travel allowance. The motive is as petty as the perquisite. If there is no other way of getting the laws the country needs the little levy must be paid, but it will leave its mark on whoever takes it. Congress is paid by the year, and many would prefer that it should take eleven months' holiday. But a grant of mileage money as a gift, not for travel, is objectionable.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Assumption Involving a Fallacy.

It is highly characteristic of the way most of us think about public office that already, in anticipation of the completion by Col. GOETHALS of his great task in Panama, he is receiving many offers of future employment, all based on the assumption that a man who has done one thing notably well will be equally efficient in doing other things, no matter how different.

For this assumption there is some excuse in the probability that a man really able in any line will not undertake work which he knows himself incompetent to perform, but it is unlikely that those who are seeking to secure the services of Col. GOETHALS think of qualifying their proposals in this way or even dream of his refusing a well-paid public office through fear of failure to meet its requirements. Of course nobody would go so far as to take his success in Panama as proof of his ability to do as well absolutely anything that anybody can do—rival Caruso in opera, for instance, or Marconi as an electrician. But authorized representatives of Dayton are credibly reported to have made to him what business men call a "firm offer" of the post of "corporation manager" for that city, and undenied rumor has it that Mr. Mayor-to-be MITCHEL will make him Police Commissioner of New York if he will take the place.

Far be it from us to deny that Col. GOETHALS could fill either of these positions with honor to himself and advantage to those whom, if he accepted either, he certainly would serve to the best of his power. All of his training and experience, however, has been that of an engineer working in military conditions of discipline, and that can hardly be called ideal preparation even for analogous work under the much greater limitations inevitably placed on a civilian official. And management of a large city's police force is not at all closely analogous to the building of a great canal while exercising a sort and amount of power which no civilian official will ever have.

We must, indeed, remember in considering this matter that if Dayton or New York doesn't get Col. GOETHALS, somebody with even less of special training than he for municipal service will not improbably be obtained. That, however, does not prevent one from bemoaning the fact that the general eagerness to put this truly great man in an unfamiliar environment illustrates anew our present failure to recognize our need for professional officeholders, properly so called.

An Argument Hardly Convincing.

Only one objection has yet been made to the suggestion on this page that the number of automobile "accidents" would be decreased, and with it the new appalling number of highway slaughters, if insurance against the recovery of damages in civil damage suits were made by law unrecoverable by an automobilist who inflicted the injury while doing anything illegal—driving a car when under the influence of liquor, for instance, or breaking a speed ordinance or rule of the road.

The objection offered is that in many cases the punishment would fall on the wrong man—on the innocent and helpless owner of the car, instead of on the guilty chauffeur whose intoxication or recklessness was in violation of both explicit orders and solemn promises.

That real hardship could thus be inflicted, and undeserved losses imposed, is obvious enough, but the possibility hardly condemns the suggested law, since nobody who drives his own car—a large majority of all automobilists—would lose his insurance except by his own fault. As for the others, they would simply be compelled, in the selection of chauffeurs, to make themselves more nearly sure than now that their employes were sober, competent, and law-abiding.

Certainty in these respects, of course, could not be obtained, for betrayals of reasonably justified confidence will doubtless continue till the end of that portion of time which interests premillennial mortals. With something less than certainty, however, we could get along fairly well in this, as in most other matters. Existing conditions are well nigh intolerable, and, what is too often forgotten by those who denounce them, the careful and decent majority of automobilists suffer even more, in mind, person, and property, than do pedestrians from every one of the perils created by the unskilled, reckless, and criminal minority.

Prosecuting officials do not make anything like the use they should of the law which turns into murder homicides committed with "depravity of mind," and we are unpardonably negligent in not having everywhere, and rigorously enforcing, a law requiring, not permitting, permanent forfeiture of licenses as an invariable and inevitable part of the penalty inflicted on drunken chauffeurs, amateur or professional.

Teaching the Art of Voting.

To the already almost innumerable utilities of "moving pictures," another of a truly peculiar and surprising kind has been added by the politicians of Italy. That country has recently increased the size of its electorate from 4,000,000 to between 8,000,000 and 9,000,000 voters, and many of the men newly enfranchised, especially in the southern provinces, need a lot of instruction in the exercise of the unfamiliar privilege. This, according to a Consular report from Catania, the representatives of the political parties are giving in the little "movie" theatres, which are as numerous and popular there as almost everywhere else, and they are doing it by providing the managers with films that show in minute detail all the processes and phases of voting.

These pictures illuminate even the most illiterate minds, and so successful has the plan proved in Catania that the physicians of the provinces are purposing its employment in teaching the elements of personal and domestic hygiene.

That the "movies" are not an unmixed blessing has long been recognized by the thoughtful and observing, but even their most vigorous critics do not deny the many and important educational uses to which they can and should be put. It is unfortunate that, like not a few other good things, this wonderful invention lends itself with as much facility to the serving of bad ends as to those which are commendable.

GREAT MEADOW PRISON

Should Be Taken as a Model for the New Sing Sing.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

After the horrors of Sing Sing, let us turn to Great Meadow, the highest achievement in American prisons. Four years ago, when a new prison was needed, a site of 1,100 acres was selected near Lake George, and a cell block to hold 600 prisoners was erected. This was the first vital step for a humane prison—ample farming land in the open country. The second vital step, the selection of a Warden, was met by taking a business man of no prison experience, but of glowing personality and strong convictions. This man has made, and is daily making, a demonstration of the supremacy of moral power over the lives of convicts which renders obsolete other penal methods.

The new Warden believes that a man, though a convict, is still a man with human nature unchanged. This view is, of course, directly opposed to the common belief that a convict is a beast, to be kept in a barred cage, to be guarded by armed men, and to be treated with fear, suspicion, and cruelty. Despite many predictions of failure from old-time prison officials, the Warden had the courage to act on the belief that the convicts had a sense of honor, and would respond to his trust in it. The results have been beyond credence. Out of nearly 2,000 men who have passed through Great Meadow in the past three years there have been but five runaways. No case has been known of an inmate assaulting a keeper.

Here at Great Meadow we have the model for the new Sing Sing. Let the State buy 1,000 acres of farming land, select another Warden Homer, and send him out with 500 convicts to build the new prison. Great Meadow, Guelph, Montpelier, and all the new honor prisons demonstrate that the old-fashioned equipment of steel is a needless expense. The convict's promise not to run away is more effective than steel bars. Is this hard to believe? It's true. R. M. HURD.

Check on Motor Car Speeding.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Re your articles on reckless automobile driving, they have an effective check in France which should be brought into use here. It is very simple. If any recklessness is indulged in the driver, owner, or chauffeur is made to drive the car off to a police garage, and it is impounded until the case is heard, which may be a week or a month. Sometimes, at the discretion of the police, the car can be "bailed out" for the sum of 1,000 francs, ($200.) This acts as a tremendous deterrent, especially to taxi drivers, (who are the worst offenders,) as it means taking their means of living away for the time being. OWNER.

VALUE OF PHILIPPINES.

Furnish a Good Training Ground for American Soldiers.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your leader for to-day is so clean-cut a piece of work, is so clear and forcibly put, that it made a distinct impression upon the writer, as doubtless upon all thinking readers of THE TIMES. The Philippines are not often enough in our thoughts, as an enormous problem, upon which our children's children will still be at work, I believe. They have been studied from many angles, but it would seem that one point of view remains without the attention which surely it deserves.

In the opinion of the writer, perhaps the one greatest reason for maintaining our hold as a nation upon this collection of savage and semi-savage peoples is the opportunity it has given us to enable our soldiers to become the real article, and not merely—regulars and volunteers alike—carpet soldiers; men who have never seen powder burned in anger, nor heard the zip of a rifle bullet fired by a military enemy worthy of consideration as such.

Now that our Indians, through process of elimination, have become "good" and no longer are severely troublesome to outlying districts of our country, what opportunities offer for the real training of our men? Aside from the Philippines, none at all worth mentioning. And yet were we to be at war with some power, using against us an army of seasoned soldiers, they would inevitably sweep us away like chaff, costing, at least in our earlier battles, many thousands of lives and the bitter mortification of defeat. Nobody of sense can question this; and it would result from the lack, among officers and men alike, of opportunities granted them in which and whereby to become professionals instead of amateurs at war.

Let us thank God for the Philippines, therefore. In them our troops have had for years now the genuine article of real fighting and rough living, and hardships such as are needed for their best interests, and ours, ultimately.

Regarded from a financial standpoint, the Philippines certainly have not paid. Far from it. But having put our hand to this plow we cannot without disgrace turn back. And neither should we wish to do so. We are a blessing there to the mixed multitudes of relatively unstable equilibrium. And in a wholly different way, no less are they a blessing to us, particularly the more savage tribes, as I have endeavored to point out.

It rather looks at this present moment of writing as if Mexico bids fair to contribute a similar and further blessing. At least, it behooves us to try to regard it in that light.

LETTER FROM PHILIPPINES.

Warns of Danger in Policy of "Immediate Independence."

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Apropos of your interesting editorial article anent the Philippines, you will, I am sure, be interested in a letter which I have to-day received from a friend of mine in Manila, dated Oct. 8, on this very subject:

* * * I have no doubt that, in the near future, the question of Philippine independence will loom rather larger on the political horizon than it has done up to the present. As a Britisher I am, of course, not entitled to voice any opinions regarding American politics, but it seems to me that the present Democratic Government would be guilty of criminal folly if it were even to think seriously of giving immediate independence to the Philippines. The new Governor General arrived here a few days ago, and he has started the lopping-off process already, and to-day the bureau chiefs are in a state of uncertainty, as they do not know who is to go next.

I don't suppose you will be very much interested in a long discourse on the Philippines, but I cannot refrain from saying that every good American who has the interests of his country at heart, and who has a vote to cast, ought to make himself thoroughly acquainted with conditions prevailing here, so that when the time comes for voicing his opinion in a practical way with regard to the Philippines, he will, at least, have a solid reason for saying yea or nay to independence.

It is quite a coincidence that this letter should reach me just at the time of your editorial on this subject.

INCOME TAX EVASION

Made Easy for Those Who Gamble in Stocks.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Among the idiosyncrasies of the Federal income tax law (if a law may be said to have any) is the fact that it not only taxes matrimony by increasing the taxes assessed against a man and a woman having separate incomes over $3,000 each as soon as they marry, but it also mitigates the hardships of the stock gambler by exempting him from all normal income tax.

Ignoring the facetious claim that the net losses of the average gambler would alone exempt him from taxation, it may be seriously shown that no one with an income under say $11,500 need pay any income tax whatever if he will but carry a sufficient amount of dividend paying stocks on margin.

For example: A married man whose income is $11,500 pays a tax of 1 per cent. on $7,500, or $75 per annum. After reading an elucidation of this feature of the law, he orders his broker to buy $168,421 of stock distributing 5 per cent. dividends, or $8,421 a year. For 10 per cent. margin he deposits $16,842, owing the broker 90 per cent. of his purchase, or $151,580, upon which, at 5 per cent., his annual interest charge will amount to $7,579. His income tax return is now prepared as follows:

Stock dividends received		8,421
Gross income		$19,921
Deductions.
Interest on indebtedness	$7,579
Dividends from taxable corporations	8,421
Specific deduction (married)	4,000
Total deductions		20,000
Taxable net income		None

Of course, the Government loses nothing, for our ingenious friend has merely shifted the tax which he formerly paid from himself to the broker or the ultimate lender.

THEATRE SUGGESTIONS.

Music and Good Seats Would Attract Larger Audiences.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I appreciate very much your recent article as to why the public stays away, in many casee, from the theatre. Of course we shall always have the "fiends" who fairly live in the playhouse, and these, no doubt, the managers count on, but do they never take into consideration the large public of intellectual people who are not dependent on the stage for their entertainment, but who can be won to theatre-going by making an evening at the theatre an event to be remembered, an evening of unalloyed enjoyment from start to finish?

By start I mean obtaining good seats at advertised prices and not being told that "there is nothing in front of the thirteenth row for a month," when the applicant knows that he can buy choice seats for any performance at the hotels by paying an advance. This, to begin with, puts the auditor in an unreceptive frame of mind, but once in the house he sits quietly waiting for the musicians who never come. Do the managers ever recall the days when Henry Tissington at the Union Square, Baker and Brode at Wallack's, Mollenhauer and Widmer at Daly's, Furst at the Empire, and Puerner at the old Lyceum made the entr'actes a supreme delight? I, for one, never attend the theatre where music is absent.

KATSURA'S BRAIN.

Dr. Spitzka Ranks It Sixteenth in Weight List of 108.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

With reference to the post-mortem findings in the late Prince Katsura, Japan's great statesman, I would cite the following data from my article in Science of a decade ago, based upon Prof. K. Taguchi's series of observations published in the Sei-I-Kwai Medical Journal of Tokio in 1903.

Prof. Taguchi's researches were based upon 597 subjects, 421 males, and 176 females, mostly from the hospitals. The average brain weight of 374 adult males, ranging in age from 21 to 95, is 1,367 grams, (maximum, 1,790; minimum, 1,063;) of 150 adult females it is 1,214 grams, (maximum, 1,432; minimum, 961.) The sexual difference of these averages is 153 grams, about the same as in Europeans.

Compared to European brain weights, the distribution of the male Japanese is seen to correspond fairly well with that of male German brain weights of the Bischoff-Marchand series. Up to the fourteenth year it is evident that the growth of the Japanese brain is slower; the brain of the Japanese boy between 9 and 14 years of age weighs about 1,235 grams, while that of the European of the same age weighs 1,300 to 1,350 grams.

The relation between brain weight and stature is as positive as is observed in the European series. The Japanese are a people of small stature, however, because short-legged, and this fact lends interest to the question of relative brain weight. On the whole, the brain weight of the Japanese compares favorably with that of Europeans of similar stature, and it may be shown to be superior in this respect to other races of the same general stature. These facts are of not a little significance in relation to the learning, industry, and aptitudes of this progressive race.

Prof. Taguchi occupied the chair of anatomy in the Imperial University of Tokio, and, in accordance with his bequest, his body was dissected after his death in February, 1904. His brain weighed 1,520 grams, or 53.6 ounces avoirdupois.

Prince Katsura's brain weight (1,600 grams, or 56.4 ounces avoirdupois) is distinctly high in the scale, ranking in sixteenth place in my previous list of 108 eminent men whose brains were weighed. The brains of Kant and Bismarck, quoted in your dispatch, were not weighed, so far as I have been able to ascertain, but the weights were calculated in the one case from the cranial capacity, in the other from measurements of the head.

The prejudice against post-mortem examinations, which in the past greatly retarded medical and scientific progress, is slowly beginning to disappear among intelligent and educated people.

I now possess a fair number of bequests of brains, even of whole bodies, of persons of superior intellectual capacity. As Prosector of the American Anthropometric Society I take a keen interest in such investigations. This society was chartered in 1891, and the active members of it are those who give consent to the post-mortem examination of their brains, it being understood that the society or its prosector shall be notified promptly in the event of death in order that steps may be taken to secure a proper examination and preservation of the brain and other organs.

I have already published my studies on the brains of the two Leidys, Cope, Dr. Pepper, Prof. Allen, Dr. A. J. Parker, and Persifor Frazer. The brain of Dr. John H. Musser was the latest acquisition to the collection. Contrary to the newspaper reports at the time, this brain was of superior size and development; its weight was 1,395 grams, or 56.26 ounces avoirdupois.

CAUSE FOR THANKSGIVING.

Commissioner Drummond Finds It In Prevention of Suffering.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It is easy to specify causes for public thanksgiving this year. There is the general and remarkable development in charities, both public and private. There is the increase in facilities for housing and caring for the sick and dependent; the very marked betterments in all our institutions, hospitals, homes, asylums. In all of them the advance has been greater than in any previous year. There is a great gain in the city's facilities for the care of those suffering from tuberculosis, and greater success in fighting the disease itself. There are new measures and means for protecting the feeble-minded and defective. There is great hope and some apparent success in the new radium treatment for cancer. There is increased interest in preventive measures, and a reasonable certainty that the new studies and experiments at such laboratories as the Rockefeller Institute will bring relief and recovery to the suffering. Just as the Thanksgiving season is here the newest and best of all good things to be grateful for is the announcement of Dr. John B. Murphy, the eminent Chicago surgeon, that he believes internal medicine will largely supersede the dreaded knife and prove equal to all demands. Others share in this good hope, and it is likely we shall have the realization. There is, indeed, very much to be thankful for.

In spite of the last two suspected numerals, 1913 has been a fortunate year for those who live under the sign of charity; for those who have devised it, bestowed it, or received it. Let us all be thankful.

MICHAEL J. DRUMMOND,
Commissioner of Charities.

Encroaching on West Point.

To the Editor of The New York Times.

There is a movement on foot to run the boulevard now being laid out along the Hudson Railroad by the Palisade Park Commissioners through the Government reservation at West Point. It is always necessary that a fight be made to have parks and similar places from being encroached on, no matter how worthy the object may be. Whereas it would improve this boulevard to run it through the reservation, it would not help the latter, and this encroachment should be resisted by the War Department.

THE POPULACE.

The People, O the People—eyes that lie,
Ears stopped! For always ostracised is he,
Just Aristides; and the rabble flee,
While trampled by their foes the Gracchi die!
The People, O the People! Still they rave
Like maddened Hercules, and who
daro brave
Their wrath to save them when themselves they rend?
Alas, their sorrows! But they still condemn
Themselves, at war with all who fight for them,
Crowning their foe who overthrows their friend!

TEACHERS' FUND $618,000 THIS YEAR

404 Professors or Their Widows Now on the List of Those Aided by Carnegie Foundation.

THE TRUSTEES MEET HERE

Donor Unable to Entertain the Board or Attend Its Deliberations Because of His Cousin's Death.

The annual meeting of the Board of Trustees of the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching was held at the offices of the foundation, 576 Fifth Avenue, yesterday morning. The twenty-five Trustees, who are college Presidents and financiers, including President Lowell of Harvard, President Hadley of Yale, and President Butler of Columbia, were present with the exception of Chancellor David Starr Jordan of Leland Stanford University, who is in Europe. The Chairman of the board, William Peterson, Principal of McGill University, in Montreal, presided. Mr. Carnegie did not attend the meeting or the luncheon of the Trustees. This was because of the death of Mrs. George Lauder, his cousin, at the Plaza Hotel. For the same reason the reception given usually to the Trustees at the Carnegie home in Fifth Avenue by Mrs. Carnegie was omitted this year.

The Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching was established to provide pensions for college professors and to advance educational conditions in this country and abroad.

Dr. Henry S. Pritchett, President of the Carnegie Foundation, and Robert A. Franks, its Treasurer, presented their annual reports, which will be made public as soon as they are printed. In the last year Mr. Carnegie gave the foundation $1,250,000 as a special endowment for its study of the educational system. The original fund to provide pensions for college professors was established in April, 1905, and the foundation began its work on July 1, 1906. It spent $128,000 in pensions in the first year of its existence. Last year its expenditures for the same purpose increased to $570,000. Fearing that the expenditures for pensions would exhaust the entire income of the fund and leave nothing to support educational investigations to insure the wise use of the pensions, Mr. Carnegie in January gave $1,250,000 for the educational investigation fund.

Extensive studies for the purpose of administering the pension fund wisely have been undertaken. The most important have been the investigations conducted by Abraham Flexner into educational conditions in the medical schools of this country and Europe. An investigation of educational conditions in agricultural training colleges has been started, and an investigation of conditions in legal education has been decided upon.

The endowment of the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching is now $15,225,000, and its annual income $694,000. Of this amount $618,000 was used this year in paying pensions to 404 professors or their widows, as compared with $570,000 last year. Thirty-three pensioners were added to the list this year.

Mr. Carnegie's gifts for philanthropic purposes, exclusive of the many libraries he has given away, now amount to nearly $220,000,000. Here are his chief benefactions: $125,000,000 for the Carnegie Corporation, $15,225,000 for the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching, $22,000,000 for the Carnegie Institution for the Advancement of Scientific Research at Washington, $10,000,000 for the Carnegie Hero Fund, $15,000,000 for the Carnegie Institute at Pittsburgh, $10,000,000 for New York City branch libraries, $10,000,000 for Scotch universities, and $10,000,000, for his native town of Dunfermline, Scotland.

Between the annual meetings of the trustees of the Carnegie Foundation, its routine business is conducted by an Executive Committee, consisting of President Pritchett and six other trustees, two of whom are elected each year. At yesterday's meeting President Frank A. Vanderlip of the National City Bank and Robert A. Franks were re-elected to the Executive Committee. Provost E. F. Smith of the University of Pennsylvania was elected a member of the board to succeed President Ira Remsen of Johns Hopkins University, who has retired to devote himself to research.

Those present at yesterday's meeting were: William Peterson, Principal of McGill University, Montreal; William Frederick Slocum, President of Colorado Springs College, Colorado; Nicholas Murray Butler, President of Columbia University; Arthur Twining Hadley, President of Yale University; Abbott Lawrence Lowell, President of Harvard University; Jacob Gould Schurman, President of Cornell University; Alexander Crombie Humphreys, President of Stevens Institute of Technology; Hill McClelland Bell, President of Drake University, Iowa; William Lowe Bryan, President of the University of Indiana; Thomas Morrison Carnegie of New York; Edwin Boone Craighead, President of the University of Montana; William Henry Crawford, President of Allegheny College; George Hutchison Denny, President of the University of Alabama; Charles Richard Van Hise, President of the University of Wisconsin; Henry Churchill King, President of Oberlin University; Thomas McClelland, President of Knox College; Samuel Black McCormick, Chancellor of the University of Pittsburgh; Samuel Plantz, President of Lawrence

Conductor, Alfred Hertz.

The fact that "Die Zauberflöte," as it was produced at the Metropolitan Opera House last season, went so early as last evening into this season's repertory caused delight to many lovers of Mozart's masterpiece of German opera. The opera had long been absent from the repertory of the Metropolitan Opera House before it was revived there just a year ago, and in its German form its performances had been only three in number over a period which the oldest musical inhabitant could scarcely compass in memory. Mr. Gatti-Casazza has given it an embodiment that is destined to make it popular, and, as may be hoped, keep it an active number of the season's list for an indefinite period.

That embodiment, as will be remembered from last season's representations, is sumptuous and spectacular ir its scenic setting, as the opera invites and even requires for its proper effect. But of much more consequence is the fact that it is presented with a very considerable mastery of the composer's music in all its different manifestations. It might be too much to expect a complete mastery of any of Mozart's vocal music in these days, but the operatic public is to be congratulated that it is enabled to enjoy a performance meeting so many difficult requirements as this one does.

The opera was composed by Mozart originally to a German text, and the restoration of that text is quite in accordance with the policy of the Metropolitan, as well as affording certain points of interest that are lacking in the Italian version. The German version has much spoken dialogue, which, in the Italian is turned into musical recitative. Much of this is cut in the present performance, necessarily, as dialogue carries ill in the large spaces of the Metropolitan Opera House; but most of what is kept is so well spoken that there is little trouble in comprehending it. A great advantage of restoring this text is that it helps the movement, and especially the comedy, of the opera.

There are changes in the cast from that of last season. Mr. Slezak is no longer here, and his part as the Japanese Prince was taken by Mr. Urlus, a singer devoted ordinarily to parts accounted more "dramatic" and requiring a less perfected lyric style than is needed in Mozart's opera. No wonder, then, that he was not perfectly at home in the music of Tamino. Yet this impersonation had dramatic qualities that commended it to lovers of Die Zauberflöte. Mr. Braun appeared in some of the performances last season as Sarastro, and is one of the most excellent interpreters of the part; a noble voice, an admirable style of singing.

Mme. Destinn, who was heard several times as Pamina, and Mme. Hempel, who has not sung better than she did last evening as the Queen of the Night—her colorature in her two airs was as fine and delicately chiseled in its perfection as anything she has done here. There should be grateful mention of Putnam Griswold's surprising skill in singing and declamation as the Sprecher, and, necessarily, also of Mr. Goritz's inimitable Papageno, which was one of the notable features of last season's production and is destined to be of this. and of Mme. Alten's Papagena and Mr. Reiss's Monostatos. It is, in fact, a cast of surpassing excellence, and its excellence includes the three Ladies and the three Boys—of whom it must be said the Boys sang with more tunefulness and precision than the Ladies.

More than its parts, however, was the sum total of the excellence of the whole performance, so beautifully balanced and finished, so admirable in the ensemble of the orchestra, which never sounded richer or more iridescent in its color, and of the chorus. The elaborate beauty of the scenic setting received the fullest recognition last season; it is now the same, and the changes, fourteen in number, of the scenery were executed with an expedition that kept the movement of the performance uninterrupted and as nearly intelligible as may be possible. Mr. Hertz has put nothing to his credit more praiseworthy than this performance of "Die Zauberflöte," a performance that speaks eloquently of his intelligence, taste and fine musical feeling.

MISSIONARY EXPLORER DIES

Rev. Joseph A. Gilfillas Among the First to Reach Elk Lake, Minn.

The Rev. Joseph A. Gilfillas, for thirty years the Episcopal missionary in charge of the work among the Indians of Northern Minnesota and the archdeacon of the district, died Tuesday night in his home at 424 Central Park West. He was 75 years old and had not been active in missionary work for fifteen years.

Mr. Gilfillas, with his brother-in-law, Wells W. Cooke, now in the Biological Survey Department of the Government, made extensive explorations in Minnesota around the head waters of the Mississippi River between 1880 and 1890, and they were among the first to reach Elk Lake and describe it as the chief source of the Mississippi. Previous to their explorations Lake Itasca, to the north of Elk Lake, was regarded as the source, and Mr. Gilfillas, with Prof. Cooke, helped to disprove this assumption. They were rewarded for their work by recognition from the Royal Geographical Society.

Mr. Gilfillas was also an expert in ethnology and Indian languages. He spoke the language of the Ojibway or Chippewa Indians, among whom he worked in Minnesota, better than any other white man alive, it was said, and he wrote several articles about these Indians for the Smithsonian Institute in Washington. He also wrote a novel with the Indians for its subject.

Mr. Gilfillas is survived by his wife, three sons and two daughters.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

A special benefit performance of "Ourselves," at the Lyric Theatre, will be given for the benefit of the Special Committee on Rescue Work for Women, under the auspices of the Women's Department of the National Civic Federation. The date has been fixed for Dec. 9, because it is in that week that the National Civic Federation will hold its annual meeting in New York City.

At the Globe Theatre on Monday evening, Dec. 1, in honor of Miss Margaret Clarkson Henderson, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Hendarson, 100 society girls, including débutantes, have been invited by Mr. and Mrs. Stanley L. Wolff to see the performance of "The Madcap Duchess," following which a supper party has been arranged at Sherry's.

Two former singers in comic opera, Eva Davenport and Christine Nellson, will make their vaudeville debuts next week at Proctor's Fifth Avenue Theatre. The former will appear in "The Ceiling Walker," a new effort of Edgar Allen Woolf's, while the latter will appear in a pretentious singing specialty.

William Harris, Jr., announced yesterday that the opening date of "The Misleading Lady" at the Fulton Theatre will be changed from Monday evening to Tuesday evening, Nov. 25.

MR. BACHAUS'S RECITAL.

Reappearance of a Young Pianist of Fine Capacities.

Mr. Willhelm Bachaus, who first came to this country two seasons ago and interested lovers of piano playing by his admirable art, seems likely to do so again and in increasing measure on his present visit. He appeared yesterday afternoon in Aeolian Hall, and again showed himself a pianist of the highest and most serious aims, wholly unassuming in his attitude before the public, and wholly occupied with the music he has in hand. He is brilliantly equipped with a modern performer's technique upon the pianoforte, a technique that carries him through all difficulties without failing him; but the technical side of his playing is subordinated to the musical, and never intrudes itself to the injury of what piano playing really is for. He is not deeply emotional or profoundly poetic in his playing; he is a young man, and he is likely to develop these qualities more fully. But there is a quality of freshness and buoyancy in his performance, a delicate sensibility that keeps him from exaggeration of sentiment, emotion, or passion, or of their counterfeits. And true sentiment, emotion, and passion are not absent from his playing.

Saint-Saëns's transcription of the prelude to Bach's "Rathswahl" cantata—which Bach himself transcribed from the prelude of his E major solo violin suite—is a piece that summons some of Mr. Bachaus's most engaging qualities, and he played it with superb vigor, rhythmic energy and clearness.

He justified his attempt too, at Beethoven's last great piano sonata, Op. 111, music that taxes the emotional and intellectual powers of the greatest artists. It has been played in a larger and more imposing style, with greater passion in the first movement, with a loftier flight in the transfigured variations; but Mr. Bachaus's reading was finely conceived and thoroughly musical in spirit. Another formidable task is to make Schubert's very long and very elaborate "Wanderer" fantasie interesting in performance. It may very easily be made dull; but Mr. Bachaus found the right expression for the composition, the right adjustment and contrast of its sections, the right building up of its climaxes. There was a truly triumphant sweep in this performance, an exultant poise. So played the work still has a great vitality and musical interest. It so interested the audience yesterday that enthusiasts could not restrain themselves from applauding before the end was reached; or else they did not know that the end had not been reached.

Mr. Bachaus's Chopin was full of sympathy and was not lacking in grace, delicacy, or brilliancy; these are not all that go to make up Chopin's quality, but they were much enjoyed. He closed with Liszt's twelfth Hungarian Rhapsody. The fact may have reminded some that the use of a Hungarian Rhapsody as the necessary and inevitable ending of a piano recital seems to have gone somewhat out of fashion.

MRS. GEORGE LAUDER DIES.

Her Husband Andrew Carnegie's Cousin—Paid $33,000 Duty on Gems

Mrs. George Lauder of Pittsburgh, Penn., whose husband is Andrew Carnegie's first cousin, died yesterday morning at the Hotel Plaza. She and her husband came to New York more than a month ago on a pleasure trip and Mrs. Lauder, who was sixty-five years old, was in good health until two weeks ago.

Attention was attracted to Mrs. Lauder in October of last year when her husband paid $33,000 customs duty on three pieces of jewelry belonging to her and valued at $100,000. The articles, a necklace, a brooch and a lavaliere, had been bought abroad by Mrs. Lauder several years before and brought by her into this country without duty several times when she was returning from abroad. Last October, however, the customs officials learned that the jewelry had never been declared and it was seized when Mrs. Lauder landed from the Baltic. The authorities accepted what was considered one of the largest duty assessments ever paid by a private citizen.

Mr. Lauder was for thirty years closely associated with Andrew Carnegie in the steel industry as a Director in the Carnegie Companies and as confidential advisor to Mr. Carnegie. He retired from business in 1901, when the United States Steel Corporation bought out the Carnegie interests.

Besides her husband, three children survive Mrs. Lauder, George Lauder, Jr., Mrs. James C. Greenway, and Miss Elizabeth S. Lauder. Mrs. Lauder was formerly Miss Maria Romeyn Varick.

George H. Batcheller.

Keith and opened a theatre in Boston, when both men were new in the business. Bacheller sold his interest and opened a theatre in Worcester. About thirty years ago he opened the Westminster Musée in this city, the theatre later becoming the present Westminster Theatre, a burlesque house. Mr. Batcheller is survived by three daughters and a son.

REDEMPTION OF 2S TO BE EXPEDITED

Money Bills Provide for Rapid Exchange of Those Bonds for Threes—Reserve Safeguards.

BILLS TO COMMITTEE TO-DAY

Divided Camps to Try and Agree on Less Vital Differences Between Their Measures.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19.—Both halves of the divided Committee on Banking and Currency completed to-day their separate drafts of the Owen-Glass bill. To-morrow the full committee will meet in an effort to agree on some of the less important features of the bill. It is hoped that a report embodying chiefly disagreements on fundamentals may be reached by Friday, and if the Senate is in session that day the bill will at once be presented. The report may not be filed, however, before Saturday.

Both sides of the committee have perfected amendments to the bill to provide for a more rapid redemption of the 2 per cent. bonds now used as a basis for the issue of national bank notes. Both provide for this to be accomplished largely through the instrumentality of the regional reserve banks, which will be expected to buy heavily in the 2 per cent. market. Their holdings will then be replaced by 3 per cent. bonds or continue to be used as a basis for circulation.

The Democratic provision is for the substitution of 3 per cent. twenty-year bonds, which the regional banks would hold in their vaults, unless in some emergency they needed to sell them in order to replenish their supply of gold. On the same general principle the Republican wing of the committee provided for the substitution of 3 per cent. one year Treasury notes, with a contract by which the regional banks would be compelled to renew the Treasury notes every year for a period of twenty years. These notes also could be sold for gold, and presumably they could be used in place of currency for large transactions.

The Democratic wing of the committee also authorized the Federal Reserve Board to impose a tax on note issues as a preventive against inflation.

Under the Republican plan, member banks in the country must keep a 4 per cent. reserve in their own vaults, 4 per cent. with the regional reserve bank, and 4 per cent. either in their own vaults or in the vaults of a correspondent. The 4 per cent. to be deposited with the regional reserve bank may be transferred in installments of 1 per cent. every six months. City banks must keep 5 per cent. in their own vaults, 6 per cent. in the vaults of the regional institution, and the remaining 4 per cent. either in their own vaults or with a correspondent.

The Republican faction has increased the reserve requirement of the regional banks against deposits to 25 per cent., with a proviso that this reserve may be reduced to 25 per cent., subject, however, to a tax of ½ per cent. on every 2½ per cent. of deficit below the 35 per cent. line.

The full committee met informally to-day to discuss the parliamentary programme. Charles A. Conant reviewed the work of the Democratic wing to-day and probably will examine the technical aspects of the Republican measure to-morrow.

Many members of both houses feel that the possibility of adjournment for a short period before the beginning of the regular session was destroyed by fear that the Democratic Party would be assailed for a mileage "grab." Senator O'Gormun said to-day that at the next session a bill would probably pass abolishing the mileage basis and substituting a provision for the payment of actual traveling expenses of Congressmen.

CRITICISES CURRENCY BILL.

Talbert Says Political Influence Is Behind the Measure.

Joseph T. Talbert, Vice President of the National City Bank, speaking on the currency bill last night at the dinner of the National Founders' Association, at the Hotel Astor, criticised what he termed the political influence behind it, and said that he believed President Wilson would "cast out those who had darkened his counsels and sought to becloud his judgment."

"The critics of the bankers have charged that the bankers are prompted by selfishness alone," he said. "I do not deny that as a class bankers are as selfish as ordinary business men, but they are no more so. I do not know of a single instance where any banker in a central or ordinary reserve city has voiced any objection to the bill on the ground that it would cause a heavy shrinkage in his deposits.

"But we shall never have such a system nor any system that is worthy of confidence so long as any consideration which determines the character of its final structure shall be of a political nature, nor so long as the credits created under it shall not be based absolutely and unequivocally on gold; nor so long as there remains the lingering shadow of a doubt that there shall be redemption of bank notes upon demand, and that that redemption shall be in gold."

T. W. BUTTS INDICTED.

Lawyer Held in Jail on Another Civil Action.

Thomas W. Butts, the bankrupt lawyer and a member of the firm of Butts & Vining, 51 Chambers Street, was indicted yesterday by the Grand Jury on the charge of grand larceny. At the present time the defendant is held in Ludlow Street Jail in a civil suit, and he was brought yesterday before Commissioner Gilchrist for examination in bankruptcy proceedings.

Elihu Root, Jr., the receiver in the case, wished to get information from him as to his realty proceedings, so that he might start a suit in the New Jersey Chancery Court. Butts professed himself anxious to tell all he could, and said that he was the Treasurer and Director of the New Brunswick Realty Company, which owns 215 acres and a half interest in six acres more near New Brunswick. He admitted that for convenience nearly all the common stock of the concern was issued to Mary C. Stewart, a clerk in the office of Butts & Vining.

While the bankruptcy proceedings are pending, it was stated yesterday, Butts cannot be taken from the custody of the deputy sheriff at Ludlow Street Jail.

LUTTIES BROTHERS, N. Y.
Sole Agents for U. S. and Canada.

GEN. BOOTH RETURNS.

Pleased with His American Trip—May Meet His Brother.

Gen. Bramwell Booth, Commander in Chief of the Salvation Army, returned to this city last night from Chicago after a trip in which he inspected his army in the Middle West and Canada. Some 1,000 Salvation Army officers from all parts of the country were in line in the concourse of the Grand Central Station when the General arrived and they greeted him with Salvation Army songs.

A committee consisting of Col. Alexander M. Damon, Field Secretary for the United States; Commissioner John Lawley of London, secretary to the General; Col. William H. Peart, Col. W. H. Cox, in charge of the Salvation Army publications, and Col. John Dean, in charge of the Salvation Army training school, met the Commander in Chief. He was escorted by his sister, Miss Evangeline Booth. He was led before the line of Salvation Army officers, while the Salvation Army band played. Gen. Booth mounted the stairs leading to the balcony in the station, and as the officers of his army came to attention, he made them a short speech.

"I am glad to see you," he said. "I like the looks of you, and before I am through with you I think you will like me, too. My message to you is, Salvation forever."

Then he was taken to the Salvation Army headquarters at 120 West Fourteenth Street. There, through his secretary, he told newspaper reporters that he was much pleased by his welcome in this country, and especially that accorded to him in Chicago. His health, he said, was very good, and he expected to sail for Europe on Wednesday on the France.

Asked whether it was possible that he and his brother, Ballington Booth, who is now head of the Volunteers of America, might be reconciled, Gen. Booth said:

"I certainly hope that circumstances during my stay in New York will permit of my meeting my brother, Ballington Booth, and I shall endeavor to make arrangements to that end."

Asked whether there was any likelihood of a union of the organizations headed by himself and his brother Ballington, Gen. Booth replied:

"As I do not know how my brother would regard such a proposal, I am at present unable to speak on the matter, since it is necessary for him to be the leading party in effecting such an arrangement."

On Wednesday morning the Salvation Army will march from the headquarters to the pier of the French Line to escort Gen. Booth to the liner France, on which he will sail for his home in England.

ATTACK A SULZER 'REFORM.'

Work of Charity Investigators Denounced at Buffalo Conference.

BUFFALO, Nov. 19.—At to-day's session of the fourteenth New York State Conference on Charities and Corrections the report of the Committee on Public Institutions, as presented by the Chairman, George A. Lewis, a former member of the Board of Parole for State Prisons, made a vigorous attack upon ex-Gov. Sulzer and the Committee of Inquiry Into Public Institutions appointed by him.

Chairman Lewis characterized the committee's work as "reform by dynamite" and "sensational raids," and declared that the funds misappropriated in connection with State highway work amounted to more than enough to place State Institutions on the footing they occupied a year ago.

Among the acts of the committee that Mr. Lewis criticised was its recommendation for the abolition of the Industrial Farm Colony for Vagrants, its condemnation of the plans for the Letchworth Village at Thiells, and the New York Training School for Boys at Yorktown Heights, and, finally, the reduction of the appropriation for additional facilities for improvements of State institutions from $1,218,280 in 1912 to $538,700 for 1913.

DIVORCE FOR MRS. GILBERT.

Wife of New York Lawyer Gets Reno Decree for Desertion.

Special to The New York Times.

RENO, Nev., Nov. 19.—To Jennie E. Gilbert was granted a final decree of divorce here yesterday from Lucius L. Gilbert, a New York lawyer with offices in the Mutual Life Building, upon her allegation of desertion in Plainfield, N. J., on Nov. 11 of last year. The defendant responded to the summons by making merely a formal appearance, without contesting the suit.

The couple were married in Brooklyn on March 6, 1906, subsequently moving to Plainfield, where the wife testified her husband left her, never returning. She testified that she had been a faithful wife and had given him no cause for action. The couple have no children. Mrs. Gilbeck will leave for New York this week.

TELEPHONE RATES TO BE EXAMINED

Company Agrees to Have Property Valued by Interstate Commerce Board.

READJUSTMENT IF NEEDED

Proposal of Merchants' Association Aims to End Contests Over Particular Cases.

Proceedings have been started by the Merchants' Association for a general readjustment of charges for telephone service in this city, based on a physical valuation of the property of the New York Telephone Company, and assurances of the willingness of the telephone company to co-operate freely in such a scheme of readjustment have been given by F. H. Bethell, Vice President of the company. It was suggested by the Merchants' Association, in view of the fact that such a course had been recommended by Commissioner Decker of the Public Service Commission of the Second District, but that it had been stated that the commission itself had no funds available for such a valuation, that the Interstate Commerce Commission be utilized instead. To this Mr. Bethell, in behalf of the telephone company, agreed.

In his letter to Mr. Bethell, President William A. Marble of the Merchants' Association said in part:

> We believe that such a comprehensive inquiry would give general satisfaction to the public. It should also be acceptable to your company, as it would relieve it of the constant burden of expense, harassment, and labor incident to contesting a continuous succession of rate proceedings, each of which precipitates others.
> It is clear that before the equity of any general schedule of rates can be determined, the value of the property used in the public service must be ascertained. We are of opinion, however, that it would be unwise for any business association or private agency to undertake or vouch for the necessary valuation, inasmuch as its conclusions, however accurate, would not be conclusive with a large part of the public. We believe, therefore, that such valuation should be made by a public agency whose findings would be accepted without question.

In his reply to Mr. Marble's suggestion, Vice President Bethell of the New York Telephone Company said in part:

> In reply to your question, it gives me pleasure to say that we have never questioned the commission's right to value our property, that we have cheerfully furnished them with all information asked for, and that we are co-operating now with the representatives of the commission in all matters in which co-operation is asked for. If the public better understood some of our difficulties it would, I think, more fully appreciate the fact that we are striving to furnish adequate and efficient telephone service at reasonable rates, and that it would in consequence be glad to suspend judgment until the investigations of the Interstate Commerce Commission have been concluded.
> While we wish to do all that we can to assist in a solution of any questions relating to our business which may be outstanding in the State of New York, nevertheless, in view of the fact that the Interstate Commerce Commission is now engaged in an investigation into our affairs, we feel that you will agree with us that we are not quite in a position to suggest to them such a course of action as you have proposed. At the same time, I wish to assure you that we will gladly co-operate in carrying out any reasonable course of action which the Interstate Commerce Commission may wish to pursue, and that in no case will we question the jurisdiction of the commission in the premises.
> I will further say that if upon completion of the work of the Interstate Commerce Commission the association elects to petition the Public Service Commission to review our entire schedule of rates, and, so far as those rates may be found unreasonable, to readjust them, such action by the association would have the cordial assent of this company, inasmuch as this company earnestly desires not only to make its rates fair, but to have their fairness conclusively shown by unquestionable authority, and definitely accepted by the public.

Mr. Bethell also points out that the Interstate Commerce Commission has already done much work on telephone and telegraph valuation.

SUES VANDERBILT TRAINER.

Miss Schenck, Named as Co-respondent, Wants $50,000 Damages.

Charles H. Wilson, the trainer for Alfred G. Vanderbilt, whose first wife divorced him in 1900, is now being sued for $50,000 damages by Florence Rosser Schenck, who was named as the co-respondent in the divorce proceedings. The plaintiff declares that Wilson married her in London, England, on May 8, 1908, and that Valeska Suratt and A. D. Treece were the witnesses of the ceremony. Miss Schenck says that Wilson had falsely represented that his first wife had already procured a divorce and that she was purposely deceived. The papers in the case say that Wilson has since married, but the maiden name of his present wife does not appear.

Miss Schenck's attorneys are Rogers & Rogers. They said yesterday that Miss Schenck met Wilson in October, 1906, when she was only 18 years old. Then she was living with her parents in Norfolk, Va. Wilson was then about 43 years old. He told her, the story runs, that he was of independent means, that he managed the affairs of Mr. Vanderbilt at Newport, and that he persuaded her to make a trip with him to Richmond by promising to marry her there.

During the journey, Miss Schenck says, Wilson told her he could not marry her then because his wife had not yet got her divorce, but that he would make her his wife as soon as the decree was granted. Then, by more persuasion, Miss Schenck says, Wilson induced her to live with him, and they traveled together as man and wife, finally reaching London, where the marriage ceremony was performed.

The summons and complaint in the suit were served on Wilson at the Horse Show.

MRS. GARGAN MAY WED.

Court Says Her Husband, Serving Life Term, Is Civilly Dead.

Supreme Court Justice Maddox in Brooklyn yesterday decided that a woman whose husband is serving an indeterminate prison sentence, with life imprisonment as the maximum, is released from her marital obligations and free to marry again.

Mrs. Margaret M. Gargan, a school teacher, is 28 years old. She married John C. Gargan, a bookkeeper, in 1900. A year later Gargan shot and killed his wife's father, Martin Hynes, and his wife's brother, Harry C. Hynes, in a family quarrel. Supreme Court Justice Kelly sent him to prison under an indeterminate sentence, the minimum of which is twenty years and the maximum life, for murder in the second degree.

On Oct. 1 Mrs. Gargan and William Weisheimer of Woodhaven applied in Brooklyn for a marriage license. Clerk Scully, upon learning from Mrs. Gargan that her husband was in prison and that she had not obtained a divorce, refused to grant the license. Mrs. Gargan then asked for the writ of mandamus.

Justice Maddox holds that a person sentenced to prison for life, even under a sentence like Gargan's, is thereafter civilly dead.

The decision directs the City Clerk to issue the marriage license as though Gargan was actually dead. If the Corporation Counsel desires to appeal from the order, the Court says, an application for a stay may be made.

HOLLINS PARTNERS TESTIFY

H. B. Hollins, Busch and Kutzleb Say They Have No Resources.

Harry B. Hollins, Briton N. Busch and Walter Kutzleb, three of the members of the bankrupt brokerage firm of H. B. Hollins & Co., were examined yesterday in bankruptcy proceedings before Commissioner Gilchrist. They all testified that to all intents and purposes as a result of the failure of their firm they were penniless.

In answer to the questions put by T. Tileston Wells, attorney for the receiver, Mr. Hollins stated that he had no real estate, private yachts, horses, stocks or bonds. He has, he admitted, $150 in the bank, but he was quite willing to turn that over to the receiver.

He had reached this condition, Mr. Hollins testified, since last September. The new partnership arrangement of the reorganized Hollins firm was then founded, and Mr. Hollins had put into it $300,000, all that remained of his private fortune. At that time Walter Kutzleb, J. A. Aull and Anthony Walburg were admitted to partnership, and Mr. Kutzleb put in $100,000.

The original partnership consisted of Mr. Hollins, R. R. Govin and Briton N. Busch, but Mr. Govin retired when the new arrangement was made. It is understood that dissensions broke out between the new and old members of the firm.

Mr. Busch, when he took the stand, stated that he had been in the firm for fifteen years, and that all his present resources consisted of $200 deposit in a bank. He had life insurance policies to the amount of $45,000, but he has borrowed money on these, and he is prepared to hand them over to the receiver with such few shares of Curb stock and bonds as he owns, but which are worth very little.

Mr. Kutzleb also admitted that he was practically without resources. He will be recalled when the hearing is resumed on Monday. At that time it is expected that the other two members of the firm, Mr. Aull and Mr. Walburg, will also testify.

STATE AUTO MEN TO FORM SOCIETY

Dealers Meet To-day in Albany —Uniform Laws Commission in Session.

Representatives from all the automobile dealers' associations in the large cities of the State will meet in Albany to-day to form a State Association. At this meeting plans of organization will be perfected and a constitution and by-laws prepared which will be presented to the members of the various associations represented in the near future. The Automobile Dealers' Association, Incorporated, of this city will be represented at the meeting by Arthur M. Day, its President; John F. Plummer, R. H. Johnston, and Charles A. Stewart, its General Manager. The Brooklyn Motor Vehicle Dealers' Association will send its President, H. L. Carpenter, and Emanuel Lascaris, President of the Automobile Importers' Alliance, will represent the interests of the dealers in foreign cars. The meeting to-day was foreshadowed some months ago by the plan promulgated here to form a national association of automobile dealers, with the opposition of hostile legislation, the establishment of a credit bureau and mutual protection among its objects.

The movement for uniform automobile laws in the various States will take concrete form to-morrow morning in the first meeting of the Motor Vehicle Legislation Commission at the Hotel Belmont. A majority of the New England and Middle States will be represented by commissioners and various matters pertaining to motor car law making, such as touring, reciprocity, registration, and speed limits are expected to be discussed. S. W. Taylor is Chairman of the commission for this State, appointed by the Governor.

At its next meeting, to be held on Nov. 26, the Metropolitan Section of the Society of Automobile Engineers will discuss silent and roller chains and inlet manifolds. A paper on the first of these subjects will be read by John R. Cautley, who has made a special study of the subject, and who, from residence in England, is thoroughly familiar with foreign as well as American practice. Arthur B. Browne will present a paper on inlet manifolds, a subject intimately related to the vexing fuel problem. It is planned to offer at the December meeting of the section papers on heavy fuel carburetors and vaporizers.

Recent figures compiled from the State's registration figures show the steadily increasing proportion of motorists in California. Some counties have one automobile for every 20 or 25 of population. There are in service in the State 187 different makes of motor cars.

Military Manuals Not for "Schools" —Decision on Fish.

According to a decision by the Board of United States General Appraisers handed down yesterday "the school of officers" of the Fourth Infantry of the Ohio National Guard is not a "school of learning" within the meaning of the Tariff act of 1909. The issue came before the customs tribunal in the form of a protest by D. L. Bargar of Cleveland, who objected to the imposition of a duty of 25 per cent. ad valorem on manuals of military instruction as books under Paragraph 416.

The board sustained several protests relating to the classification under the act of 1909 of fish of various kinds packed in tins. The importers included Oberle & Henry, O. G. Hempstead & Son, G. B. Barham, G. S. Bush & Co., Inc.; American-Hawaiian Steamship Company, the Tolstad-Burger Company, John H. Boden & Co., Inc., and F. H. Shallus.

The G. S. Brackett Company of Minneapolis asked for an allowance on brandy imported from Canada. The firm said that there was a shortage in the number of bottles covered by the invoice. The board held that as the firm failed to establish whether the shortage occurred in this country or Canada, no relief could be granted.

SIDELIGHTS ON SELLING.

Cotton goods exporters have little confidence in present trade conditions of India. There is practically no further news in the market regarding the recent panic in that country, but the absence of such information is held to mean that at least no change for the worse has occurred.

The introduction of front-lace models in staple corset lines is one of the features of the current season that has more or less embarrassed the operatives. They find it difficult satisfactorily to make both front and back lace models. The change in many instances from standard cloths to cotton or silk tricot, peau de suede and mesh materials has also been a hindrance to production.

The popularity of the mackinaw jacket as an outing coat was conclusively shown at the Yale-Princeton football game last Saturday. It was noted that many of the coats worn by men were similar to the high-color effects adopted by the women.

EMBROIDERY TRADE SUIT.

Local Firm Alleges Non-Delivery of Machines After Partial Payment.

The Senner & Kaplan Co., manufacturers of embroideries, have filed a suit in the Supreme Court for $25,000 against the Robert Reinsr Importing Co. of Weehawken Heights, N. J., for alleged failure to deliver a number of embroidery machines ordered by them. The plaintiffs allege that on March 27, 1912, they entered into an agreement with the defendant to purchase one Schiffli machine and eleven automatic machines. They also say that they paid $500 on account, but that the plaintiff failed to live up to the contract.

Robert Reiner of the defendant firm, said yesterday that a slight delay in the arrival of a steamer from Hamburg had made it impossible for his firm to deliver the machines at the date set in the contract. In the answer filed by the Reiner Company through its attorneys, Diamond & Abrahams, after denying the material allegations in the complaint, a counter claim was set up for $2,600. This amount was the balance due on account of the purchase price of the Schiffli machine, $500 having been paid at the time of the execution of the contract.

CONSULAR TRADE NOTES.

According to a report from the Consul at Vancouver, a project is under way there for reclaiming some 28,000 acres of land lying southward from Golden along the Columbia River.

In a railway agreement just concluded between China and Japan it is stipulated that the Japanese shall provide money for the construction of two branches of the South Manchuria Railway. Other important railway developments are pending in China.

Following the report on the needs of Guayaquil, it was recently announced from Quito that the Ecuadorian Chamber of Deputies had approved a loan of $10,000,000 gold for sanitation works in Guayaquil.

BUSINESS NOTES.

Wheat exports from New York last week dropped slightly, aggregating 1,259,362 bushels, against 1,357,415 in the preceding week. Beef exports showed considerable gain, however, totaling 1,083 barrels and 315 tierces, compared with 470 and 376, respectively, in the week before.

A special meeting of the stockholders of the Alfred Benjamin-Washington Company, will be held on Nov. 28 at 440 Lafayette Street, to vote on the question of reducing the number of Directors from 9 to 7.

IN THE BUSINESS WORLD

Stove Coal Wanted Badly.

"With weather conditions more conducive to a liberal use of domestic coal," says The Coal Trade Journal, "the demand for anthracite has increased in the last ten days. All sizes have been helped, but, so far as the local situation is concerned, the call is still principally for stove sizes.

"Hopes of a stronger situation in bituminous coal as a result of the recent storm have fallen flat, and the market shows signs of increasing weakness."

Suggests Caution in Deliveries.

With the approach of the holiday season the National Jewelers' Board of Trade suggests that members of the trade take more care in delivering the orders they fill. In view of the fact that very valuable articles can be carried in small packages and can be concealed easily, the board says that messengers should be cautioned against speaking to strangers and doing other things that might lead to attempts at robbery. Already two attempts to rob messengers of local firms have been reported to the board for investigation.

Like Designers' Announcements.

The plan adopted by the style committees of the various designers' conventions of announcing publicly their recommendations of cut and fabrics of women's ready-to-wear garments has been met with approval in the local fabric markets. When the manufacturers and wholesalers know that the designers favor certain kinds of cloths because they lend themselves to the adopted styles, they say it means less guessing as to what will be "right" for the season. This means, of course, that they will find fewer "stickers" in their stocks at the end of the season and a better profit in their pockets if they take the hints the designers give.

Cook Resigns from Knox Hat Co.

Edward Knox Cook, Vice President and General Manager of the Knox Hat Manufacturing Company, has been forced to resign by a nervous breakdown. Mr. Cook has been at the head of the manufacturing end of the concern for a number of years, and succeeded to the Vice Presidency only last Summer. The report that Mr. Cook would dispose of his interests in the firm was denied at the local office of the company yesterday. Albert Thetford, who has been associated with Mr. Cook for some time, will succeed him as General Manager. It could not be definitely learned who would succeed Mr. Cook as Vice President.

Insufficient Profits in Collars?

Considerable amusement was caused among local collar manufacturers yesterday by a prominent retailer's assertion that profits in retailing men's collars were not commensurate with the cost of doing business, and that the stores should raise prices. This dealer suggested that manufacturers charge $1.20 a dozen for collars instead of the present figure of $1.10, and that retailers then sell them at 17 cents each, or three for 50 cents. According to one prominent local agent, this plan would give the makers an additional profit of 10 cents a dozen and the retailers an extra profit of 40 cents a dozen. The consumer would bear the added cost.

Change in R. H. Macy & Co.

It was announced yesterday that Nathan Straus, Sr., would retire on Feb. 1 from the business of R. H. Macy & Co. and devote his time to other interests, among which were the Abraham & Straus store in Brooklyn and the firm of L. Straus & Sons, importers and manufacturers of cut glass and crockery. On the same date Percy S., Jesse I., and Herbert N. Straus, who will continue to operate the Macy store, will withdraw their interests from the firms of Abraham & Straus and L. Straus & Sons. Nathan Straus, Jr., and Grant Straus will leave the Macy firm with their father. It is understood that Jesse I. Straus will assume the senior partnership in R. H. Macy & Co.

COMMODITIES MARKETS

Wheat was quiet yesterday, but demand was sufficient to advance prices from ⅜ to ⅝c. Corn showed fair strength at times and closed with gains extending from ½ to 1⅛c a bushel. Oats, however, eased off slightly under late selling. In the cotton market the November option gained 16 points with declines of from 7 to 12 points in other options. Provisions and cotton oil were firm.

WHEAT.

The wheat market lacked animation, but the tendency of values was upward, and prices at the close were at about the best of the day, with net gains of ⅝@⅝c. The Argentine situation appeared to have lost force as a market factor. The domestic statistical position appears rather bearish on the surface, as receipts continue to run ahead of expectations in the Northwest, and stocks are still accumulating. Minneapolis has gained 275,000 bushels during the last four days, while Duluth stocks increased 647,000 in three days.

The Liverpool market was very steady, and it seemed to be the general impression that the future course of values would be determined by the attitude of foreign buyers. Stocks abroad are still quite liberal, but buyers, especially in the United Kingdom, had apparently been looking forward to the usual supplies from India, which now appear very doubtful of being fulfilled, and bulls here are basing their operations on the belief that foreign buyers will have to make purchases in the American markets. Export sales for the day were of fair proportions, and at all positions probably aggregated about 50 loads.

In the local cash market No. 2 red Winter wheat was quoted at 97½c, cost, insurance, and freight, New York export basis, and 99c, free on board; No. 1 Northern, Duluth, 95¾c, free on board.

CORN.

Prices in the corn market were firmer throughout the greater part of the day on covering, easing off slightly late, and closing at a net advance of ⅛c to 1¼c. The weather in the West was still somewhat unsettled an armer, which was against the best interes of the movement of new corn, but it was stated that offerings from the country were larger. Firmness in Liverpool and in Buenos Aires had a sympathetic influence on values, as exports from Argentina have been quite heavy of late.

In the local cash market old No. 2 yellow corn was quoted at 83c, elevator, domestic.

OATS.

The oats market was firmer early in sympathy with wheat and corn and on moderate receipts at primary points, but eased off late under selling by prominent commission houses, closing net unchanged to ⅛c lower. The local cash market was steady, standard white being quoted at 46 to 47c; No. 3, 47 to 47½c; No. 3, 45½ to 46c; No. 4, 44½ to 45c; ordinary clipped white, 44½ to 46¼c; fancy clipped white, 47 to 48c, all elevator.

PROVISIONS.

The market for hog products was only moderately active, but a firmer feeling prevailed, and prices closed at about the top. Receipts of hogs were again quite liberal, and the hog market was only about steady, but strong interests seemed to be identified with the buying side, and values were influenced to some extent by the firmness in corn. Receipts of hogs at Chicago were 53,000; estimated for Thursday, 44,000. Kansas City received 13,000, and Omaha 9,000.

COTTONSEED OIL.

The cottonseed oil market was inactive, with comparatively little interest manifested in the market, but the undertone was steady, and at the close November was 9 points higher, while other positions showed gains of 1 to 4 points.

COTTON.

The cotton market was quiet yesterday, as though waiting for the action of the Revision Committee, which met after the close last night, or for the census report on ginning, which is due at the opening on Friday morning. Fluctuations were more or less irregular, but the final tendency of prices was easier on rumors that the revision would not be as bullish as many traders had predicted earlier in the month. December was relatively weak and closed at a net decline of 12 points, while November was nominally 16 points higher, and other months from 7 to 9 points net lower.

The market opened steady at unchanged prices to 1 point lower, and active months sold 6 to 9 points net lower right after the call under scattered selling, which seemed largely due to a misapprehension with reference to the average crop estimate of the Memphis Cotton Exchange. This estimate of 14,480,020 bales was at first supposed to be exclusive of linters, but it was very soon learned that it was intended to represent the commercial crop, which would include both linters and repacks, and the market probably rallied to about the closing figures of Tuesday. The closing bid on November was within 7 points of December, although on November yesterday was selling at a discount of about 35 points.

Southern spot markets, as officially reported, were unchanged to ⅛c lower.

COFFEE.

It was the consensus of opinion among local coffee operators that the failures reported in Brazil on Tuesday marked the culmination of the recent financial difficulties among coffee operators in that country, and this theory was partially confirmed by private cables, which reported a firmer feeling in Brazil, one authority cabling that it looks as if the liquidation is over.

The fact that Brazil was still willing to sell coffee at comparatively low figures had a tendency to discourage aggressive operations on the buying side and the undertone of the market was still nervous, as it was thought probable that even a moderate advance would result in more liberal offerings from Rio. The Hamburg market was closed owing to a holiday, while in Brazil the Rio spot market was 25 reis lower, Santos was unchanged and Santos futures were 25 reis lower to 25 higher.

In the local spot market Rio grades were advanced 1-16c in sympathy with futures, Rio 7s being quoted at 9½c, while Santos grades were unchanged.

Opp rtune Bond Purchases

Four years ago the cost of a certain $1000 first mortgage 4% railroad bond was $920. The railroad then earned a surplus over charges of $360,000.

To-day the railroad is earning a surplus of $1,250,000, but the cost of the bond is now only $720. and the income therefrom is about 5½%.

Now is the opportune time to purchase these bonds.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Prices Decline a Little in Day of Increased Dullness Marked by Rumors.

A little less trading was done yesterday than on either of the two earlier days of the week, and while prices declined, the movement was very limited. Even in the few stocks in which the bulk of the day's trading operations were carried on the losses were smaller. In might have been otherwise if the financial community had taken seriously the rumors of impending insolvencies which were industriously circulated. Something of these reports had been heard for several days, but yesterday indications were afforded that they were being systematically spread abroad with the apparent purpose of unsettling the stock market. The Stock Exchange was well advised in inviting information which would place it in a position to lay the matter of the circulation of these reports before the District Attorney.

Such rumors spread from the low channels in which they originated to higher levels of the financial community, and in their progress necessarily do harm. That they did so little harm yesterday not improbably was due to the market's being in so thoroughly a liquidated position that it was free from the danger of taking fright at such reports. That does not alter the dastardly character of the work which was attempted, nor should it lessen the energy with which the Stock Exchange, which has already taken official cognizance of the matter, should pursue it with a view to discouraging by what means may be at its disposal a repetition of similar efforts in the future without reference to any of the houses which were so brazenly talked of yesterday, it is no doubt true that there are many concerns which in these months of idle Stock Exchange sessions have earned little or nothing, but this very condition preassumes an absence of extensive commitments which in a stagnant market might become a menace. This is an aspect of the matter which should help to set at ease those who were inclined to worry over yesterday's irresponsible rumors.

News bearing on the financial situation differed little in tenor from that of recent days. Money became still a little easier, the foreign markets which suffered some declines did little or nothing to alter our own trade news, which yesterday had principally to do with the iron and steel trade, dwelt mostly on the decline in orders and in production, which has become a marked feature of the steel trade in recent weeks. Some further improvement in New Haven stock came as a natural sequel to the successful placing of the new note issue which is to provide funds for the payment of the notes which shortly mature. These New Haven notes bearing 6 per cent. interest and offered at 98¾, which are to run six months or less, were all placed very early in the day. Indeed their sale was assured even before formal announcement of the issue was made. There was a little further rise in the proposed debenture bonds, the putting out of which has been postponed until the Massachusetts courts have had an opportunity to pass on the questions which stockholders of the road have raised in respect to this issue. The improvement is very hopeful of sustaining the legality of the proposed debentures, but in any event it now has another six months in which to make permanent provision for the obligations which mature the first of next month and the payment of which is now being anticipated by the company.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

A Slump in Railway Net.

September earnings of all the steam railroads in the United States as reported to the Interstate Commerce Commission were about as bad as those reported a few days ago for the preceding month. Traffic continued to show gains over the corresponding month of last year, but the gains were smaller than the increases in operating expenses. Aggregate revenues were $277,558,000, an increase for all lines of $9,135,000, but operating costs advanced in the same time $14,128,000, while nearly $1,000,000 more was added to the month's tax bill. The largest single item of increase was in transportation expenses, where was reflected the higher wages paid to nearly all classes of railway employes. The total net earnings for all the companies were only $79,333,000, a decrease of $6,322,000 from the net for September of 1912, when a much smaller volume of business was turned over.

Unavoidable Financing.

If they do not raise one dollar for improvements or equipment purchases, twenty-three railroads in the United States are obligated to raise next year more than $300,000,000 to provide for the maturity of outstanding obligations, a large part of which are short-term note issues put out to tide the companies over to a period of easier money. Statisticians estimate that these companies should be in a position to raise $250,000,000 more for additions to their existing facilities, or $650,000,000 all told. The maturities in the current year were nearly as large, $380,000,000, and they were taken care of without serious trouble, although in some instances the corporations had to pay a high rate for accommodation. Bankers hope that investment conditions in 1914 will be so much better than in 1913 that it will be possible to pay a large share of the short-term issues maturing with long-term bond issues, which would reduce the maturities of later years.

Copper Definitely Declines.

Copper was considered yesterday as being definitely on a 15½-cent basis. It had been selling in small lots at this figure for some time, but news that the larger sales agencies were quoting this price was needed to establish the recognized market. Announcement was made that one of the important distributing companies had retreated from the former price of 16⅞ cents, and consumers were quoted as saying that this recognition of the lack of snap in the trade ought to arouse some interest among manufacturers and induce a fair amount of buying at the lower price. It is generally conceded in copper circles, however, that a real expansion of demand is not likely to occur until general business improvement sets in.

Credulous Traders.

For the second time within a fortnight a member of the Interstate Commerce Commission had been quoted as favoring an advance in freight rates. For the second time much ado has been made about the change in sentiment among the commission members by people who trade in securities. And for the second time, unfortunately for such traders, the Commissioner quoted has come out with a formal denial of the remarks credited to him. A little application of common sense to reported interviews with Interstate Commerce Commissioners, in which they presume to forecast the outcome of a case in which they are to act as judges, would have convinced any one that something in the remarks had been misunderstood.

Steel Steady Despite Conditions.

The weekly review of steel trade conditions were, on the whole, the most unfavorable that have been issued since the present recession of business began, but there was practically no reflection of sentiment in the price of Steel common. The general summary of activity at the mills indicates that operations are steadily declining, and this information is supplemented by advices from trade centres telling of further reduction of quotations. Steel bars are reported as selling at Chicago at $1.20 a hundred pounds, a figure representing a falling off of $2 a ton in a week. In stock market gossip the comparative steadiness of Steel is credited to the probability that many phases of the situation already have been discounted, and that it will take some severe shock, like a sudden general cut in prices or a reduction of wages, to affect the shares substantially.

STEEL TRADE DROOPING.

Production Is Contracting While Buyers Await Lower Prices.

Further contraction in the operations of steel and iron companies has been noted in the trade this week. Buyers continue to hold off, presumably in the expectation of getting their orders filled later at prices lower than they are now. The Iron Age says:

The slowing down in iron and steel operations continues and in the case of some steel companies has been more sharply accentuated in the past week. Buyers of steel products are said to be awaiting developments, which is another way of saying that they are expecting lower prices and therefore do not consider this the time to make contracts.

It is not easy to measure the extent to which manufacturing consumers of finished steel have curtailed output. Automobile companies are known to have reduced forces considerably. Agricultural machinery interests, judging from the falling off in their bar specifications, are operating at a good deal less than full capacity. This is apparently not due to an unfavorable outlook for next year's crops, for prospects as gauged by planting are good; but rather to the belief that lower prices for their raw materials can be had later, and that general business conditions do not warrant full headway now.

The situation as to imports is unchanged. Eastern representatives of one European steel company have had scores of inquiries for prices from new sources without closing any business. Domestic consumers talk of foreign offers and of import possibilities but all hesitate to make the plunge, preferring home products of known quality even at higher price.

The Iron Trade Review says:

No signs of a turn from the general sluggish condition of the iron and steel market are to be observed. Makers continue to readjust their operations to the reduced scale of buying, and production on all sides this month will show a considerable decline. Buyers are still engaging their requirements in a most reserved fashion and their purchases remain of the hand-to-mouth character. Fundamental conditions in the industry from every test appear very sound, and stocks have been liquidated to relatively light proportions, so that the situation seems to be susceptible to quick stimulation when buying on any sizeable scale is resumed.

New York Commercial Co. Dividend.

A dividend of 15 per cent., payable on Dec. 1, was declared yesterday by John J. Townsend, of 45 Cedar street, referee in the bankruptcy proceedings of the New York Commercial Company, a firm importing crude rubber. Mr. Townsend at the same time said that another dividend of 10 per cent. would be declared soon.

A petition in bankruptcy was filed by the company April 12, 1913, in which the liabilities were placed at $5,945,659. Two hundred and thirty creditors were named.

Bank of France's Metal Holdings.

PARIS, Nov. 19.—The weekly statement of the Bank of France, when issued to-morrow, will show increases of 2,851,000 francs in gold and 2,174,000 francs in silver holdings.

OUTSIDE SECURITIES

Curb Market Quiet and Reactionary with the Oil Stocks the Feature.

The outside security market was quiet and reactionary in tone. The oil stocks were again the feature of the trading, but their movements were narrower than on Tuesday. Standard Oil of New Jersey sold up 1½ points to 381 on the early dealings, but later receded to 378, at which price it closed, showing a net loss of 1½ points for the day. United Cigar Stores closed ⅝ lower on small sales. Riker-Hegeman new stock, the par value of which is $5, made its first appearance and was dealt in to the extent of 2,500 shares at 7¼ to 7, the latter the closing price.

At present prices investments are recognized as "cheap." Their safety remains unimpaired. Good bonds can therefore be purchased to yield 5% or slightly over.

Consider then the exceptional advantages of a short-term note, secured by first and refunding mortgage bonds exceeding the par amount of the notes, and yielding 7%.

Earnings increasing year by year, convertible at any time during the next three years into long-term bonds, and at a price equal to or better than the bargains of to-day.

These features, among others, are embodied in the Three-Year Bond Secured Notes of a prominent Public Utility Company, which we offer (strictly subject to prior sale and advance in price) to yield 7%.

The notes are in denominations of $100, $500 and $1,000.

MALICE IN RUMORS OF BANK FAILURES

Credit of Wall Street Houses Covertly Attacked in Anonymous 'Phone Inquiries.

EXCHANGE TO INVESTIGATE

President Mabon Calls False Reports Criminal and Seeks to Prosecute Their Originators.

What appear to have been malicious efforts to create distrust throughout the financial district on the heels of the failure of H. B. Hollins & Co. assumed such proportions yesterday that the New York Stock Exchange was forced to take cognizance of them. President Mabon said last night that if evidence pointing to the man or men behind the rumors of impending bankruptcy could be obtained the Exchange authorities would at once take the matter up with the District Attorney.

Most of the stories of the last three days have centred around the names of three large firms. Inquiry of men at the head of these houses brought instant denials, with evidence to disprove the reports.

Some one familiar with the success which attended the telephone warnings issued by David Lamar has called up several newspaper offices in the last few days to ask if the failure of certain houses has become known. So quickly do rumors affecting a firm's solvency become general knowledge that these reports permeated the entire district before noon on the day they were started, and they soon became very annoying to the houses mentioned.

Shortly before 11 o'clock yesterday a small crowd of reporters and others anxious to get news promptly of failures on which they had been "tipped off" gathered near the members' entrance to the floor of the Stock Exchange to hear an announcement if one should be made by the Chairman. When he learned how widespread these rumors had become, and the similarity of their origin, President Mabon took step to counteract their effect. Mr. Mabon said last night:

"Our attention has been called to the alleged activities of some person or persons, who, through telephone calls and underground methods, are seeking to undermine confidence in various houses in the financial district. Amore despicable method of attempting to arouse public distrust could not be imagined. Apparently there is no hesitation in using names, and houses of established reputation have been mentioned freely.

"This is nothing less than criminal, and if any one can assist us in placing the responsibility where it belongs we shall be glad to bring the matter before the District Attorney."

District Attorney Whitman said last night that, while he had received no complaints of the malicious circulation of rumors intended to injure certain banking institutions, any one implicated in spreading such reports could be prosecuted under a special statute. The circulation of such rumors is made a misdemeanor by section 303 of the Criminal Code, which reads:

Any person who willfully and knowingly makes and circulates, or transmits to another or others, any statement or rumor, written, printed, or by word of mouth, which is untrue in fact and is directly or by inference inimical to the financial condition or affects the solvency of any bank, savings bank, banking association, building and loan association, or trust company doing business in this State, or who knowingly counsels, aids, procures, or induces another to start, transmit, or circulate any such statement or rumor, is guilty of a misdemeanor, and punishable by a fine of not more than $1,000, or by imprisonment for not more than one year, or both.

This law was passed by the State Legislature in 1912 and went into effect Sept. 1 of that year.

ASSETS COMPANY SOUND.

Directors Make a Reassuring Statement to Stockholders.

Disturbing rumors about the Assets Realization Company heard in Wall Street this week while the price of the company's stock was declining, brought forth the assurance from the Directors to the stockholders yesterday that the company was sound financially and that a statement of its resources would be made in a few days. The assurance was contained in this statement:

During the year 1912 commitments were made by the company obligating it to take on a heavy volume of new business, which at the time of its authorization seemed profitable. Since the making of these commitments the security market has been in such condition that it has been impossible for the company to realize upon its securities as it would have done in an ordinary market; nevertheless, the company was obliged to take care of its commitments, and its obligation to do so, taken in connection with the fact that it is unable to market its securities as it could in ordinary times, has resulted in the creation of indebtedness in excess of what the Directors would have thought to be conservative under normal conditions.

This considerable debt, in connection with the general financial stringency and the inability of the company to make its normal earnings, has resulted in great depression in the company's stock, which has had broad market, being heretofore considered as of an investment character. In the judgment of the board, the present price of the shares represents far less than the liquidating value of the corporate assets after the debts are paid. The feeling of the Board of Directors upon this point is best evidenced by the fact that the Directors now own, and for a long time past have owned, approximately one-third of the entire capital stock.

The drop in the shares and the apprehension on the part of certain of the shareholders has been caused by various rumors and general apprehension not founded on any specific knowledge of the affairs of the company. The board will at once proceed to prepare a statement showing in ample detail the condition of the company, and will forward a copy to each shareholder as soon as the work is completed.

One explanation given in gossip of the Street of the sharp decline of 3¼ points in Assets Realization shares in a few days was that a former officer of the company had disposed of his holdings.

FOR INSURANCE OF WORKERS

Gov. Glynn Optimistic After Talk on Proposed Compensation Act.

ALBANY, Nov. 19.—A conference held to-day over the proposed Workmen's Compensation Act made Gov. Glynn optimistic about getting such legislation through the Legislature this year. Conflicting interests spoiled Gov. Sulzer's plans for this act last year. The chief differences arose between labor interests and casualty companies. Gov. Glynn is seeking to have the two sides accept his views.

The Governor would provide for casualty insurances in case plans favored by the labor interests fail. The bill will provide for insurance through a State fund, mutual companies and casualty companies and through self-insurance by the corporation concerned. A State Board of Industrial Insurance would approve all negligence damage awards. A tentative bill along this line will be drawn up to-morrow for approval.

Those who conferred with the Governor to-day were Peter J. Brady, Allied Printers' Trade Council; John P. Ogden, Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen; Thomas F. Ryan, Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen; Thomas G. Fitzgerald, Federation of Labor; William Fitzgerald, Amalgamated Association Street Railway Employes; John Fitzgibbons, Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, and John T. McDonough, counsel for organized workmen of the State.

MORE BANK RESOURCES.

Gain of $424,705,818 — Deposits Rise $290,350,355—Reserves Less.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19.—National banks gained in resources $424,705,818 during the past three months, and in deposits $290,350,355. Their total resources are now $11,801,558,162.29, half of which is in loans and discounts, over a billion in bonds and securities, and over $710,000,000 in specie.

This is according to a statement issued by the Controller of the Currency to-day, based on reports of 7,509 national banks showing their condition on Oct. 21.

The total reserve held by all the national banks on that date was $1,473,487,722, an average of 20.54 per cent., or $52,045,357 above the reserve the banks were required to hold. Treasury officials regard this as a gratifying showing for the entire country.

The reserve held by the central reserve cities was $390,753,898, a deficiency of $4,500,832. On Aug. 9 last the same cities held a reserve of $411,454,004, which was $6,620,184 in excess of the legal requirement. The reserve of these cities in October was a fraction better than a year ago, when it was $371,135,235 or $9,281,420 below the legal requirement.

The situation was the same with respect to the amount of reserve held by the national banks in other reserve cities, which held on Oct. 21 $478,414,747, compared with $475,447,300 on Aug. 9 last, and $471,759,700 on Nov. 26, 1912. In these cities the October reserve showed a deficiency of $375,352, as compared with a surplus of $5,035,534 on Aug. 9, and a deficiency of $10,063,533 on Nov. 26, 1912.

The reserves of country banks on Oct. 21 were larger than on Aug. 1, and also a year ago, and were $56,921,541 in excess of the legal requirement, being $614,319,077. In August the country banks had a reserve of $585,585,917, a legal excess of $44,229,594. A year ago their reserve was $50,497,886 in excess.

New York City banks report decreases since Aug. 9 of $26,272,715 in their loans and discounts, $29,059,727 in cash, and an increase of $79,102,171 in individual deposits. Compared with a year ago their loans increased $36,019,010, their cash $13,857,332, but their deposits decreased $27,286,138.

The other reserve city banks in the Eastern States report gains over Aug. 9 in all three items, amounting to $14,963,350 for loans, $3,162,357 for cash, and $36,757,576 for deposits.

The country banks in the Eastern States report gains over August amounting to $14,854,196 in loans, $6,822,176 in cash, and $29,909,150 for deposits.

TO SETTLE FLOOD CLAIMS.

Austin Company Will Pay Portion of Damages by Dam Bursting.

Special to The New York Times.

BINGHAMTON, N. Y., Nov. 19.—It is announced to-day that the Bayless Pulp and Paper Company of this city and Austin, Penn., will settle the 200 damage suits aggregating $350,000 which have been brought against the company by the survivors of the Austin flood, in which eighty lives were lost through the bursting of the dam.

It is said that 80 per cent. of the claimants, representing more than $400,000, have signed stipulations agreeing to the terms of settlement, which provide that the claimants will receive from 10 to 50 per cent. of their respective claims, according to the merits of individual cases. The terms are said to include the distribution of more than $150,000 worth of stock in the reorganized company to claimants in full satisfaction.

The settlement of the damage suits will carry with it the discontinuance of the criminal actions now pending against George C. Bayless, President of the company, and F. N. Hamlin, Superintendent.

$953,206,011 DUE IN 3 YEARS

Obligations to be Met by Corporations Before the End of 1916.

Outstanding bond and note obligations of the leading railroad and industrial corporations which mature before the end of 1916 amount to $953,206,011, according to the records of The Journal of Commerce. Of this total $45,897,000 must be retired or renewed before the end of the current calendar year.

The largest single amount falling due next month is the $40,000,000 note issue of the New Haven. Other important issues are $1,817,000 Interborough-Metropolitan notes and $1,800,000 bonds of the United Railways of San Francisco.

FINANCIAL NOTES.

E. F. Hutton & Co. have leased a suite of offices on the first floor of the Adams Express Building, now in process of construction. The firm will move into its new quarters about Jan. 1.

To-day is the last day for depositing St. Louis & San Francisco general lien 5 per cent. gold bonds with the Bankers' Trust Company under the bondholders' agreement dated May 28, 1913. After to-day bonds will be accepted only under such penalty as Speyer & Co. may impose.

ASKS FAIR PLAY FOR THE NEW HAVEN

Chairman Elliott Questions Justice and Wisdom of Government's Rate Policy.

BURDEN PILED ON BURDEN

Tells New Haven Commerce Board of His Road's Urgent Need of Public's Co-operation.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 19.—An appeal for the co-operation of the public with the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad in the trying period of its history through which it is passing was made by Chairman Howard Elliott of that road in an address to the local Chamber of Commerce here this evening.

Recalling a recent remark by President Worthington of the Chicago & Alton that "kinds words of sympathy are not out of place at a funeral, but sympathy is a poor substitute for nourishment, and what the railroads need now is nourishment in the shape of increased rates," Mr. Elliott said:

"None of us want to attend any funerals, but the patient is not well and the people are doctors that must help to cure him.

"In dealing with railroad regulation and rate limitations much weight is given to the fact that gross earnings of the railroads show increases, leaving one to infer that such increase in gross means financial success. This is not necessarily true. Not only has revenue per unit of service decreased in recent years, but expenses have even increased.

"The railroad is a distributing agent as well as a collecting one. It collects from the people money for transporting them and their goods; it distributes most of this money in the form of wages, taxes, and in payments for materials and supplies. But year after year the difference between its collections and distributions has been growing less, until the margin between the two is not enough to provide the funds needed to make improvements and to attract new money to the business at reasonable rates of interest. This is due largely to the increased cost of labor and material.

"Railroad regulation may be necessary to prevent unjust discrimination between individuals, localities, and commodities, and to prevent unreasonable charges. But it is to be questioned if any sound principle of economics or governmental policy underlies the theory that regulation should go further and deny to a railroad the right to fix for its service charges that are not unduly discriminatory or unreasonably high, as measured by the service performed.

"Revenues are falling and expenses are rising. Some economics can be introduced by spending money for bigger engines that will move more cars, but where is the money for these engines, longer passing tracks, heavier bridges needed, and enlarged terminals to be obtained?

"There are three things that are absolutely essential if the railroad situation in New England is to be what all desire:

"First—There must be confidence, loyalty, and co-operation between officers and men all along the line and a good esprit de corps.

"Second—There must be confidence, frankness, and reason between the great shipping and traveling public and the railroad so that differences of opinion may be discussed in a calm, businesslike way with a willingness on the part of each to consider the viewpoint of the other.

"Third—There must be open-minded, fair and frank relations between all the different public bodies with which the railroad has to deal so constanly—commissions, city councils, Legislatures. The railroad is a servant of the people and so are these governental agencies—and both must act with prudence and remember that untair and dishonest treatment of people, communities, or property will in the long run hurt the people as a whole.

"I believe thoroughly in the future of New England and in the ultimate success of her transportation system. The New Haven is a great property; it is in trouble now, but patence, hard work, and far treatment by all should enable it to give the service the people want and at the same time permit a good return to the owners."

EXPORTERS NEED MERCHANT MARINE

Charles H. Sherrill Points Out the Probable Result of an Anglo-German War.

REBATES ALSO HURT THEM

Foreign Shipowners Put Rates All In Favor of Competitors—Branch Banks Needed.

With approximately 82 per cent. of the American merchandise annually sent to other countries now going to them in ships flying the German and English flags, what would our exporters do in the event of a war between those countries? This question was put up to the members of the American Manufacturers' Export Association yesterday by Charles H. Sherrill, former United States Minister to Argentina, at the first of the monthly luncheons to be given this Fall and Winter by the Association.

Mr. Sherrill then answered his question by saying that the possibility of such a war and its resultant financial loss to American exporters could efficiently be guarded against only by the establishment and maintenance of an American merchant marine large enough to handle the bulk of the domestic merchandise consigned to other countries. At present, he asserted, only about 8 per cent. of this merchandise was carried in American bottoms. While Mr. Sherrill did not say that he thought war between Germany and England was imminent, he said that sixteen months abroad had shown him that the press of the two countries talked a great deal of the possibility of it, and that the politicians gave war talk little chance to rest. He then pointed out in detail how the American export trade would be handicapped by such a war, saying that unless an American merchant marine were prodvided while peace prevailed there was a strong possibility that merchandise would pile up on the piers of the American shipping ports and result in a serious commercial panic.

"About the easiest way American business interests can acquire $600,000,000 a year," he continued, "is by getting back into their hands the carrying of merchandise entering the export trade of the country. The earnest support of the members of this association and other manufacturers seeking export trade is required to bring about this much-needed merchant marine.

"In two years, while I was in Argentina, only one vessel came into the port of Buenos Aires under the American flag. Where once our merchant marine service was great enough to command the respect of the world, it has now declined to a point where it is practically the laughing stock of the other nations.

"Even without a possibility of war between Germany and England there is a great need of American merchant ships. At this very moment, as they have for years, the foreign steamship combines are tricking American importers through a system of rebates so extensively practiced that it makes the former efforts of our railroads along this line look trivial. The idea of the owners of both German and English vessels is to stimulate the business of their countries by offering to the American exporter rates on merchandise bought abroad, and thus shipped to his foreign markets, that are a great deal lower than they will give him on merchandise produced in the United States and then shipped from American ports. The rebating practices of the foreign shipping syndicates must be checked if our exporters are to compete on even terms with exporters in other countries. The solution of the problem is again the establishment and maintenance of an efficient merchant marine flying the American flag."

Mr. Sherrill also referred to the American manufacturers' need of seeking additional foreign markets for their products to meet the increased competition they will get here from foreign producers under the new tariff. He also referred to the Currency bill, saying that he hoped it would pass if only for the purpose of getting a law which provided for the establishment of branches of American banks in foreign countries. The establishment of such branches, he said, was practically as essential to the future development of our export trade as the establishment of the much-needed merchant marine service. He said that the foreign banking interests, many of which were interested in concerns competing with American producers, were not overfriendly to our exporters, and he cited instances where business had been lost for the American trade through the lack of adequate and disinterested banking facilities.

Dr. M. de Moreira, who some time ago succeeded Secretary of Commerce Redfield as President of the association, but who has since been succeeded by C. E. Jennings of this city, also spoke. Dr. de Moreira recently returned from an extended trip to Brazil, and while there was greatly impressed by the increased cordiality of relations between that country and this since the visit here of Dr. Lauro Müller, the Brazilian Secretary of State, earlier in the year. This cordiality, he said, included both State and business relations.

Dr. de Moreira spoke also of his attempts to found an American Chamber of Commerce in Brazil, with headquarters in Rio de Janeiro. This idea was suggested, he said, by the great amount of commercial complaint, and inquiry that was handled by the American Consul General in that city, much of which were too trivial ordinarily to be submitted to that source for consideration. The establishment of the proposed chamber would, he thought, lighten considerably the work of the Consulate, and would permit of complaints being made in the name of the organization instead of the firm involved. In serious cases the necessary work could be done by the chamber in conjunction with the Consul General.

"Dr. Müller was pleased with the possibility of the formation of the proposed chamber," he continued, "and it also met the approval of Consul General Lay and Ambassador Morgan. The by-laws of the proposed chamber should be based on those of the American Chamber of Commerce in Paris, and prominent Brazilian firms doing an export business with this country should be admitted to membership. The project will be quite expensive in the beginning, but the results it would produce would doubtless more than offset the initial cost. The support of the members of this association in the matter is earnestly desired."

Other speakers were C. E. Jennings, President of the association, who briefly reviewed its activities in the last six months, and R. J. Easton, Chairman of the Membership Committee. Mr. Easton made an earnest plea for co-operation in increasing the membership, and, incidently, the work of the association. Secretary Douglas read a letter of regret from Secretary of Commerce Redfield, who was unable to be present.

About a hundred representative exporters and guests attended the luncheon. Among those seated at the guest table were Charles H. Sherrill, the Rev. H. C. Stuntz, resident Methodist Episcopal Bishop of South America; P. F. Thomas, F. D. Waterman, W. J. White, C. E. Jennings, Franklin Johnston, E. H. Huxley James A. Farrell, and G. W. Doonan of the local branch of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce.

Need of Inland Waterways.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Nov. 19.—That an inland waterway along the Atlantic Coast would offer a haven for coastwise trade during war with a foreign power was an argument advanced in favor of that project by Capt. W. V. E. Jacobs of the United States Revenue Cutter Service at the sixth annual convention of the Atlantic Deeper Waterways Association to-day. The construction of such waterways as would make possible the avoidance of dangerous shoals also would be a valuable asset to the nation, he said, in that they would be the means of preserving human lives and property.

THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

Harlem Continues Active, Including Sales of New Apartment Near Central Park—Ice Company Gets Old Church—B. R. T. Buys Ninety Acres on Coney Island—Big Forty-second Street Lease.

Evidences of real estate activity have been very noticeable in Harlem recently and another indication of the realty interest there was shown yesterday in the sale of a new six-story apartment nearing completion at 24 to 30 West 111th Street, being a part of the former vacant Pinkney estate block, which has witnessed rapid improvement since its sale at auction about two years ago. The apartment named has been purchased by John Volz from the Tilmil Realty Company, composed of Williams & Grodginsky. It covers a plot 100 by 72 feet, and adjoins a similar six-story house at 16 to 22, recently completed and purchased by Mr. Volz from the same sellers last April.

In part payment for his new acquisition Mr. Volz has given two five-story tenements with stores at 1,741 and 1,743 Avenue A, covering a plot 50 by 94 feet, adjoining the southwest corner of Ninety-first Street.

On the Lenox Avenue side of the block, at the northeast corner of 110th Street or Cathedral Parkway, the John A. Sonntag property has just been purchased by the Winston Holding Company, and plans prepared for improving the plot with two six-story apartment houses.

Buyers for Harlem Flats.

The five-story flat at 63 West 133d Street, on a plot 25 by 100 feet, has been resold by J. Anthony Minott for Jeanette G. Wetmore to Louis H. Rose. The seller acquired the property about two weeks ago.

The Herman Arns Company sold for the heirs of the estate of Albert and Fanny Levy the property 2,174 Eighth Avenue, 50 feet north of 117th Street, a five-story brick twelve-room triple flat, with store, on a lot 25 by 100 feet.

Old Chelsea Tenement Sold.

W. E. Good has purchased through William H. Archibald 360 West Twenty-fifth Street, a five-story tenement on lot 25 by 98.9. The property has been owned by the Boyd estate for over fifty years.

Resale on West 89th Street.

An investor has purchased from the John J. Tully Construction Company 366 West Eighty-ninth Street, a four-story dwelling, on a lot 20 by 100.8 feet, 120 feet west of West End Avenue. The seller secured this property, together with 218 and 220 East Eightieth Street, about three weeks ago, from John E. Ahrens, in an exchange for a group of flats in the Bedford section of the Bronx.

Buys Greenwich Village Dwelling.

The three-story dwelling at 10 Van Nest Place, (Charles Street,) on plot 20 by 95, has been purchased by H. A. Vieu for occupancy. Mr. Vieu has lived for twenty years in West Tenth Street, which the city acquired for the extension of Seventh Avenue. The Charles Street house was sold by J. Irving Walsh for Addis S. Brown.

Takes Title to Old East Side Church

The Ice Manufacturing Company took title yesterday to the old St. Matthew's Lutheran Church on the northeast corner of Broome and Elizabeth Streets, a plot 104 by 80.3 and irregular. The consideration was $180,000. The church was erected in 1841, the organization being the oldest Lutheran church in this city.

Builder Buys Bronx Corner.

W. E. & W. I. Brown, Incorporated, have sold for a client the lot on the southwest corner of 175th Street and Prospect Avenue, 25 by 100, to a builder, who will improve the plot with an apartment house.

B. R. T. Buys Big Coney Island Tract.

The largest purchase of Coney Island real estate which has been made in some time has just been closed, it was announced yesterday, in the sale of about ninety acres from the Harway Improvement Company to the Transit Development Company, a holding concern for the realty of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Railroad. About $250,000, it is said, was paid for the property. It is in the Gravesend Bay section.

What disposition will be made of this large tract has not been divulged, but it is believed that some extensive improvements will be made there in the near future. The property is bounded by Old Shell Road, Coney Island Creek, Avenue X, and West Thirteenth Street.

The four-track system planned for the Sea Beach Line in the subway arrangements will require a commodious terminal close to the West End Line depot, and it is said that the property just purchased will solve the problem.

Brooklyn.

W. H. Goldey sold to an investor for Victoria A. Vant Wond the bungalow 1,103 Elmore Place, near Avenue J, 50 by 100, and for the Henry Meyer Building Company the dwelling 340 East Twenty-sixth Street, 20 by 100.

Studwell & Burkhard have sold 108 Monroe street, a two-story and basement brick dwelling for S. Lusk to Frank Woods for occupancy.

B. J. Sforza has sold for the Convent of the Sisters of Mercy the block front on the easterly side of Thirteenth Avenue, between Sixty-second and Sixty-third Streets. The plot has a frontage of 200 feet on Thirteenth Avenue, 85 feet on Sixty-second Street and 75 feet on Sixty-third Street.

Long Island.

T. B. Ackerson & Co. have sold at Brightwaters a water front plot 75 by 170 to William Woodward of Summit, N. J.; a water front plot 200 by 220 to Ambrose L. O'Shea of Manhattan, and a water front plot 75 by 225 to William Speidane of Manhattan.

L'Ecluse, Washburn & Co. have sold to James Whalen of the United Cigar Stores Company a house located on the corner of Fayview Avenue and Willow Drive at Manhasset Park, Manhasset, L. I. Mr. Whalen will occupy the house at once.

R. L. Kilby has sold to the Estate Owners Corporation about Fifty acres on the water front at West Patchogue, L. I. The property is within 500 feet of the Merrick Road, and has been fully developed. The consideration was about $50,000.

Paper Manufacturers Move Uptown.

One of the largest leases recently made for the Forty-second Street and Madison Avenue Company was closed yesterday by Douglas L. Elliman, who leased the entire Forty-second Street front of the fifth floor in the new building on the northwest corner of Forty-second Street and Madison Avenue to the Manufacturers Paper Company for a long term of years.

This company has been located at 41 Park Row for about thirty years. The lease calls for approximately 46,000 square feet and runs from May 1, 1914.

Important 57th Street Lease.

Dunstan, Incorporated, one of the oldest dressmaking concerns in the city, have disposed of their lease at 24 West Fifty-seventh Street and taken a long-term lease on 31 West Fifty-seventh Street, opposite their present location. T. J. Duggan, Vice President of the company, states that after extensive alterations the company will move into their new house about Jan. 15, 1914. George R. Read & Co., in conjunction with Anthony La Fort, negotiated the transaction.

Commercial Leases.

The Cross & Brown Company has leased the store at 235 West Fifty-eighth Street to S. J. Wise & Co.

L. Tanenbaum, Strauss & Co. have leased to P. Pohalski & Co., manufacturers of cigars, the entire building at 466 and 468 Broome Street, northeast corner of Greene Street, 50 by 100. The lease is for ten years.

Charles E. Rickerson has leased 30 Montgomery Place, furnished, between Eighth Avenue and Prospect Park West, a three-story and English basement dwelling, for Mrs. Grace W. Duryea to J. L. Crosthwaite.

$150,000 Broadway Improvement.

Plans have been prepared by Gaetano Ajello for a business and theatre building to occupy the block front on the east side of Broadway, between 134th and 135th Streets.

The plot, which is to be improved by the A. C. and H. M. Hall Realty Company, has a frontage of 200 feet on Broadway and 90 feet on each street. There will be a theatre, with a seating capacity of 1,500, and most of the second floor will be converted into a dance hall. Along the Broadway front there will be stores. The cost is estimated at $150,000.

$200,000 School in Dyckman Tract.

An indication of the increasing population in the Dyckman section is seen in the filing of plans yesterday for a new school house which will be erected on the northwest corner of Academy Street and Vermilyea Avenue. It will have a frontage of 160 feet on the street and 103.6 feet on the avenue. The façade will be of brick, limestone and terra cotta. On the roof will be a playground. C. B. J. Snyder, the architect, has placed the cost at $200,000. The new building will be Public School 52, and will take the place of the frame building now in use.

Realty Board's Monthly Luncheon.

The first of a series of monthly luncheons was held yesterday under the auspices of the Real Estate Board of New York at 115 Broadway. Judging by the attendance the affair was a success, as it brought together between two and three hundred brokers, operators and real estate owners.

After the last course had been served, Lawrence M. D. McGuire, the recently elected President of the board, gave a brief outline of the work of the organization, and introduced Walter Lindner, solicitor of the Title Guarantee and Trust Company, who delivered an address on "the practical application of the income tax to the real estate business."

A REAL ESTATE M

HIS COTTON TRADES 'BUCKETED,' HE SAYS

Louis Cohen Sues Morris H. Rothschild & Co. for $7,735 He Paid to Them.

TRACED OUT VARIOUS DEALS

Got Denials, He Says, from Firms Represented as Having Filled Orders for His Account.

Louis Cohen began suit yesterday in the Supreme Court against Morris H. Rothschild & Co., a cotton brokerage house, with offices at 82 Beaver Street. Cohen is seeking to recover $7,735 on two causes of action. He said he was a client of Rothschild and his partner, Bernard Hyman, from Oct. 20, 1911, to Aug. 28, 1913, during which time he turned over to them the sum sued for.

Cohen's second cause of action is based on the charge that his alleged dealings in cotton through the Rothschild firm "were known and intended by both plaintiff and defendants to be such wagers and bets, made to depend upon chance, casualty and unknown and contingent events, to wit, the range of quotations on the New York Stock Exchange," as to bring them under the head of gambling contracts.

In his first cause of action, however, Cohen makes the charge that not only were the transactions intended to be fictitious trades, but that the Rothschild firm "bucketed" his account in its own office. Photographs in support of these allegations were exhibited by Cohen's direction yesterday in Room 814, Lord's Court, 27 William Street.

The photographs showed a transcript of account offered by the Rothschild firm in response to a request of Cohen for a list of the brokers with whom his brokers had dealt on his account. He noticed the name of Arthur Lipper & Co. fifty-eight times on this list.

Among the documents shown in photographic copies yesterday was a letter from the Lipper firm disclaiming 55 of these 58 trades, and a photographic copy of its report on each one of the trades individually, in which 55 were checked off as not appearing on any record of the Lipper firm.

At the offices of the Rothschild firm a typewritten statement was handed out, which said that the case was the usual one in which a disappointed dealer pleaded the gambling statutes to defeat his brokers. The statement added that all transactions with Cohen were correct and that an effort would be made to collect a further indebtedness on his account. Mr. Fraenkel of the Rothschild firm estimated this claim as $11,000.

The law firm of Colby & Brown of 32 Nassau Street, represents Cohen. Bainbridge Colby, senior member of the firm, represented Edward Moyse & Co., cotton brokers, who sued out injunction proceedings against Rothschild's complaint to the Cotton Exchange in 1910 concerning them. Moyse & Co. had aroused Rothschild's ire by asserting that a statement issued by them and clearing Rothschild of bad faith toward fellow members of the famous Patten-Thompson-Scales cotton pool, had been written "practically at his dictation." Rothschild then sought to have the Moyse firm expelled from the Exchange. Through Colby the Moyse firm sued out an injunction to resist this plan.

In explanation of why photographic copies of the various documents had been made, it was said yesterday that Cohen planned to lay them before the Board of Governors of the Cotton Exchange. In response to inquiries as to why Cohen had not made his complaint to the Board of Governors before beginning suit, it was said that the exchange has the right to adjust controversies between members and their clients, might have assumed such jurisdiction as to have interfered with the civil action.

OPEN-SHOP FOREMAN SHOT.

Gunmen from New York Wound Man in Harrison, N. J., and Escape.

Just at the noon hour yesterday, while the men and girls employed in the necktie factory of Aaron Sossis in Harrison, N. J., were preparing to go to luncheon a taxicab carrying three men stopped in front of the Harrison Avenue door of the building. The three men entered the factory and, going to the main working room, inquired for Morris Aegan, the foreman.

Somebody pointed Aegan out, and a minute later one of the men advanced to within a few feet of the foreman and opened fire on him with an automatic pistol. Three shots were fired and Aegan fell to the floor with a bullet in his right thigh and another in the right side.

So quickly did the gunmen act that Aegan was shot before Mr. Sossis or any of his employes could interfere. At the first shot two of the gunmen ran back into the street and jumped into the taxicab. They waited only a moment for the man who did the shooting, and before he appeared the taxicab sped away in the direction of Newark.

The man who did the shooting fled from the factory followed by a score or more men and boys and several girls. He was fleet of foot, however, and soon distanced his pursuers. Reaching the Lackawanna station just as a train for Hoboken was getting under way, he jumped on board the moving train, and by the time his pursuers reached the station the train was 200 yards away. None of the train crew saw the frantic signals of the crowd on the platform to stop the train.

The gunman who escaped on the train lost his hat on the flight and a Harrison policeman telephoned the Hoboken police to meet the train and arrest a man who would be conspicuous because of the absence of headgear. When the train arrived at Hoboken no hatless person left it. Later the baggage master found that his hat had been stolen.

The Sossis factory had been threatened because Aegan was a non-union shop. Mr. Sossis informed the Newark police that the men who attacked his foreman were hired gunmen from New York, and that he was certain he knew at least one of them. This man's name, he said, was Fuchs. He believes he can identify the other two if he ever sees them again.

Aegan had incurred the enmity of the union, Mr. Sossis said, because of his insistence on following the open-shop plan of employing factory workers. According to the people who were in the room when the gunmen entered Fuchs was the one who shot Aegan.

Aegan was hurried to St. Michael's Hospital in Newark. His condition is serious. He had been foreman of the Sossis factory only three weeks. He was to have been married to-morrow night, but unless it takes place in the hospital the wedding will have to be postponed.

CONSERVATION ROW OVER STATE RIGHTS

Latter Advocates Quit Convention on Passage of Report for Federal Control.

VOTE A PINCHOT VICTORY

Lines to Draw Closer To-day Another Report Favoring State Franchises for Water Power.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19.—The fight that developed yesterday in the National Conservation Congress between Gifford Pinchot, ex-Chief Forester, and anti-Pinchot factions in the Committee on Water Powers, is still undecided, though if the parliamentary tangle can be straightened out the issue may be joined to-morrow. To-day, however, the fight centred around the unanimous report of the Water Powers Committee in regard to principles. That report was bitterly opposed by the State rights men, but finally prevailed oy a vote of 434 to 154. The issue was clearly defined as one for Federal or State control of water power in the future.

The fight for the report, which was construed as a declaration for Federal control, was led by men who had been high in office in the two preceding National Administrations. Walter L. Fisher, Secretary of the Interior under President Taft, was the presiding officer and favored the report. He was supported by Gifford Pinchot, Chief Forrester under President Roosevelt and for a time under President Taft; James R. Garfield, Secretary of the Interior under President Roosevelt, and Henry L. Stimson of New York, Secretary of War under President Taft.

Senator Bankhead of Alabama was a prominent champion of the rights of the States.

The session was thrown into pandemonium late this afternoon, when the Arkansas and Washington State delegation left the convention in a body and will refuse to take any further part in the deliberations. They charged that the congress was packed with employes of the Government Forestry Bureau and ex-Government employes, who rallied around former Chief Forester Gifford Pinchot in an attempt to carry out certain so-called Roosevelt policies.

As a result of to-day's developments the irrigation and water power people have called a meeting for to-morrow morning to form a permanent organization, which will be entirely divorced from the National Conservation Congress. Walker Powell of Little Rock, Ark., Vice President of the Congress, withdrew with them.

"We have discovered," said Mr. Powell, "that the brand of conservationists attempting to run the National Conservation Congress are in the game from selfish reasons, and we have decided to withdraw from the organization."

W. G. Wooten of Washington impassionately declared:

"The Washington delegation came 4,000 miles to receive a fair hearing. I realize we can't get it. This will be the last time we will intrude on a National Conservation Congress."

The majority of the committee, led by Prof. George F. Swain, submitted a report proposing that the States have a voice in the granting of water power franchises.

Gifford Pinchot, Mr. Stimson, and Joseph N. Teal of Oregon offered minority views urging strict Federal control of all water rights, with compensation to the Government under certain conditions for franchise privileges.

The unanimous report adopted referred only to certain general principles upon which all could agree. The result was so overwhelmingly one-sided that the Pinchot following tonight boasted that the report of the minority of the Water Power Committee eventually would be adopted.

Delegates who supported the motion to refer the question to the Resolutions Committee came chiefly from Alabama, Arkansas, Colorado, Kansas, Louisiana, Montana Nevada, New Mexico, South Carolina, Tennessee, and Washington.

C. L. Watts, one of the Alabama delegates, startled the convention by charging that the Vice President of the Alabama Water Power Company was a member of the delegation to the Congress from that State, and that there was "a dark laid plot to defeat the will of the majority in this Congress."

To-morrow will be devoted to forestry subjects until the Resolutions Committee is ready to report. Secretary of State Bryan will address the convention, but President Wilson, who had been urged to welcome the delegates, sent word to the Executive Committee to-night that he was so engrossed in the Mexican situation that he could not appear.

LEIGHTON

Overcoats at $25

That's a fair price, if you get your money's worth.

And you surely will Here.

You cannot buy a better Cut or Fit at $50.

Nor, for that matter, will the higher price garment wear longer.

The difference in price is solely in the cost of material and linings—an added luxury, if you please, but with no sacrifice of the essential qualities.

We have a large selection of fabrics at this price, and the colorings and weaves are so close to the more expensive patterns that it would take an expert to tell the difference.

More than Clothes

THIS business has to do with more things than clothes, because we know that to make and keep customers, we must sell them not clothes alone but ourselves.

Of course, we believe, and with good reason, that our Hart, Schaffner & Marx clothes offer you more, dollar for dollar, than any others in New York.

Never in all our experience have we seen garments so well tailored and of such splendid materials offered at like prices.

But, as we said, our clothes are not the whole story.

Now, then, in selling you ourselves this is what we offer:

A service that is courteous always, for courtesy is the first rule in our business.

We offer, too, the assurance of satisfaction, for if you are not thoroughly satisfied with anything you buy here, we will make it good, and no "ifs," "ands," or "buts" will enter into the transaction.

In other words, what we want to impress on your minds is that you may feel confident of us, and through your confidence in us confidence in our merchandise.

YES, AND THERE ARE GIRLS--GIRLS--GIRLS--AND THEN SOME!

ON WITH THE LAUGH—

Let joy be unconfined! Limitless is the pleasure afforded by "The Little Cafe." It radiates that unalloyed laughter which is the sunlight of the soul. Its innumerable quips and jests are the natural evolution of a superbly developed epitome of rollicking humor and ebullient gaiety. Fun, song, and beauty follow each other so swiftly that one loses himself in a veritable joy-fest. If you have a "grouch" and you wish life once more to take on its roseate hues, spend an evening at this "Little Cafe"—

"WHERE GOOD DIGESTION WAITS ON APPETITE, AND JOYOUS LAUGHTER UPON BOTH."

GLYNN ASKS AID TO CLEAN STATE

Invites Chamber of Commerce to Help Him by Investigating Its Departments.

PROMISES BUSINESS RULE

Tax and Banking Law Reforms on His Programme—Budget to End "Pork Barrel."

WE'LL HELP, SAYS CHOATE

Jokes About Wilson's Mexican Policy, but Praises President at Commerce Dinner.

Gov. Martin H. Glynn called upon the members of the Chamber of Commerce at the 145th annual dinner last night in the Waldorf-Astoria to enlist with him under the banner of efficiency and economy to give the State a business administration. With upraised hand and in a ringing voice that reached every corner of the grand ballroom, he pledged himself to the welfare of the people. Then he asked for volunteers, saying that it was his intention, if the business men would stand by him, to appoint a commission of from fifteen to twenty-five from their membership to make a thorough investigation of all State departments with the end in view of bringing about a thorough reorganization which would place them on a business basis.

Joseph H. Choate, who followed the Governor, told Mr. Glynn to take his pick and that every man selected would serve.

"I'll take you all," the Governor replied.

Gov. Glynn said he believed that many hundreds of thousands of dollars could be saved in this way.

"I have no ambition at present, except to serve the people of New York," he said. "Help me to put the roads and the canals on a good basis; help me to do away with sinecures, and, though I go out of office on Jan. 1, 1915, I will go out content that I have done something for my fellow-men."

Mr. Choate, in a forty-minute address, talked about the Mexican situation, the tariff, and other national problems. He did not know, he said, just what the Mexican policy was, and doubted if even Mr Wilson had any very definite idea of it. But he added that the President undoubtedly had information which others knew nothing of, and that, come what may, it was the duty of every American citizen to stand by the President through thick and thin. He scouted the war rumors Finds Some Reason to Rejoice.

The dinner was the largest that the organization has held for years, and there were present representatives of most of the great business interests of the city and State. Gov. Glynn's frank and determined address, which seemed to be generally taken as another slap at Tammany politics and Murphyism, evoked a great outburst of applause.

John Claflin, President of the chamber, presided, and the others at the speakers' table were James Talcott, Capt. Albert Gleaves, U. S. N., Augustus D. Juilliard, A. Barton Hepburn, Bishop David H. Greer, Senator Root, Mr. Choate, Gov Glynn, Alton B. Parker, Jacob H. Schiff, Dr. John H. Finley, Major Gen. Thomas H. Barry, U. S. A., and Charles R. Miller. The ballroom was decorated with American flags and banners bearing the seals of all of the States.

In his preliminary remarks Mr. Claflin said in part:

"We come together this evening in a spirit of chastened thanksgiving. We have heard of crop failures throughout the country; we have been threatened with severe business depression; we have noted the dangers of international finance, and we have feared that war clouds—European, Oriental, and American—might indirectly or directly result in storm to us. But we come now to this Nov. 20 with 90 per cent. of our average national crops assured, with business proceedings about as usual, with the conditions of international and national finance gradually improving, and with the prospect of general peace, except in Mexico, becoming more favorable throughout the world. And so we rejoice on our own account with a somewhat qualified joy."

Likens Himself to Van Twiller.

Gov. Glynn was then introduced, and opened his address by asserting that he was greatly honored in being invited. It was the first dinner he had attended since becoming Governor, he said. He had declined all other invitations, but felt it to be as much his duty to be present and talk to the members of the Chamber of Commerce as it was his duty to be in the executive chamber to-morrow.

"And," he said, "as Governor of this State, I pledge to-night every atom of energy I have and every scintilla of gray matter in my head to aid honestly the business interests of this great Empire State."

Gov. Glynn then compared himself with Wouter Van Twiller, who was described by Washington Irving in the Knickerbocker History of New York.

"I intend to be an old-fashioned Governor—like Van Twiller—in some respects," said Mr. Glynn. "Like Van Twiller, I am for reflection before action, for consultations before decision, for deliberation before agitation, even if such an old-fashioned policy deprives me of political advertisement or newspaper headlines.

"Unlike Van Twiller, however, I am going to make up my mind once in a while about some things; but just because I happen to be Governor I will not presume to assert that people who make up their minds differently should be out-

"I NEED MILEAGE," HE CRIES

Thomas of Kentucky Asks Adjournment of Congress for Creditors

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.—Representative Thomas of Kentucky caused a sensation to-day in the House when he asked that the session be brought to an end so that he could get his mileage allowance and pay his creditors. While the undercurrent of gossip has been that the main motive behind the abandoned plan for adjournment was a desire to obtain additional mileage, Mr. Thomas was the first probably in the history of the country to admit that he needed the mileage money in his business.

He stirred the House still more deeply by shouting out that while he could live on his salary, he was a Republican from Kentucky, and it took money to make people vote right in that State. Mr. Thomas spoke on a resolution he introduced directing the Speaker and the Vice President to end the session at 1 o'clock on Saturday.

Mr. Johnson of Kentucky, acting minority leader, tried to shut off further debate by a motion to adjourn, and after a little more talk the House adjourned amid shouts of laughter.

COOLER WEATHER COMING

But There Have Been Few November Days So Warm as Yesterday.

Forecaster Scarr at the United States Weather Bureau said that the temperature yesterday in New York was at one time 70 degrees which was the highest recorded on Nov. 20 since the bureau was established in 1872.

"There have been warmer days in the month of November," he said, "and the temperature has gone as high as 74 on two or three occasions, but not on Nov. 20. The nearest to that mark was 72 degrees on Nov. 21, 1900. When asked if the warm weather was likely to continue Mr. Scarr said that it would be colder to-day with rain to-morrow.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.—Spring-like weather has overspread practically the entire country east of the Rocky Mountains. After scanning the reports of their field agents to-night, the Weather Bureau authorities said that the Carolinas and Georgia were the only States in the East where normal late Fall temperatures prevailed.

The official explanation of the unseasonable warmth is the fact that a "low pressure" atmosphere wave has fallen over the northern hemisphere. It is said that the wave is passing and that cooler weather should appear not later than to-morrow night.

WIRELESS WARNS OF BERGS.

Four Sighted in Lanes of West-Bound Atlantic Liners.

Icebergs have appeared in the lanes of westbound Atlantic liners four weeks earlier than usual. The Captain of the Hamburg-American steamship Pennsylvania reported to the United States Hydrographic Office, in Broad Street, yesterday by wireless that he had sighted three such bergs. The message was transmitted through the Cunard liner Laconia, bound for Boston. These bergs were in latitude 45:04 north and longitude 47:27 west, and were described as being 100 feet long and 30 feet high.

Another iceberg, 150 feet long and 50 feet high, was sighted by the Captain of the steamship Bristol City, westbound from Bristol to New York, in latitude 45:45 and longitude 48:00.

There has been a quantity of ice seen this Summer in the Gulf of St. Lawrence and three vessels have been in collision with icebergs, but this is the first ice reported in the Atlantic lanes on the New York route from Europe since early Summer.

Capt. Allan Luckhurst, Marine Superintendent of the Red Star, Atlantic Transport, and American Lines, said last night that the Atlantic steamships were now running on the new short route, and would be crossing in latitude 42:30 and longitude 47 until Jan. 15. "They are liable to sight ice at any time in that latitude, crossing the Newfoundland Banks, but in not in any great quantity at this season of the year," he added.

ROOSEVELT ONLY 1916 HOPE

Stubbs Says He Alone Can Beat Wilson, and Kansas Mooseers Cheer.

TOPEKA, Kan., Nov. 20.—Progressives from forty counties in conference here to-day cheered lustily when ex-Gov. W. R. Stubbs said that Roosevelt was the only man who could defeat President Wilson for re-election. The conference adopted resolutions calling for complete State, district, county, and township offices in Kansas in 1914, and decided that the Progressives could better afford to lose in the next election than amalgamate with the Republican Party. The resolution says:

Nothing has occurred since the Progressive Convention in Chicago to warrant any change of the viewpoint on the part of the Progressives. At that time we formed a party dedicated to certain progressive principles and ideals of government.

We warn Progressives not to be diverted from their principles by the talk of amalgamation on the part of those who are interested in the jobs.

The Republican Party will not become progressive merely by holding a national convention and passing a few new rules of party management, a pretense with which to catch Progressive votes. The Republican Party can become progressive only by the genuine acceptance of the Progressive principles as set forth in our national platform, and the safeguarding of these principles by such reforms in party organization as always will protect the right of the voters against the machinations of party bosses.

DAYTON WANTS ROOSEVELT.

Colonel Desired for City Manager Since Goethals Cannot Come.

Special to The New York Times.

DAYTON, Ohio, Nov. 20.—Now Theodore Roosevelt is proposed for City Manager of Dayton, under the new commission form of government. Lucien E. Wilson, organizer of the Greater Dayton Association, and since last Spring's disastrous flood publicity man for the city, said to-day that if the effort to get Col. George W. Goethals, the Panama Canal builder, to take the place should fail, as now seems certain, the City Commissioners would offer the managership to Mr. Roosevelt.

The salary talked of is $25,000 annually.

SYNDICATES NETTED $7,403,000 IN FRISCO

Total Amount of Profits as Brought Out by Investigation of Road's Failure.

HEARING OF EVIDENCE ENDS

C. W. Hillard Explains His Connection with the New Orleans, Texas & Mexico Promotion.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Nov. 20.—The taking of oral testimony in the investigation of the receivership of the St. Louis & San Francisco Railroad by the Interstate Commerce Commission closed here to-day with the filing by the St. Louis Union Trust Company of the names of the ninety-nine members of the syndicate that made a profit of $3,000,000 in the promotion of the St. Louis, Brownsville & Mexico Railroad and its sale to the Frisco this being about 75 per cent. on their investment.

By the disclosure of a syndicate profit of $375,000 by the sale of the New Orleans, Texas & Mexico Railroad to the Frisco the amount of syndicate profits through the promotion of subsidiary lines and their sale to the parent road was brought to-day to $7,403,000.

Several estates appear in the list filed by A. T. Perkins, representing the St. Louis Union Trust Company. Mr. Perkins explained this by saying that the estates were those of men who subscribed to the syndicate, but died before the deal was closed.

S. M. Felton of Chicago	10,000
A. T. Perkins. (Mr. Perkins was a member of the stockholders' committee that recently waged a successful fight for proxies, thereby placing the control of the new Directorate in the hands of St. Louis men)	22,000
Thomas H. West, one of the receivers	131,000
M. C. Wetmore	25,000
Whitaker & Co.	91,000

In many cases cited the actual investment was several hundred or thousand higher than indicated. The total investment in the syndicate was $3,980,380.20. The profit netted was about 75 per cent. Most of those whose names are given are active in the business life of St. Louis

New Orleans, Texas & Mexico Deal.

C. W. Hillard of New York, Vice President of the Frisco, was called to the witness stand again to-day and told how a syndicate promoted by B. F. Yoakum, then Chairman of the Board of Directors, built the New Orleans, Texas & Mexico, and sold it to the Frisco at a profit to the syndicate of $375,000.

Mr. Hillard said Mr. Yoakum arranged with Blair & Co. of New York and T. Jefferson Coolidge of the Old Colony Trust Company of Boston to get $3,000,000 for the Gulf Construction Company, which built the road. This money was used to build the road. Hillard was made President of the construction company with no duties to perform, and was told by Yoakum that he ought to have some stock in the concern. Yoakum offered to carry Hillard for $50,000, and Hillard consented.

Yoakum invested $250,000 in the construction company. Hillard, though President, knew nothing of its affairs, except that the Frisco paid $2,200,000 for the completed road. The profits of the construction company, said Hillard, were $375,000. Hillard said he and Yoakum were the only Frisco officials who profited by the syndicate transaction.

The testimony of Hillard was voluntary. Yesterday he professed ignorance of many features of the New Orleans, Texas & Mexico deal, but to-day he asked permission to make a statement of facts. He said he did not wish his friends to think that his memory was so bad he could not tell about a deal with which he was connected.

O. Nance of Texas, Treasurer of the St. Louis, Brownsville & Mexico, denied that he had been "tipped off" by F. H. Hamilton, Treasurer of the Frisco, seventy-two hours in advance of the receivership proceedings against the Brownsville line. He admitted, however, that he had sent Hamilton a telegram saying he could get a loan if he were assured of advance information regarding receivership proceedings.

Mr. Nance said he borrowed $25,000 from Mrs. H. M. King, but paid it back on July 1, when a plan for a hotel at Kingsville, Texas, failed to be carried out. Three days later the receivership suit was brought.

BROKER ENTERS MONASTERY

As a Lay Brother at St. Andrew's, Carney Must Do Manual Labor.

Special to The New York Times.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., Nov. 20.—Richard M. Carney, formerly in the brokerage business with his brother, James S. Carney, at 417 Produce Exchange, New York City, has entered the Jesuit Order at St. Andrew's as a lay brother.

At the monastery, three miles north of here, permission to speak with Brother Carney was denied, but Father Sebastian said he entered the institution in September. Having entered as a lay brother, Carney, who is a man of intelligence and refinement, will be called upon to do manual labor about the institution. He is reported to have said that he intended to enter the priesthood after completing the prescribed course of study. He is 50 years of age, and had been in New York thirty-four years.

WHITMAN HEARS OF STATE ROAD DEALS

Will Question McGuire About Mysterious Conference Over Road Specifications.

District Attorney Charles S. Whitman is taking a good deal of interest in a mysterious conference which, according to the reports which have reached him, was held in Cooperstown on July 5 last. When George H. McGuire takes the stand this afternoon at the resumption of the John Doe inquiry into the Hennessy charges of graft in State contracts it is expected that Mr. Whitman at once will question him about this conference. When Mr. McGuire was on the stand on Wednesday he acknowledged that he was in Cooperstown "during the Summer," but he denied that he met William Sulzer or John N. Carlisle there.

According to the information in possession of Mr. Whitman the conference, which, it is said, was held at the Berkeley-Walontha Hotel, reached important decisions regarding the use on State roads of materials furnished by the Barber Asphalt Paving Company of Philadelphia. According to the District Attorney's informants, William Sulzer, State Highway Commissioner Carlisle, James K. McGuire, and George H. McGuire attended this conference.

On the day after this conference, according to Mr. Whitman's information, word from the Highway Department reached thirty contractors on State roads that they must not use "liquid" asphalt in their work. This order, it was said, shut out asphalt which had been sold to these thirty contractors by the Warner-Quinlan Asphalt Company of New York, a competitor of the Barber Asphalt Company.

C. B. Warner of the Warner-Quinlan Company, when seen yesterday at his office, 70 Wall Street, said that because of this alleged order his company lost orders for $65,000 in material. He said that he had heard of the Cooperstown conference, but of his own knowledge knew nothing about it.

"Our company had sold $65,000 worth of material to these thirty contractors," said Mr. Warner. "Some of the material had already been delivered. The contractors were told that our asphalt was not to be used because it did not conform to specifications. This word, however, went only to the contractors and not to us. Mr. Carlisle was head of the Highway Department then. This word went out after John A. Bensel, State Engineer, had tested and approved our materials."

Mr. Warner said that his company sought an injunction forbidding the use of other asphalt on the thirty road jobs. The company lost in the lower courts of Buffalo. The Appellate Division, he said, sustained the Warner-Quinlan contention. This court fight resulted in retarding the work on the thirty contracts, most of which are for work in St. Lawrence County.

Warner Hints at "Joker."

Discussing the specifications sent out by the Highway Department to road contractors, Mr. Warner said:

"The specifications called for a 'natural solid asphalt.' The joker lies in the word 'solid.' There is only one solid asphalt and that comes from Trinidad, and is controlled by the Barber Company. Our asphalt comes from Mexico and is a liquid asphalt. The word 'solid' was inserted in the road specifications before Sulzer became Governor, but there was no insistence on this specification until after July 5, 1913. We were shut out by the enforcement of the specification."

Mr. Warner has the names of the thirty contractors who it is said received word from the Highway Department on July 6 that they must live up to the specifications and use only "solid" asphalt. He refused to make public the names of these contractors, but it was inferred that District Attorney Whitman had the names.

Contractors Called to Inquiry.

It is expected that seven contractors will be in attendance in the John Doe proceedings to-day. These contractors were subpoenaed by Mr. Whitman's process servers last week. It was learned that the seven include W. T. Burns and W. L. Dwyer of Syracuse.

Henry P. Burgard, new Democratic boss of Erie County, was to be a witness to-day, but he called Mr. Whitman on the long-distance telephone yesterday and said that he could not be here until Monday. Certain books regarding highway contracts which Mr. Whitman had asked for, Burgard explained, would have to be sought in Fulton.

James S. Johnson, sales agent for the Barber Asphalt Paving Company, it was also expected, would attend to-day's proceedings. He is out of the State, but Mr. Whitman has been in touch with him, and has been assured that he will be on hand on Monday. It was Johnson, according to testimony Hillard said on Wednesday, who provided a part of the $2,500 which was handed to Hennessy as a gift for Sulzer. McGuire testified on Wednesday that "perhaps" he had talked with Sulzer about asphalt specifications. Mr. Whitman wants to find out whether the Barber Asphalt Paving Company authorized this payment by Johnson, and officers of that company may be called into the case after Johnson tells his story.

Probably the most interesting bit of evidence which will be submitted to-day is a transcript of the three accounts of the McGuire brothers in the National Bank of Syracuse. It is expected that Mr. Whitman will try to make McGuire account for many of the deposits and withdrawals.

Glynn Fears No Clash.

Gov. Glynn, who came to the city yesterday to attend the Chamber of Commerce dinner, was seen at the Waldorf-Astoria yesterday afternoon and asked about the reported friction between James W. Osborne, his special Commissioner to investigate graft charges throughout the State, and District Attorney Whitman. Gov. Glynn said that he had heard of no friction, and added that he didn't believe there would be any.

There couldn't be any clash between the two investigators, he said, since their jurisdiction was definitely defined. Mr. Whitman, he indicated clearly, would prosecute only in New York County, while Mr. Osborne would have the range of the State outside of New York County. He had instructed Mr. Osborne, the Governor said, to aid District Attorney Whitman in his John Doe inquiry as much as possible.

Mr. Whitman, when he was asked about the reports of friction between himself and State officials, said that he had every reason to believe that he and Mr. Osborne would get along well together and that there would be no trouble.

Despite these denials, rumors persisted that there would be a clash before Mr. Osborne and Mr. Whitman had proceeded far. It was pointed out that in his investigation Mr. Osborne might call a witness from New York County, and that this witness would then be able to claim immunity from prosecution by Mr. Whitman. The work could not be divided, it was said.

NEW CHARGE MADE AGAINST PINDELL

Nominee for Russian Embassy Said to Have Wanted Postmasters as His Agents.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.—Another charge threatening the chances of Henry M. Pindell of Peoria, Ill., to be Ambassador to Russia, was informally lodged against him to-day. By sending the nomination of Mr. Pindell to the Senate the President already had set the mark of his disbelief on the story that Senator Lewis had bargained with Secretary Bryan to appoint Mr. Pindell for a short period on condition that he resign at a certain time.

No sooner had the nomination reached the Senate than it was learned that Senator Burton of Ohio would insist on a close investigation of facts incident to Mr. Pindell's appointment before he would assent to a favorable report on the nomination from the Committee on Foreign Relations, and had asked Chairman Bacon to take no action in his absence. Mr. Burton had heard that Mr. Pindell had written to Representative Stone of the Peoria district, suggesting that Mr. Stone, before recommending appointees to local Postmasterships, submit the names for Mr. Pindell's approval. The report that Mr. Burton heard was that Mr. Pindell wanted to make sure in advance that the new Postmasters would act as agents for his newspapers.

It was said this afternoon that both Mr. Stone and Mr. Pindell might be invited before the committee.

When the Committee on Foreign Relations met this morning Senator Lane of Oregon asked that no action be taken on the nomination of Alexander Sweek, a lawyer of that State, to be Minister to Siam, until charges against him could be investigated. Mr. Lane had not been consulted in the selection of Mr. Sweek, who was proposed by Senator Chamberlain, and who is known personally to Secretary Bryan. Since the appointment charges have been made to Mr. Bryan affecting Mr. Sweek's personality, and Mr. Bryan referred the charges to Mr. Lane.

Among the nominations sent to the Senate to-day by President Wilson were these:

William T. Handley of New York, Consul at Naples, transferred to be Consul General at Callao, Peru.

Michael J. Hendrick of New York, Consul at Moncton, transferred to be Consul General at Christiana, Norway.

Harold D. Clum of New York, Consul at Celba, transferred to be Consul at Corinto, Nicaragua.

William F. Doty of New Jersey, Consul at Riga, transferred to be Consul at Nassau, Bahamas.

Frederick Van Dyne of New York, transferred from State Department to be Consul at Lyons, France.

WIN FIGHT FOR CHEAP COAL.

Flushing Women Get Their Supply at $6 a Ton.

Mrs. Bryson Burroughs, the woman sculptor; Mrs. R. M. Littlejohn, Mrs. Cornelia Hamilton, and other women who are prominent in Flushing became coal dealers yesterday to demonstrate that the middlemen make unreasonable profits. Their efforts have met with success, and when Mrs. Littlejohn, the Secretary of the movement, compiled the cost of the coal put in the fires of those co-operating in the purchase of fuel, she found that they had obtained it for $6 a ton. The retailers in Flushing charge $7.25 a ton.

"I am gratified that we have demonstrated that the retail dealers were charging exorbitant prices," said Mrs. Hamilton yesterday. "We were hampered on every side by the coal dealers, especially by one whose place of business is near the yard where we obtained our supply. That man wanted to charge us 15 cents a ton to weigh the coal on his scales. Of course he had a right to do that, but when we saw how he felt about it we made arrangements with the local manager of an ice company and got a rate of 10 cents a load, or less than 5 cents a ton.

"Why, those who did not want us to succeed complained to the officials of the Department of Weights and Measures against us, but they did not get any satisfaction. They found that the scales we were weighing our coal on gave to the consumer fifty pounds more to the ton than the scales of the coal dealer."

Five hundred tons were contained in the barge which was unloaded for the co-operative buyers yesterday. The coal was brought direct from Pennsylvania.

TYSON & CO. TICKETS GO TO PATRONS NOW

Directors of Metropolitan Trust Co. Will Be Told To-day Opera Coupons Can't Be Held.

AGENTS HAD NO TITLE

Bankers Advanced Money on Security Which Borrower Didn't Own, Opera Director Says.

At 10 o'clock this morning the Executive Committee of the Board of Directors of the Metropolitan Trust Company will meet to consider the advisability of returning forthwith to Tyson & Co. or to persons holding receipts for them, the opera tickets hypothecated with the trust company as security for a loan of $100,000. J. M. R. Lyeth of the firm of Carter, Ledyard & Milburn, counsel for the Metropolitan Trust Company, will attend the meeting and will present to the Directors reasons why the tickets should be turned over without delay to the ticket agency.

This information was confirmed last night by a Director of the Metropolitan Opera Company. The Director said to a reporter for THE NEW YORK TIMES that the developments in the inquiry which is being made before Magistrate Deuel had shown that the Metropolitan Trust Company had no right to retain the tickets. He said that he was uncertain whether the tickets would be returned to Tyson & Co. or to the patrons of that agency who held receipts for the seats.

"The Metropolitan Trust Company," he said, "is in the position of any banking concern which has wittingly or unwittingly advanced a loan upon security to which the negotiator of the loan had no title. It is an axiom in law that no title can pass save from the legal owner of property. Tyson & Co. have no title to these tickets. It has been shown conclusively from the receipts held by the patrons of that concern that title to 95 per cent. of the seats had passed to the sub-subscribers before the subscription list of the Metropolitan Opera management was closed on Oct. 15.

Trust Company Can't Hold Tickets.

"In the case of a large percentage of the seats involved in the transaction, title had actually passed months before Tyson & Co. negotiated the loan of $100,000 for which the tickets were hypothecated with the trust company. Whether the trust company had cognizance of the true facts concerning those seats is a disputed point. Certainly, however, the trust company had full knowledge of the manner in which the ticket agency expected to dispose of the tickets, even if it is granted that the Directors of the Metropolitan Trust Company supposed full title to lie in Tyson & Co. on the date of delivery.

"The Metropolitan Opera House management must decline to pull anybody's burned chestnuts out of the fire. We are absolutely free from responsibility in this transaction. The young man in our box office who delivered the tickets to Mr. Hartman, the President of Tyson & Co., is absolutely honest and painstaking. He should have shown better discretion and have insisted upon a certified check before allowing the tickets to leave the box office. It was such an error of judgment as can be excused easily. I want to say that such a mistake will never be made again by any representative of the Metropolitan Opera House management. In the future no tickets will leave the box office until they have been paid for either in actual cash or by certified check.

"I have been informed from a source which leaves no doubt in my mind as to the credibility of the statement that every subscriber through Tyson & Co. to season opera tickets will receive these tickets on or before next Monday night, the beginning of the second week of the season. This will clarify the situation and will relieve the Metropolitan Opera Company's Directors of a serious embarrassment. We are naturally anxious that our patrons who have held season seats, whether they appeared as subscribers on our books or obtained their seats through an agency, should be protected in their rights.

Opera Company Not Involved.

"The controversy, therefore, while it must involve the mention of the Metropolitan Opera Company, is really between Tyson & Co. and the Metropolitan Trust Company and the clients of the ticket agency who have been deprived of their tickets. If Tyson & Co. obtained its loan from the Metropolitan Trust Company through misrepresentation, then the latter company has recourse to both civil and criminal action in law. If the trust company made the loan with full knowledge or partial knowledge of the existing facts then it committed a grave indiscretion. In either case the trust company has but one logical course to pursue, it must restore tickets to the rightful owners and must remunerate those patrons who were compelled to pay a second time for their seats."

J. M. R. Lyeth, at his home in Riverdale last night, refused to discuss the report that the Metropolitan Trust Company was preparing to deliver the tickets this morning. Efforts to reach Beverly Chew, the Vice President of the trust company, who testified yesterday in the Magistrate's inquiry, were unavailing. George N. Hartmann, secretary, and James F. McNamara, trust officer of the Metropolitan Trust Company, could not be found.

The Court Proceedings.

The examination of Beverly Chew, Second Vice President and acting President of the Metropolitan Trust Company of 49 Wall Street, was continued before Magistrate Deuel yesterday morning at 11 o'clock, in the criminal proceedings brought against Tyson & Co. The complainant was Adolph E. Dick of 244 West Seventieth Street, who charged that Tyson & Co. "wilfully, unlawfully, and feloniously misappropriated" his season tickets for the Metropolitan opera as well as the money he had paid for the tickets.

Mr. Chew admitted yesterday that the money deposited on the special account opened by Tyson & Co. was the money that the Metropolitan subscribers had paid to the ticket agency. He said he did not know the prices of the tickets sold by the Metropolitan Opera Company when the ticket agency made arrangements to deliver its allotment of seats as security for the loan of $100,000. Asked how he had been able to determine the value of the collateral his company was accepting, Mr. Chew explained that the prices of the seats were shown from a recapitulation attached to a receipt issued by the Metropolitan Opera Company to Tyson & Co. Mr. Chew said that the Metropolitan Trust Company had accepted the tickets as collateral because of its belief that Tyson & Co. was a solvent institution.

Following Vice President Chew, Earle Lewis, Treasurer of the Metropolitan Opera Company, was recalled as a witness. Assistant District Attorney Train said he understood that Mr. Lewis had "refreshed his recollection" since he testified on Wednesday afternoon. The

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

HAVANA, Nov. 20.—Francisco Rincon Gallardo, son-in-law of Gen. Porfirio Diaz and the owner of the hacienda Rincon, near Aguascalientes, was assassinated Sunday, according to advices from Mexico received by Gen. Felix Diaz to-day. No details were given.

PARIS, Nov. 20.—Gen. Porfirio Diaz to-day received a dispatch from Mexico confirming the news of the murder of his son-in-law, Francisco Rincon Gallardo, who married Luz, his second daughter. He was killed on a farm near Aguascalientes by two bandits Sunday.

CUBA TO BAR McMANIGAL.

Dynamite Informer Will Be Deported If He Lands There.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

HAVANA, Nov. 20.—Owing to a report from the Cuban Consul at Tampa that Ortie McManigal, the dynamiter who informed against the McNamara brothers, intends to come to Cuba the State Department has notified the secret police to keep a close watch on all vessels arriving from Florida.

If McManigal is caught he will be deported immediately.

DISLIKES GREAT WHITE WAY.

Sculptor Taft Thankful Chicago Is More Esthetic Than New York.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Nov. 20.—The "Great White Way" of New York is unsightly and a thing that should be relegated to the scrap heap in the opinion of Lorado Taft, the sculptor.

"The 'Great White Way' of New York about which we hear so much, is not a thing of beauty, but an unsightly glare of lights," said Mr. Taft, at a luncheon of the Electric Club to-day. "We in Chicago ought to be thankful that we have not sunk to such a degree as they have in New York."

$15,000 IN DIAMONDS GONE.

Julius Potash Says They Were Taken from Drawer of His Desk.

Julius Potash, a diamond broker, with offices on the fifteenth floor of 71 Nassau Street, reported to the police of the Old Slip station yesterday that during the morning some one had stolen from his office a wallet containing $15,000 worth of uncut diamonds. Pending their removal to a safety deposit vault, he had placed them in a secret drawer of the table in his office.

According to his story, he went out for an hour or two, leaving his wife in the office and bidding her keep careful watch of the drawer with its precious contents. When he returned he found the office in a hubbub and Mrs. Potash in hysterics. She said she had gone out only for five minutes, closing the door behind her. When she returned it was to find the door ajar and the drawer open. The diamonds, the savings of eighteen years, were gone.

MAIL TRUCK KILLS CHILD.

Confused by Warnings, Little Boy Falls Under Wheels.

A big auto truck carrying the United States mail, shortly before 7 o'clock last night, ran down and killed 3-year-old Paul Resnicoff in front of his home at 529 East Twelfth Street. The little boy had become confused by the shouted warnings from the sidewalk, and in hurrying to the safety of the curb had stumbled and fallen. A wheel of the truck ran over his neck.

The driver, John Rubenstein, of 342 East 100th Street, was held at the Fifth Street station on a charge of homicide. He was broken by the shock of the accident and kept repeating the tragedy of it that he, to whom a child had been born only a few hours before, should have run down and killed a baby.

A proposal to limit the speed of the mail auto trucks is opposed by the Post Office Department

RECORD MAIL ON MAJESTIC.

White Star Liner's Consignment Weighs More Than 155 Tons.

The White Star Line's steamship Majestic will arrive this morning from Southampton, Cherbourg, and Queenstown with 5,802 sacks of mail, which, according to an official of the Foreign Mails Office, is the largest consignment ever landed in New York by one steamer. Taken by the long ton of 2,240 pounds, the Majestic's load weighs 155 tons and 920 pounds.

As her mail room is not very large, many sacks were stored in empty staterooms and in the aft hold. The Majestic was 332 miles east of Ambrose Channel Lightship at 11:12 o'clock yesterday morning, and she may be detained some time at Quarantine this morning to unload the mail. The Cunard liner Mauretania was compelled to depart from Queenstown on Sunday, Nov. 9, without the mails, because of heavy weather, and no English mail has been received in New York since the arrival of the Olympic on Nov. 12. This caused great inconvenience to banking houses and merchants downtown, it was said. The two Post Office tenders will be sent to meet the ship at Sandy Hook probably, if the weather is fine.

FILLS BURLESON'S LARDER.

Parcel Post Brings Many Food Gifts to Postmaster General.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.—The parcel post is rapidly solving the high cost of living problem for Postmaster General Burleson. Farmers all over the country appear to be testing the system in a small way by sending packages of farm products to the Postmaster General, with the result that the Burleson home is deluged with prize turnips, freak carrots, jumbo onions, and smoked sausage fresh from the farm.

The limit was thought to have been reached the other day when an admiring farmer on the lower Potomac sent a mallard duck and some plover, but today Mr. Burleson got a package from Virginia containing a 'possum.

There was one package, however, at which the Postmaster General balked. It came from a Michigan hennery and contained a dozen guaranteed table eggs. In view of the prevailing price of eggs the Postmaster ruled that to take the Michigan consignment would violate his traditional policy of not accepting valuable and costly gifts while in public office. So he sent the eggs to a charity institution.

WILSON TO AWAIT HUERTA'S FALL

Administration Will Take No Further Active Measures to Hasten the Event.

TO USE "INFINITE PATIENCE"

Ready to Allow Months to Pass While Present Regime Is Crumbling.

WILL PROTECT OIL FIELDS

Hurried Dispatch of New Hampshire to Tuxpam Indicates Serious Developments.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.—The clearest exposition of the task set for American diplomacy in Mexico that has been heard since President Wilson's speech to Congress came to-day from a high Administrative quarter. This explanation was intended as chiefly retrospective, giving the official interpretation of recent events that have been construed as decisive checks to efforts in various directions to press Gen. Huerta to a surrender. But it also cast much light upon the Administration's future policy, and was little less than a flat statement that no further active steps would be taken against the Provisional President of Mexico.

This holds out the prospect of months of waiting while the Huerta régime crumbles of its own weight or yields to the increasingly vigorous strokes from the rebel bands. No effort whatever would be made, it was said, to hasten the downfall of Gen. Huerta by giving aid and comfort to the rebels. Nelson O'Shaughnessy, the American Chargé d'Affaires in Mexico City, will not in the near future repeat his arguments to Gen. Huerta, and John Lind will remain in Vera Cruz.

A Policy of "Infinite Patience."

There is not now, and there never has been any intention of co-operating with the

Gen. Carranza are taking every precaution against bringing on an impasse of that kind.

Welcomes the British Cruisers.

The President does not interpret the sending of two British cruisers to the Mexican coast as a sign of British impatience. He feels rather that their presence will relieve the American squadron, divided between Vera Cruz and Tuxpam, of the grave responsibility of guarding English rights in a territory where evidently the rebels are very hostile to every one connected with Lord Cowdray's holdings. It was at first reported that three British cruisers would go to Vera Cruz, but the British Embassy explained to-day that the State Department had been informed yesterday that only two cruisers were going—one to Tampico, near Tuxpam, and one to Puerto Mexico, south of Vera Cruz.

The British oil interests, which ten days ago seemed likely to be threatened by the approach of the revolutionists to Tampico, have again been thrust into the foreground of the Mexican situation. The request made then by representatives of the British oil syndicate has now been formally renewed through an appeal by Lord Cowdray, in London, to Ambassador Page. To-day the State Department received the Ambassador's dispatch conveying the wish that the United States afford all possible protection to the oil properties at Tampico, Tuxpam, and in the oilfields inland which are threatened by rebel leaders for the purpose of levying tribute for the Carranza Government. While Great Britain and other foreign powers have expressed their willingness to rely upon the United States for protection, practically all the European powers have ships in Mexican waters to look after their citizens and their property interests. It is known that no agreement for a concert of action or the landing of a joint force has been reached or broached. The British ships will probably be commanded by Captains who will act under independent orders from the home Government.

Some slight anxiety arose to-day in naval circles as to this move on the part of Great Britain because of the possibility of confusion in the matter of rank. If an Admiral were sent in command of the British ships he would rank Rear Admiral Fletcher, and in the remote contingency of an expeditionary force real friction might ensue.

Oil Properties Are Threatened.

That there is some immediate peril to the oil tanks at Tampico and Tuxpam was indicated by the information from Rear Admiral Fletcher that at the request of Rear Admiral Boush he had sent the battleship New Hampshire to Tuxpam. This movement was made without instruction from Washington and without the knowledge of the Washington authorities until after the New Hampshire was on her way. The Louisiana is already at Tuxpam, and there was keen speculation to-day to understand why the New Hampshire was also needed there unless some impending danger to the oil works was threatened. The New Hampshire had started from Pensacola, the Rhode Island, Michigan, New Jersey, Chester, and the Tacoma are at Vera Cruz.

Secretary Bryan said to-day that he had communicated to the Navy Department the request of Lord Cowdray that his properties be protected by the United States forces in Mexican waters. The communication was telegraphed to Admiral Fletcher last night. Admiral Fletcher has already been instructed by Secretary Daniels as to his authority for landing marines or bluejackets to protect Americans or foreigners and their property. Secretary Bryan said to-day that he did not care to say whether instructions had been sent to Admiral Fletcher to land a force to guard the oil properties. From the nature of the property to be protected and the fact that the oil tanks might be set on fire by a very small force of irresponsible men, it is believed that Admiral Fletcher, through the United States Consular officials, is keeping a careful watch. Some of the oil properties are several miles inland, and a protecting force could not reach them, even if unopposed, in less than a day's march.

The British oil interests in Mexico under the control of Lord Cowdray are centred at Tampico under the name of the Compania Mexico de Petrolea el Aguila, better known as the Mexican Eagle Oil Company, which also has refineries at Tuxpam. While these interests are British owned, most of the employes of the company at Tampico and Tuxpam, it is said here, are Americans. Dr. Charles Willard Hayes, well known in Washington by reason of his twenty-four years of service with the United States Geological Survey, is first Vice President and General Manager of the Aguila Company at Tampico. Dr. Hayes was chief geologist of the United States Geological Survey on Oct. 16, 1911, when he resigned his post under the Government to become the General Manager in charge of the Cowdray oil interests, with headquarters at Tampico.

The State Department was advised today of the sailing from Yokohama of the Japanese battleship Izumo, which, it was announced last week, had been ordered to proceed to Mexican waters on the Pacific Coast. The Izumo will probably take station at Mazatlan, which port she will reach in about three weeks. The British cruisers going to Puerto Mexico and Tuxpam are moderately fast ships, and will make 18 knots or more, probably reaching their destination by Saturday or Sunday.

When the British and Japanese cruisers, now on their way, reach Mexican waters, the foreign powers will be represented there by seven war vessels, while the United States already has fifteen ships of various tonnages off the two coasts. There are two German cruisers—the Hertha and the Bremen—at Vera Cruz, and one small vessel, the Nuernberg, is on the Pacific Coast.

The British will have two cruisers—the Berwick and the Lancaster—on the Atlantic side by to-morrow, while the whole West Indian Squadron is within easy call. France has sent the battleship Condé to Vera Cruz, and the Japanese cruiser, Izumo, is sailing for Mazatlan.

No estimate is obtainable here of the number of foreigners left in Mexico. The State Department consistently declines to make public the number even of Americans in the danger zone. Unofficial statements, however, have been made that 1,500 Americans were in the City of Mexico, while a still larger number is thought to be scattered through the country. Thousands of foreigners of all nationalities have left the country, but when the German Minister recently advised the exodus of his countrymen it was estimated that many hundreds of them were still in their colonies.

INSURES MEXICO BUILDINGS.

Lloyd's Writing Many Policies Against Rioting and Civil War.

LONDON, Nov. 20.—A surprisingly large amount of business is being offered to Lloyd's in connection with the Mexican trouble. Many of the large public buildings and business premises in Mexico City have been insured at a premium of 5% per cent. for six months against risks of damage from rioters or through a civil war or bombardment. Some of the underwriters are fighting rather shy of business at this figure.

The liability of Lloyd's for shipping losses during the recent storms on the Great Lakes is calculated at $7,500,000.

HUERTA GUARDED AS CONGRESS OPENS

Diplomats' Attendance Held by Mexicans to Disprove Agreement with Us.

LITTLE ENTHUSIASM SHOWN

Legislators Listen Soberly to Justification of Dissolution of Previous Chamber.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 20.—Guarded by troops which lined the avenues of approach to the Chamber of Deputies and with a personal escort of his crack regiment, the Twenty-ninth, President Huerta this evening entered the Chamber to address the newly convoked Congress.

Practically no applause greeted him until a member from Jalisco started a cheer by shouting: "Long live the defender of our national dignity!"

Thereupon cheers broke forth in the galleries, and some from the floor.

President Huerta occupied the place at the left of Señor Tamariz, the Speaker, Gen. Blanquet, who in accordance with usage, should have been on the floor of the House, having a seat at the President's left. Blanquet wore no sword, thus complying with the regulation of the Chamber that no side arms are allowed. He wore his uniform, however, with an empty scabbard.

At the back of the platform sat the members of Gen. Blanquet's staff and such members of Gen. Huerta's staff as had not been elected to the Chamber.

President Huerta took about ten minutes to read his message, which was not applauded until he had finished.

Speaker Tamariz answered in a speech about three minutes long. He was applauded when he acclaimed "the defender of the national dignity, President Huerta," and said that the Chamber was with the President when he was acting in this rôle.

The whole session passed off without any commotion, all the members being attentive, but undemonstrative. The absence of all the Catholic Party members with the exception of Tamariz was noticeable. It is understood that he intended to plead illness, but was warned against such action. It is believed that the consequences might have been serious if he had refused to attend the session.

All the members of the Diplomatic Corps of any importance were present except Nelson O'Shaughnessy, the American Chargé. Mr. O'Shaughnessy received instructions from his Government some time ago not to attend the opening of Congress. The attendance of the other members was commented upon by politicians and officials here, who say that this indicates that Europe is not supporting the American policy.

No Street Demonstration for Huerta

Dispatch to the Associated Press.

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 20.—Guarded by Federal troops, who lined the streets between the National Palace and the Chamber of Deputies, President Huerta early this evening entered the building in which his new Congress was convened in joint session, awaiting the delivery of his long-expected message. The crowds in the streets were small and undemonstrative.

His face showing none of that whimsical humor which sometimes characterizes its expression, the President read his message to the newly elected Senators and Deputies. Few Mexican Presidents have read at the formal opening sessions of Congress shorter communications, and few have confined themselves so closely to one subject.

The document was nothing more than a brief explanation of his motives for dissolving the old Congress, most of the members of which are now in the penitentiary, accused of sedition.

In his reply to the message, the President of the Chamber, Señor Tamariz, assured Gen. Huerta of the whole-hearted co-operation of Congress.

"If ever there should reign in Congress a patriotic ideal," he said, "it ought to predominate now as never before, and above all other sentiment."

To the Congress he said:

"Without doubt upon your work depends largely that the country with the aid of its good sons should make a supreme effort in order not to fall in the ruin and humiliation which threaten it. On this account, you come here animated by the purest patriotism, prepared to lay aside ambitions, personal interests, and even political resentments and rancor in order to work unitedly for a supreme ideal—the preservation of our nationality."

Promises Backing to President.

In that part of his address, directed to President Huerta, he said:

"You have made a call upon the patriotism of the Senators and Deputies composing the Congress. I believe I interpret faithfully the ideas and purposes of the members of both houses in assuring you that all are resolved to comply with their duty, and that love for the fatherland will be the sentiment that will inspire and govern us in our proceedings.

"We should above all work for conciliation and concord, making a constant effort within the province of our action to bring about union and peace, not only within our own assemblies, but also throughout the whole republic, and were we not disposed to accomplish a really national work, we should not have responded to your call.

"Mr. President, you have taken the oath and have solemnly promised to place the national dignity above every ambition and paltry interest. In this course we shall always be with you. You may depend upon our decided cooperation in your noble and supreme effort to preserve the integrity and autonomy of the nation which you have maintained to this day.

"You may depend also upon our assistance in all the efforts you may make toward the work of peace and the unification of all Mexicans."

Not all the Congressmen were present. Twenty-seven of them failed to put in an appearance, and most of these were members of the Catholic Party, to which Tamariz belongs. It had been announced that the Catholic members had held a meeting and decided not to participate in the session, and this gave rise to the baseless rumor that the Speaker himself would not preside.

The new Congress showed many faces familiar during the days of Porfirio Diaz—so many that the exiled ruler would have felt entirely at home, had he stepped into the Chamber.

The Congress is composed for the most part of a quiet lot of men, representative of the older and more conservative element, and Gen. Huerta appeared to realize this while reading to them his message in a grim, straightforward manner, such as had not been observed in the Chamber in recent years.

Gen. Huerta drove from the Palace to the Chamber through files of soldiers, most of whom were detailed from the crack Twenty-ninth Regiment, whose men participated in the coup d'état at the Palace in February. He entered the building, while the bands were playing the national air.

President a Stern Figure.

Acknowledging the plaudits and vivas of the Congressmen and spectators, as he moved down the aisle, by a series of military salutes, instead of the grave bows which characterized his old chief, Porfirio Diaz, Gen. Huerta looked a stern figure. Like the Congressmen, he was in evening clothes, the only touch of rank being the tri-color across his breast.

The only country not represented was the United States. Nelson O'Shaughnessy, the Chargé d'Affaires, acting under instructions, was absent from the session.

Sir Lionel Carden, the British Minister, was a few minutes late, and his delay in arriving gave rise to the rumor that he, too, had been instructed to absent himself.

It was a carefully selected audience. Tickets were necessary for admission to the building, and part of the space was occupied by police and plain clothes men. There were a few empty chairs.

In the entire audience there were perhaps ten women, but none representative of the city's fashionable element, in contrast to the days when the women of high society planned long ahead of time to obtain seats.

A technical violation of the law created comment. Gen. Huerta's staff filed in, wearing side arms. It is specifically provided that no armed soldiers shall ever appear on the floor of the House, and custom has ordained that officers, appearing in uniform, must do so with empty scabbards.

But the swords in evidence at the sides of the members of Gen. Huerta's staff appeared to emphasize the fact that this is a military administration.

Outside the building, throughout the session, a strong force of soldiers guarded all the approaches; patrols rode the streets for several blocks around, and still other troops were stationed in small detachments further out.

The Congress held a short preliminary session before the arrival of Provisional President Huerta, when the Speaker, Eduardo Tamariz, formerly Minister of Public Instruction, formally declared open the second period of the twenty-sixth Mexican Congress.

Señor Tamariz is the Catholic Deputy whose nomination as Minister of Public Instruction by Provisional President Huerta was opposed by the Liberal Party in the last Congress and this opposition was cited by Gen. Huerta in his previous defense of his action in dissolving Congress as one of the contributory causes to the step he had taken. His selection as Speaker is regarded as a further rebuke to the Deputies of the old Congress imprisoned by Huerta.

Still Think He May Resign.

It is regarded here to-day as not entirely impossible that Provisional President Huerta, after having, through the ratification of the new Congress, relieved himself from the danger of being called to account for his acts by some future Administration, might be brought to the point of self-elimination through the efforts of the foreign powers supporting the United States Government.

The Provisional President is said by those believed to be in a position to know to have been persuaded that he must resign and to have named Manuel Garza Aldape, former Minister of the Interior, as the man he desired to succeed him, when the insistence of John Lind, the personal representative of President Wilson, upon the abolition of the new Congress caused him to change his attitude and reject the idea of resigning.

Mr. O'Shaughnessy, the American Chargé, stated early to-day that he had not received any fresh indication from the State Department at Washington as to his future action.

Much interest is expressed among the general public as to the intentions of the United States Government in face of Provisional President Huerta's convening of the new Congress after receiving the notification that the United States would view it with disfavor.

CALLED CARRANZA'S BLUFF.

Hale Did Not Ask Him to Return for New Negotiations.

Special to The New York Times.

NOGALES, Ariz., Nov. 20.—It has leaked out to-night that Gen. Carranza's ball and two days' sojourn at Magdalena had purposes other than those of fulfilling social obligations. It is asserted on the authority of a Mexican official here, who was not speaking for publication, that the plan was to remain within easy reach of Nogales in the hope, if not the expectation, that William B. Hale would make overtures for the Constitutionalist leader's return to conference. In other words, Gen. Carranza made a bluff, and Dr. Hale called it.

Americans arriving to-night from Empalme, near Guaymas, which is within the Federal lines, report that W. E. Felix, an American citizen and employe of the railroad, who left Empalme for this place several days ago, was arrested by Constitutionalist soldiers on reaching their lines, and is still incarcerated on the charge of firing upon the rebels. Felix's friends say that the charge is ridiculous, and is only a pretext to hold him because he is a half-breed, his mother being a Mexican. They have succeeded in getting his case before the American Consul at Hermosillo, Louis Hostetter, who is taking steps to help Felix.

It is also reported on the same authority that Gen. Ojeda's Federal forces at and near Guaymas are throwing up intrenchments and otherwise preparing for holding the city. It is said that they are far from demoralized, as recently reported from Constitutionalist sources.

MAGDALENA, Sonora, Nov. 20.—Gen. Carranza stayed in this little town to-night and purposes to leave here early to-morrow for Hermosillo. After a short stop there he intends to proceed south and enter upon a vigorous campaign in Sinaloa.

Gen. Gilberto Camacho, commander of the Constitutionalist forces in Puebla, reported campaign progress to Gen. Carranza to-night. He said he had 8,000 men in the field, had taken eight towns, and was preparing to lay siege to Mexico City when revolutionists from other States supplied support.

In an official report Gen. Francisco Villa said he had executed only seven Federal officers captured last week in Juarez.

DOUGLAS, Ariz., Nov. 20.—The reason for Gen. Carranza's abrupt departure from Nogales was that Dr. William Bayard Hale proposed that the Constitutionalists lay down their arms and submit to an election being held, according to Constitutionalists here. Gen. Carranza, they said to-day, realized that it was impossible to comply with these conditions and left Nogales without seeking further negotiations looking toward recognition of the rebels by the American Government.

BROWNSVILLE, Texas, Nov. 20.—Demoralized Federal troops, driven out of Victoria, the capital of Tamaulipas, when the Constitutionalists captured that city on Tuesday, were again encountered by rebels yesterday between Tula and Tampico and defeated in a one-sided battle, with a loss of thirty killed and forty-five captured, according to official reports received at Matamoras, Mexico, to-day from Gen. Pablo Gonzales, the rebel commander.

Gen. Gonzales said that Gen. Aguilar and Gen. Arzamendi, commanders of the defeated Federals, had abandoned their troops and were fleeing to Tampico.

Gonzales also reported that he was preparing for a simultaneous attack upon two cities, one of which is believed to be Tampico.

MEXICANS DEMAND WE YIELD MADEROS

Gen. Maas, Commander at Vera Cruz, Asks Our Consul to Surrender Them.

WASHINGTON IS INFORMED

Freed from Prison Wednesday, They Took Refuge Under Our Flag, Expecting to Sail Away.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

VERA CRUZ, Nov. 20.—Gen. Maas has asked the American Consulate to surrender Evaristo and Daniel Madero, who took refuge there after the Government had granted them liberty from prison under a small bail.

Consul Canada has asked Washington for instructions as to whether he shall deliver the men or not.

The Morro Castle sailed this afternoon with very few American passengers.

VERA CRUZ, Nov. 20.—Evaristo Madero, Daniel Madero, Seandro Aguilar, Andres Aguilar, Antonio de la Paz and Santro Mora, all relatives of the late President Madero, took refuge in the American Consulate here this afternoon. All were released yesterday from the fortress de San Juan Ulloa, where they were incarcerated several weeks ago charged with sedition.

On their release from prison they went to a local hotel where the wives of the two Maderos were stopping. It was the intention of the entire party to sail for Havana this afternoon on board the steamship Morro Castle, their release having been effected on nominal bail bonds and their understanding being that the Government would oppose no objection to their departing from the country.

The Morro Castle was watched closely by secret police through the day until she sailed at 5:30 o'clock this afternoon. Just before sailing time the Maderos presented themselves at the American Consulate and said that they had received word that a warrant was out for the arrest of themselves and relatives and that all of them were to be taken to Mexico City. They requested Consul Canada to give them asylum, and the Consul acquiesced.

The Consulate notified Washington and is awaiting instructions as to further action in the case.

ALDAPE SAILS FROM HAVANA.

Bound for Paris on Financial Mission—Still Loyal to Huerta.

HAVANA, Nov. 20.—Manuel Garza Aldape, who last Sunday resigned the portfolio of Minister of the Interior in the Cabinet of President Huerta of Mexico, sailed from Havana to-day on board the steamer Espagne. He is bound for Paris

Señor Aldape said while in Havana that he was in harmony with President Huerta and the members of his Cabinet. He added that his services were required in France for the purpose of strengthening Mexican credit abroad. He thought the economic situation in Mexico was a difficult, but not a critical, one. The former Minister declared that President Huerta would not resign, in spite of all the pressure of Washington.

Ramon Prida, ex-member of the State Legislature at Vera Cruz, who was removed by police from the steamer Morro Castle at Vera Cruz last month while he was trying to leave the country, also arrived here on the Espagne. Señor Prida says he will proceed to New York to make complaint against Capt. Knight of the Morro Castle for permitting the police to arrest him on board his ship.

JAPANESE CRUISER SAILS.

Diplomat Aboard the Izumo Says Neutrality Will Be Observed.

YOKOSUKA, Japan, Nov. 20.—The Japanese cruiser Izumo sailed for the Pacific coast of Mexico early this morning.

There was a popular demonstration at her departure. In spite of a raging storm a steamer accompanied her to the mouth of the bay, and a band played national airs. Among those on board were several distinguished naval officers headed by Admiral Baron Minoru Saito, Minister of Marine.

The commander of the cruiser, Capt. Kelzaburo Moriyama, is regarded as one of the ablest officers of the Japanese navy. He is said to be very tactful and capable of handling any international question which may arise. He speaks English and French.

The cruiser will proceed by way of Honolulu to Manzanillo.

TOKIO, Nov. 20.—Masano Hanihara, ex-Secretary of the Japanese Legation at Washington, who is proceeding to Mexico on board the Izumo, to assist the Japanese Minister, is quoted in the Tokio newspapers as saying:

"Japan's intention is to maintain strict neutrality in the matter of the American and Mexican relations. The Izumo will protect the Japanese residents and, if necessary, will establish communication with the Japanese in the interior. I shall confer with the diplomatic representatives in the Mexican capital."

COWDRAY ASKS PROTECTION.

Requests the United States to Guard His Oil Interests.

LONDON, Nov. 20.—The United States Embassy in London, acting on the personal request of Lord Cowdray, cabled to Washington to-day asking the American Government to extend its protection to the imperiled interests in Mexico of the Pearson Syndicates which he represents. Lord Cowdray says that the presence of United States battleships at Tampico has had a salutary effect in the prevention of the destruction of the property of the concern, and that he will appreciate a continuation of the extension of such protection.

Lord Cowdray also asked Ambassador Page to convey to Washington his denial of having extended financial or other assistance to President Huerta.

HUERTA IMPOSES MORE TAXES

Decrees Heavy Charge Upon Raw Cotton—Authorizes Smaller Notes.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 20.—President Huerta has decreed that the banks enjoying emission privileges are authorized to issue one and two peso notes. The smallest notes hitherto in circulation have been of the five-peso denomination.

Another decree establishes a tax of 8 centavos per kilogram on raw cotton, (8 cents Mexican per 2.2 pounds.) The reason given is the necessity of making possible the movement of the cotton crop from the district around Torreon, which is now in the hands of the rebels. The tax will be collected as soon as the cotton is moved or sold to persons other than cotton growers.

MUSTN'T INTERVENE, SAYS N. O. WINTER

Cheaper to Pay All American Losses Than to Send Troops to Mexico.

REBELS' AIMS DESCRIBED

Cabrera Says the Constitutionalists Plan to Develop a Middle Class.

WORCESTER, Mass., Nov. 20.—"Intervention should not even be thought of by the United States," said Nevin O. Winter, author of several books on Latin-American countries, in addressing the Clark University Conference on Latin-America to-day on "The Fundamental Causes of the Present Situation in Mexico."

"From a standpoint of dollars and cents," he added, "it would be cheaper for Uncle Sam to reimburse all losses sustained by Americans than to incur the expense that intervention would involve."

Mr. Winter expressed the opinion that the present disturbed condition of Mexico "is probably the final transition—the dawn of a new era."

"The paroxysms now shaking the country in rebellions and treacheries," he said, "mean the recovery of Mexico ultimately to peace and prosperity. A strong man must arise, a leader of enough force of character to draw the people to him and awe any opposing chieftain who may wish to create trouble for his own personal aggrandizement."

Mr. Winter attributed present conditions to past methods of government in Mexico, to the great estates held by the wealthy and to the system of peonage. He said that nearly everything complained of by the Mexicans themselves and criticised by people of other nations could "be traced either to the effect of heredity or environment."

An exposition of the point of view of the Mexican Constitutionalists was given by Luis Cabrera, former leader of the Mexican House of Representatives.

"The reason for the instability of Mexican conditions," he said "is the absence of a middle class. Without the middle class, there is no real social equilibrium, no peace, and no democratic form of government. The Constitutionalist movement tends toward the formation of a middle class through the creation of favorable conditions of life for the masses.

"The colonial policies of Spain in Mexico contributed largely to the creation of privileged classes. Large tracts of land were granted to soldiers and to the Church, and thousands of Indians were compelled to live upon and work the lands so granted. The independence of Mexico in 1810 did not materially change the condition of the masses. The great landed estates owned by wealthy families still remain in their possession and are at the present time responsible for Mexico's economical crisis.

"Owing to the dictatorial personal powers exercised by Gen. Diaz from 1876 to 1910, the people of Mexico have not had an opportunity to test their Constitution; but study and recent developments have proved that in certain particulars the Constitution of Mexico is not fitted for the needs of the people. The problem now confronting the Constitutionalist Party is the promotion of favorable conditions for creating a middle class. This must be accomplished by political reform measures as well as by the enactment of agrarian laws having a tendency to equalize taxation between the small farms and large estates, as well as ultimately to divide the large estates into smaller tracts of land."

Opposite views of the influence of Gen. Porfirio Diaz upon Mexican life and national development were expressed by S. W. Reynolds, former President of the Mexican Central Railway Company, and Prof. L. C. Wells of Clark University, who has traveled extensively in Mexico. Mr. Reynolds extolled Diaz for his accomplishments in restoring peace to the country and interesting foreign capital in industrial and economic development.

Prof. Wells said that Diaz, although he accomplished much, gave a "lopsided administration."

Referring to the present situation in Mexico, Prof. Wells said that foreign Governments desirous of ending the disorder should beware of forcing a compromise between the opposing factions and should give little heed "to the capitalists who are more interested in securing present returns from their Mexican investments than they are in bringing permanent happiness to Mexico."

At the evening session John Barrett, Director of the Pan-American Union, warned the public against treating the "greatest crisis in the hundred years of the country's relations with Latin America" with the flippancy which characterized the "comment of many speakers, writers, and editors."

DR. H. H. TINKER A SUICIDE.

New Yorker Injects Poison at His New London Country Home.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW LONDON, Conn., Nov. 20.—Dr. Horace H. Tinker, 55, a physician of New York City, died to-day at his summer home on Pequot Avenue here from a mysterious poison taken Wednesday night by means of hypodermic injections into his arms and legs. He had been living in his Summer home for several weeks alone, except for his chauffeur. The latter discovered him in a comatose state late Wednesday night.

On Dr. Tinker's dressing table the police found a letter in which the doctor announced his intention of quitting this world and gave specific instructions to the Coroner, should that official decide to hold an inquest. He never rallied to consciousness, in spite of heroic efforts by physicians, who tried various antidotes without obtaining a reaction. They were handicapped by lack of knowledge as to the poison or combination of poisons injected.

Dr. Tinker's widow lives in New York City. She is said to be wealthy.

Dr. Tinker's name appears in the city telephone directory opposite the address, 1,257 Washington Avenue. A man who said he was Dr. W. Bayard Long answered a call to Dr. Tinker's number. Dr. Long said that Dr. Tinker gave up his practice three years ago and moved to New London, keeping his New York telephone connection at Dr. Long's office so as to be in touch with some of his former patients.

Dr. Long had not heard of the suicide. He did not know where Mrs. Tinker was staying in New York.

He Calls for Volunteers.

Just as his thousand or more auditors were settling back expecting to hear a semi-humorous address, Gov. Glynn turned his talk in another channel. He said that he hoped he would not be nicknamed "The Scolder" or "The Wrangler" if he suggested that the business men of the State and the country should be more willing than they are now or have been in the past to sacrifice their private intcrests and hold public office.

"I do not believe," he said, "that the business men have taken their proper place in running our government or in writing our laws. I believe we could well afford to imitate England in this respect. If we had more business men in office the country would be better off.

"Now, I come before you to-night with a proposition. Not long ago Senator Aldrich said he could save the United States Government millions of dollars every year if he could run it on business principles. I believe what he said was true, and I know that New York State could save much money if business men were allowed to overhaul and bring up to date the antiquated and overlapping system which to-day prevails in many of our State departments.

"I would consider it the biggest thing that I could do in my administration if I could inaugurate this system. And I tell you to-night that if there are enough prominent business men in this State of all political parties who are willing to donate their time and their services to serve on a commission to devise a business system for New York State similar to the one that Senator Aldrich proposed for the United States Government, I will be pleaeed to name them as a commission to overhaul and improve the system upon which New York's business is conducted. I am sure that if this dinner to-night will give birth to this movement, it will save in the years to come the taxpayers of New York State a princely sum.

"I would like to inaugurate such a movement, and in that desire to-night I beg the assistance of every member of this body, and of every business man in the State. I have the power of appointment, and I will exercise that power of appointment if I can find enough prominent business men in this State willing to volunteer under the banner of efficiecy and economy.

To Revise Tax and Banking Laws.

"For the first time in the history of the State we are going to inaugurate in Albany this Winter a budget system similar to that which has prevailed in England. Eventually this budget system will wipe out the supply bill which has been the pork barrel in the government of this State. It would wipe it out this Winter if it were not for the deficiencies in the different departments which were inherited from a vicious system of years standing. The great benefit of this movement may not be felt completely this Winter, but if continued it will bring about a saving which will merit the approval of every business man in the State.

"We have on foot at Albany two other projects which I am sure will meet the approbation of this body. One is to revise our tax laws, which have not kept step with the march of progress. In the last fifty years New York has made no important change in its tax laws. We are away behind some of the smaller States of this Union in our taxation system. Our system is archaic, and we are going to try to improve it so that it will be worthy of the dignity and prominence of this Commonwealth. We have under way a revision of the banking laws which, if we can complete before the next Legislature adjourns, we hope will provide a model banking system for every other State in the Union.

Common Sense Solves All Problems.

"My friends, a word more and I am through. We are entering on a new era in politics. The humanitarian element is going to play a larger part in our public questions in the next twenty years than it has in the last generation. This sociological trend of thought, prominent to-day in all walks of life, is going to upset many traditions and rewrite many precedents. This situation was bound to come with the ascendency of manhood suffrage, and those who try to stop it are playing the foolish part of old King Canute when he tried to bid the waves of the ocean to recede from their shore.

"Some men fear this new movement, many business men dread it; but to my way of thinking they see ghosts where there are only shadows. And to those who hold this fear I would say that history offers the consolation that the people at large, the populace, have at one time been guilty of a fault in which the representative few have not been equally guilty at some other time; that the representative few have never exhibited a virtue which the people or the populace have not displayed on some other occasion. In the theory of the flow and the ebb, the positive and the negative, the balance and the counter-balance running through all nature. Thought runs in cycles the ages through, and the brains of mankind seldom lose their centre of gravity. Important problems, tremendous problems, appalling problems we have us to-day; but common sense, common courage, mutual forbearance, and the golden rule will solve our problems of to-day just as they have solved all problems since man was man.

Gov. Glynn's plan, as he has outlined it, is to appoint a commission of twenty-five members of the Chamber and from them to select an Executive Committee of nine to carry on the burden of the actual investigations. The findings of the Executive Committee would then be submitted to the general commission. He hopes in this way to devise some means to eliminate politics from the management of the departments. If it is found that Constitutional amendments are needed, it is his desire to have a comprehensive plan to take before the next Constitutional Convention.

Stand by Wilson, Says Choate.

Joseph H. Choate, former Ambassador to the Court of St. James's, received a warm welcome when introduced by Mr. Claflin. He said that he did not intend to make a serious address, but shortly was discussing National problems. First, however, he referred to the Chamber of Commerce as "a great pillar of commercial integrity, morality, and a sucess" since its foundation.

He complimented Gov. Glynn on his address. Of President Wilson's Mexican policy he said:

"Well, what is the most stirring question to-day that agitates the hearts of the American people? Its name has been mentioned several times, but it really is Mexico. What are we going to do with Mexico, or what is Mexico going to do with us? I should like very much to discuss the question of the policy of the United States of America in regard to Mexico. I think I could occupy the whole evening with that, if I only knew what that policy was. [Laughter.] At best, there is only one man who knows what that policy is, and he very wisely keeps his own counsel and won't tell. And I am not sure that even he knows. [Renewed laughter.] I am not sure that we are not all drifting with him at our head from day to day, and even from hour to hour, waiting, waiting, like Micawber, to see what may turn up.

"It is a very trying situation; it is a very dangerous situation; but one thing I know, and for one thing I appeal to the heart and head of every gentleman present in this chamber to-night, that in this trying situation there is but one duty for all of us, and that is to stand by the President of the United States. [Applause.]

"You may call it diplomatic business; you may call it Executive business, but it is fair to assume that the President is in possession of information vastly superior to that which even all of the members of the Chamber of Commerce of the State possess. He knows what he is talking about. He knows what he is aiming at. One thing we are sure of, that he is for peace; that he is for preserving peace at all hazards, and that by no act of his shall this nation be plunged into a destructive and a dreadful war. [Applause.] He is entitled to that from us without regard to party and without regard to creeds. We must stand by our President through thick and through thin; and we shall come out right in the end.

"I would discourse more largely on the Mexican question if I understood it better. I have talked with Mr. Root here, foremost in the Senate of the United States, and he has been unable to enlighten me."

This sally brought laughter and applause. Continuing, Mr. Choate said:

Finds Fun in the Income Tax.

"This President of ours has been in office now for nine months, and he has been working very hard, with the most honest purpose in the world, with, as I believe, no desire in his heart except to serve the American people with the best of his ability, and he has accomplished a great deal. He has passed a bill for the reformation of the tariff. I do not know whether that is a sore or joyful subject in this company [laughter,] but for one I think he has done exceedingly well in that business. He has satisfied the yearnings of the American people that have been suppressed for the last twenty years. Then he has mixed it up with the income tax. That, you know, is one of the most popular subjects before us to-day. [Laughter.] Mr. Root tells me that notwithstanding all the urgent purpose of Congress to avoid discrimination, they have brought to bear upon the domestic relation, upon that of the conjugal relation, a very serious discrimination, that if a husband and his wife live together they can have only an exemption of $4,000, but if they live separately and apart—and keep quarreling—they can have two exemptions of $4,000 each."

Outlook Bright to Him.

Mr. Choate said that he had been told Wall Street was rather blue, but that he did not believe it.

"I believe there never was a time when the prospects of the people of the United States were brighter and greater than thy are to-day," he said. "Think what progress we have made in the last fifteen or twenty years."

Even with the income tax, continued Mr. Choate, the taxes laid upon us were less than those levied upon the people of any other country under the sun. He said he did not feel any apprehension about any currency bill that Congress might pass. Of the proposed anti-trust laws he said:

"Whatever laws they may pass, whatever penalties they may impose, the business of this country will not be carried on under them on any more honest principles than they have been in the last ten years." He said he would like to be in the United States Senate for about a week to tell the Senators what he thought, and closed his address with a short talk about conditions in New York, first asking in mock dread if any Tammany representatives were present. The election of another reform administration, he said, would restore the character and raise the credit of the whole corporate body.

"You can't do better than that," he said. "We have a common enemy, a public enemy—I don't know whether its representatives are here to-night—if there are any Tammany Hall men here to-night I wish they would stand up and be counted: if they would only stand up and be counted it would be perfectly delightful—like Huerta, they are in danger of being starved out. Four years more of such an administration as we have had in the last four years will sure to bring safety to the people, and to put the finances, the character, and the credit of this city upon a basis that shall be unfailing."

Alton B. Parker said that Gov. Glynn occupied the most trying position a New York Governor ever occupied, but that if he followed out the course indicated he would win the confidence and affection of the people of the State because he would render a service such as had not been rendered for a long time.

Dr. John H. Finley spoke of the brilliant address made by Mortimer Schiff as Chairman of the Committee on Commercial Education, which culminated in the recent announcement of a gift of $700,000 for the erection of a building to be used for a college of business and administration. Dr. Finley pointed to Jacob H. Schiff when he mentioned the gift and said he was not sure but that he was sitting by the side of "Anonymity," but Mr. Schiff smilingly shook his head.

Among those who sent regrets were John Wanamaker, Mayor Kline, and Rear Admiral Robert E. Peary. On the seating list were Robert Adamson, Joseph Bancroft, August Belmont, Cornelius N. Bliss, Jr., Thatcher M. Brown, James G. Cannon, Starling W. Childs, Henry Clews, Robert C. Clowry, Henry P. Davison, Joseph P. Day, M. Hartley Dodge, F. Augustus Eldridge, Abram I. Elkus, Samuel W. PLEAD FOR VICTIMS OF RUSSIAN TYRANNY

Eminent Men Sign Appeal Drawing Attention to Ill-Treatment of Political Prisoners.

OVER 40,000 SINCE 1905

3,000 Executed and Many Thousands Sent to Siberia—Death by Slow Torture in Jail.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, Friday, Nov. 21.—There is being published throughout Europe this morning a protest against the ill-treatment of political prisoners in Russia. It bears nearly fifty signatures of politicians, scientists, artists, and men of letters of European repute.

It is declared in the protest that since the Czar's manifesto of October, 1905, promising liberty to the people of Russia, over 40,000 persons have been sentenced for political offenses. Of these over 3,000 have been executed and more than 10,000 thrown into the horrible "katorga," or hard labor prisons.

The tercentenary of the Romanoffs, it is stated, scarcely affected the political prisoners. Their terrible sufferings have not been mitigated. The prisons are overcrowded to such an extent that it is impossible for them to rest even on the bare floor. Absolute starvation and the most barbarous treatment are their daily portion.

The prisoners become victims of all kinds of epidemics, and very often the prisons become centres of infection for the surrounding districts. Those sentenced to long terms of imprisonment, chiefly political prisoners, are in actual fact condemned to a cruel form of slow death.

A veritable epidemic of suicide has developed among the prisoners, says the protest. The unhappy prisoners see in suicide the only way of escape.

Most tragic is the fate of those tens of thousands of political exiles, of whom most are deported to Siberia without trial, but simply by the arbitrary action of the Administration. Most of them are sent to frozen wastes, where they are unable to obtain necessary food, clothing, and housing, and where they perish.

The signatories of the protest, who say they join together to publish the facts so that the world may know them and form an opinion, include the following: Lord Lytton, J. W. Edgwood, M. P.; J. Ramsay Macdonald, M. P.; Sir A. Conan Doyle, H. G. Wells, Jerome K. Jerome, Prof. Gilbert Murray, Prof. J. B. Bury, Laurence Irving, Sir Victor Horsley, and Maurice Hewlett.

LEPERS' HOME FOR LONDON.

Movement to Found It—Doctor Says Opera Singer Was a Leper.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, Nov. 20.—An announcement by Sir Malcolm Morris, an authority on skin diseases, that a movement has been started to establish a home for lepers in London is warmly welcomed by medical men. A high medical authority said to-day:

"The number of lepers in London is doubtful, but I know of eight cases. The total number in the British Isles is estimated at from fifty to a hundred.

"There need be no alarm as to contagion in this country as far as leprosy is concerned. It is practically unknown. I know of a leper who was an omnibus conductor for several years. I also know of an opera singer, a leper, who charmed audiences nightly. A medical man, also a leper, lives entirely by himself in rooms in the West End, and goes out only at night."

Dr. Phineas S. Abraham, surgeon in charge of the skin department of the West London Hospital, speaking to the Royal Medical Society to-day, said:

"A few weeks ago I came across the case of a medical man who has been in England for six years and has studied at two hospitals. Although he has been going about among doctors, I was the only one to discover that he was a leper. He has been suffering from the disease for twelve or fifteen years."

KAISER HAS A BAD COLD.

Was Compelled to Cancel an Engagement at Berlin Yesterday.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

BERLIN, Nov. 20.—A telephone message from Potsdam at 9 o'clock to-night states that the Kaiser is suffering from a severe cold and was obliged to keep to his room to-day, though not to his bed. He had to cancel an engagement in Berlin to-day.

It is stated that there is no cause for uneasiness.

The Kaiser expects to leave Potsdam on Monday to shoot with Prince Max Egon zu Fürstenberg.

WOMEN SET OXFORD FIRE.

Big Blaze on River Front—Sylvia Pankhurst Escapes Police.

OXFORD, Friday, Nov. 21.—A large fire is raging early this morning in a big lumber yard on the river front.

Three women were seen to leave the vicinity shortly before the fire started and a quantity of suffragette literature was found in the yard.

It is presumed that the blaze was started by suffragettes because David Lloyd George, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, will visit Oxford to-day.

LONDON, Friday, Nov. 21.—Sylvia Pankhurst again escaped arrest after having delivered an inflammatory "No Rent" speech at Canning Town last night.

About fifty policemen were outside the hall, but Miss Pankhurst came through the main entrance surrounded by a strong bodyguard. She reached her motor car and got away in safety.

According to The Daily Mail, the authorities cautioned the police to avoid a conflict with Miss Pankhurst's East End "army," and therefore they allowed her to escape.

SILVER CUP BRINGS $1,415.

High Prices Continue at the Sale of the Fitzhenry Collection.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, Nov. 20.—The highest price in the sale to-day at Christie's of the J. H. Fitzhenry collection of English and foreign silver was $1,415, for a standing cup and cover. An inscription on it says that it was given to the church at Geidi, Holland, by Jonkheer Johan van Welweide in 1649. It is 14¾ inches high and weighs 26 oz. 13 dwt.

A Louis XVI. silver-gilt beaker, five inches high, weight 11 oz. 2 dwt., Paris, 1778, from the Doistau collection, brought $840.

A Louis XV. écuelle, cover and stand, weight 55 oz., Paris, 1773, sold for $1,100.

A Louis XVI. rose-water ewer and dish, weight 62 oz. 18 dwt., Paris, 1778, went for $760, and a similar piece, weighing 62 oz. 5 dwt., brought $1,000.

A pair of parcel-gilt cups, made in Nuremberg, no date assigned, was knocked down for $785.

ALSATIAN RECRUITS MOVED.

Action Due to Feeling Against German Officer Who Insulted Them.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Nov. 20.—Demonstrations against a young Lieutenant at Zabern, Alsace, who on Nov. 11 applied a contemptuous term to Alsatians, were followed to-day by transfer of all the Alsatian recruits from the Zabern garrison to Colmar, Neubreisach, and Freiburg.

The newspaper, The Alsatian, asserted three days ago that the offending Lieutenant said to the recruits: "For all I care you can defile the French flag." Military authorities promptly denied the allegation. The Alsatian now repeats it, "with full consciousness of our responsibility under the press law."

There are indications that the last has not yet been heard of this affair.

MME. MONTESSORI STARTS.

Famous Educator Leaves Rome to Give Course of Lectures in America.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

ROME, Nov. 20.—Mme. Montessori, the inventor of the Montessori system of the education of children, who has finally been induced by S. S. McClure to go to America, left here to-day with him and will sail on the liner Cincinnati, arriving at New York on Dec. 3.

Mme. Montessori has been congratulated by many friends here on her decision, including Queen Margherita, who has always followed with interest the development of her work. The Queen wished her great success in the lectures she is about to give in the principal American towns.

NOT LIKELY TO EXHIBIT.

Austrian Government's Attitude to the Panama Fair Changed.

VIENNA, Nov. 20.—After the interview of a delegation to-day with the Minister-President and the Ministers of Commerce and Public Works, Austrian manufacturers and merchants retain little hope that the Government will participate in the Panama-Pacific Exposition. They are particularly irritated by the suggestion of the Minister of Public Works, O. Trnka, that the manufacturers should first raise a fund of $40,000, when perhaps the Government might supplement the amount. They regard this as petty bargaining, unworthy of a Minister of a great monarchy.

It is probable that some of the manufacturers will ultimately decide to send exhibits to San Francisco, even if they have not the support of the Government. Much surprise is felt at the change in the attitude of the Ministers, who a few weeks ago appeared to be favorable to participation, but are now raising all sorts of objections, as though they have been influenced by the action of the German and British Governments.

GERMANS DISCOVER A 'MARRIAGE CRISIS'

Alarmed by the Great Increase in the Number of Divorces in Recent Years.

MARRIAGES ARE DECREASING

Ninety-six Divorces to 100,000 Persons in Berlin in 1911—62 Per 100,000 in 1901-1904.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

BERLIN, Nov. 20.—Germany, which for some time past has been expressing alarm at the falling birth rate, has discovered a new sign of social decadence. It is a "marriage crisis."

The latest statistics show an extraordinary rise in the number of divorces obtained in Germany. For instance, there were 15,780 divorces in 1911, or 24 per 100,000 inhabitants, against 12,180, or 20 per 100,000, in 1906. It is believed that when the next set of statistics is published a further increase in the number will be reported.

The statistics relating to Berlin are even more remarkable, showing an average of 96 per 100,000 in 1911, against 62 per 100,000 for the period 1901 to 1904.

What makes the "marriage crisis" all the worse is that, while the number of divorces is rapidly increasing, the number of marriages is decreasing. The number of marriages per 100,000 inhabitants in 1906 was 8,200; in 1911, 7,800.

ASKS THE LOUISE AS RELIC.

Paris Figaro Wants France to Have Boat That Traversed Canal.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

PARIS, Nov. 20.—The little steamboat Louise, which made the first passage of the Panama Canal, is a relic of the French enterprise and is associated with historic recollections, wherefore the Figaro this morning proposes a public subscription to enable the French authorities to purchase her from the United States and keep her as a souvenir.

The boat was sent to Panama more than twenty-five years ago and was intended to be used as a tug. On Feb. 28, 1886, the Louise conveyed Ferdinand de Lesseps, his son, and a delegation of members of the Chamber of Commerce to the mouth of the Rio Grande. The spot where she anchored is near the point where the works for the port of Balboa have just been begun. The arrival of the Louise was hailed by an army of black laborers.

She returned to Panama and for years was the regular boat used by the agents of the French company in crossing the bay. When the disaster to the French enterprise came the Louise was temporarily abandoned. Years passed before work on the canal was resumed, then, with the rest of the French material, the vessel became the property of the United States Government.

The Louise, says The Figaro, ought henceforth to be sacred to Frenchmen, and she deserves a place of honor in a French port on her coming retirement.

Rockhill Takes Leave of Sultan.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Nov. 20.—The retiring American Ambassador, W. W. Rockhill, was received in farewell audience by the Sultan to-day. To-morrow a reception will be given to him by the Americans here, and he will leave Constantinople on Monday. His successor, Henry Morganthau, is expected next Tuesday.

WAITED IN VAIN FOR GHOST

But Mgr. Benson Believes In Faith Healing and Other Phenomena.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, Nov. 20.—As an experimenter in psychical research Mgr. Robert Hugh Benson, a son of the late Archbishop of Canterbury, who was converted to Catholicism ten years ago, related some curious personal experiences to members of the City Temple Literary Society to-day.

Mgr. Benson observed that he had spent three nights in "the worst haunted house in England" without any result. He could claim to possess a ghost in the house he now inhabited, but had never seen it. He used to practice hypnotism twenty years ago. Under the direction of his uncle, Prof. Henry Sedgwick, the society's first President, he hypnotized two lads, 17 and 18 years old.

Mgr. Benson described how these boys by suggestion were made to see a circus in a glass of water and also a cow climbing a church steeple.

Mgr. Benson proceeded to relate how at a country house where he was staying a newly wedded wife was found to be an extraordinarily good recipient of thought. It was decided that she should be willed to come into the middle of the company and take off her shoes, but she had an overmastering modesty, and her practical faculty compromised the matter with her sub-conscious self by taking off her husband's shoe.

On the subject of faith healing the lecturer declared that miracles still happened. He himself saw no fewer than seven one afternoon at Lourdes. "At one of the grottoes at Lourdes," he said, "we have healed a broken leg instantaneously. I hold that greater powers are involved than belong to the human personality. I hold that the supernatural power of God produces these cures, and that that power is drawn out by the touch of faith."

AUSTRIA PARTLY RELENTS.

Canadian Pacific May Resume, but Emigration Business Is Barred.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

VIENNA, Nov. 20.—The Austrian Government has informed the Canadian Pacific Company that the business of the company in Austria other than immigration business may be resumed. The authorities at the same time have agreed to the appointment of a new general representative of the company in the person of Herr Velt, who was for some time an Austro-Hungarian Consul in the United States.

The Canadian Pacific Company is therefore now at liberty to resume freight, first and second class passenger, and observation-car business, which was suspended a few days after Mr. Altman's arrest, and to reopen its offices in Vienna and Trieste.

With regard to the other agencies of the company in Austria, special permission will be required before they can be reopened.

witness gave a different version of the delivery of the tickets to Richard J. Hartman of Tyson & Co. and of his ride in a taxicab with Mr. Hartman to the Metropolitan Trust Company.

The relations of the Metropolitan Opera Company to the ticket agencies in general, and with Tyson & Co. in particular, were explained to the court by John Brown, Controller of the Opera Company. Mr. Brown denied that the ticket agencies were the authorized agents of the Metropolitan Opera Company. He explained that their services cost the Opera Company something like $30,000 a year. Asked what was the value of the seats allotted by the Metropolitan Opera Company to all the ticket agencies, Mr. Brown said approximately $400,000. At the box office of the Metropolitan Opera House he said that there were only 120 or 150 orchestra seats out of 1,028 seats available every night to the public. He said that the agencies were allowed a commission of about 10 per cent. on the price of the orchestra seats.

R. W. K. Anderson, Assistant Treasurer of the Metropolitan Trust Company, was asked about the delivery of the opera tickets which the trust company made through its temporary box office in the Hotel Manhattan, of which Mr. Anderson had charge. Mr. Anderson was unable to say when he knew first that the tickets pledged as collateral on the loan had been paid for by subscribers.

When Vice President Chew was called as a witness, Assistant District Attorney Train submitted for his identification a number of letters alleged to have been written by Tyson & Co. before and after the time when the ticket agency made arrangements for opening an account with the Metropolitan Trust Company. One of these letters, dated Sept. 15, contained a request for a loan of $40,000, which Mr. Chew said was not granted. Another letter, of Oct. 20, referred to the same subject, and another letter, of Oct. 25, dealt with the same matter. Mr. Chew identified a note made Sept. 13 and payable Nov. 3.

"Before the note was signed, had any money been given to Tyson & Co.?" asked Mr. Train.

"No," said Mr. Chew; "it's credit was placed on the books."

"The tickets were there when the note was signed?".

"Absolutely."

"Were any arrangements made by you personally as to how this loan should be paid off?"

"I first had knowledge that $40,000 was paid on account of the note and that Mr. Hartman had asked that collateral be released. A certain part of the collateral was withdrawn on the request of Mr. Hartman."

"How was it selected?"

"It was selected by Mr. Hartman."

At the request of Assistant District Attorney Train, Mr. Chew told of the circumstances as he knew them under which Mr. Hartman went to the Metropolitan Trust Company for a loan.

Negotiations for Tyson Loan.

"It went back about a year ago," said Mr. Chew. "Mr. Hartman first came to our office and said he was a friend of Gen. Ives, formerly President of the Metropolitan Trust Company. When he came back a second time, about a year later, I remembered him, and finally he made the proposal on which he obtained the loan."

The receipt of the Metropolitan Opera Company, with the recapitulation of the tickets allotted to Tyson & Co., was identified by Earle Lewis, Treasurer of the Metropolitan Opera Company, who was recalled as a witness after the examination of Mr. Chew.

Then Mr. Train said: "Now I understand that you have somewhat refreshed your recollection as to the facts connected with the delivery of the tickets to Tyson & Co., and if you wish to correct your statement of yesterday you are at liberty to do so now before leaving the stand."

Mr. Lewis, who had testified that he had asked Mr. Hartman "merely in a joking way" if he was going to use the tickets as collateral, when he was in a taxicab with Mr. Hartman on the way to the Metropolitan Trust Company, gave this version of the delivery of and payment for the tickets:

"Mr. Hartman came to the Metropolitan Opera House and gave me a check for $100,000 balance on the $153,000 allotment of tickets which I delivered to him through our porter. I started out of the box office, when Mr. Hartman, who was passing through our office, asked me where I was going. I said, 'To the Metropolitan Trust Company,' and he invited me to go in the taxicab with him. I went to get the check certified."

"When did you ask Mr. Hartman if he was going to use the tickets as security for a loan?"

"I remember now; it was after we left the trust company."

"When did you get the impression that the tickets were going to be put in the safety deposit vaults?"

"Going down in the taxi."

John Brown, Controller of the Metropolitan Opera Company, said that he had no knowledge of any arrangements with Tyson & Co. for the sale of subscription seats. When he became Controller about three years ago, he said, he found that the so-called hotel ticket agencies had subscribed each year for a certain allotment of seats which they renewed. The agencies paid formerly one-third on the delivery of the tickets and were required to pay the other two-thirds due within thirty days. Metropolitan opera tickets were allotted to Tyson & Co., Tyson Company, Fred Ruiman, and the McBride and Miller agencies, he said.

"Were the terms under which the agencies took the seats the same for each one?"

"Absolutely," the witness replied.

Mr. Brown said that the old arrangement was discontinued because some of the men at the head of the agencies had died, and the Metropolitan Opera Company, doubting that the tickets were issued on sufficient security, decided to demand cash payment for the allotments. He said that Mr. Hartman was notified last June that he would have to pay cash for his allotment of tickets.

"Had Tyson & Co. acted as authorized agents for the Metropolitan Opera Company up to that time?"

"I had never regarded them as acting for the Metropolitan Opera Company," Mr. Brown said.

"Did you formerly allow each agent 10 per cent. of the box office price?"

"Only on the orchestra seats."

"How much did the allotments of tickets made to all the agencies amount to each year?"

"I think it amounted to about $400,000."

"And that is about the same amount for each year?"

"It has never changed to my knowledge."

"And what reduction has the Metropolitan Opera Company made to these agencies in the box office prices?"

"Reductions have been made only in the orchestra seats. The reduction was 50 cents on the box office price for each seat."

"And what has that amounted to?"

"About $25,000 or $30,000."

"And what advantage does the Metropolitan Opera Company receive from the services of these agents?"

"Nothing. It is an expense."

"Why, then, did you do business through these channels?"

"Because the public wanted it."

"But couldn't you have made additional arrangements at the Opera House or established branch offices to accommodate the public?"

"The general conditions that had existed in the years past made us feel under obligations to the ticket agencies."

Exhibit 4, a circular letter announcing the plans for the operatic season of 1912, on the letterhead of the Metropolitan Opera Company, and closing with the request that all communications be addressed to Tyson & Co., was shown to Mr. Brown. He said he had never seen such a circular, and that it was not authorized by the opera company. He said it was a "fac-simile" of a circular letter sent out by the Metropolitan Opera Company.

"Did the Metropolitan Opera Company encourage the public to go to Tyson & Co. for their seats?"

"Not to my knowledge," replied Mr. Brown.

The last witness was Assistant Treasurer Anderson of the Metropolitan Trust Company. At the end of his testimony Mr. Train rested the people's case, and then Magistrate Deuel announced that the proceedings would be adjourned until 2 o'clock this afternoon.

BRITISH CABINET DIVIDED.

Split Over the Ulster Question—Most Members for a Compromise.

LONDON, Friday, Nov. 21.—Premier Asquith's compromise offer to the Opposition leaders on the Home Rule bill is being delayed, according to The Daily Mail, by serious dissension within the Cabinet regarding what solution of the question shall be offered.

The paper says that Winston Spencer Churchill, the First Lord of the Admiralty; David Lloyd George, the Chancellor of the Exchequer; Sir Edward Grey, the Secretary for Foreign Affairs, and Viscount Haldane, the Lord High Chancellor, favor the exclusion of Ulster from the bill, while Augustine Birrell, the Chief Secretary for Ireland; Reginald McKenna, the Home Secretary, and Walter Runciman, the President of the Board of Agriculture, belong to what may be called the fighting party, which will resist the exclusion of Ulster, is willing to offer only small concessions, and is ready to impose home rule on Ulster by force of arms.

"It need only be said," adds The Daily Mail, "that the Ulster volunteer force now numbers 90,000 men, zealous to fanaticism, who are armed with 38,000 rifles and are obtaining more daily."

"Meanwhile Premier Asquith does not show his hand. He is waiting for developments."

CARROLL MEN SCORE IN PRIMARY TRIAL

Ex-Senator Harden Admits Relatives Registered from His Home in Brooklyn Contest.

WARNED NOT TO PROTEST

Witness Says Inspector Told Him He Would Be Killed if He Opposed Carroll's Methods.

At the close of yesterday's session of the trial of State Senator Daniel J. Carroll, Democratic leader of the Fourteenth Assembly District, Brooklyn; Lawyer Luke O'Reilly, and three others, before Supreme Court Justice Kelby on charges of conspiracy at the primary elections in March, 1912, the defendants were jubilant over the result of the heckling of ex-Senator Thomas C. Harden by their counsel, Robert H. Elder. Harden was the leader of the anti-Carroll faction at the primaries.

Mr. Harden was the chief witness for the prosecution. He gave his testimony willingly under the direct examination of Assistant District Attorney William P. Allen. He told of disturbances he witnessed at the polling place, 95 North Sixth Street, Greenpoint. Then Mr. Elder took him in hand for cross-examination. Ex-Senator Harden admitted that his brother, Michael G. Harden; Walter C. Palin, and a nephew, William F. Harden, Jr., all of whom had permanent residences outside his district, registered from his house in Metropolitan Avenue and voted at the primaries.

"He lives on Hewes Street, doesn't he?" was asked.

"Yes, but he has a residence at my house. He visited me there occasionally."

"Isn't it a fact that he registered from your house for political purposes, so as to give you one more vote?" asked Elder.

"No, it is not," came the positive answer.

The witness admitted that his nephew and Palin, who work for him, stayed at his house for the primary campaign.

Mr. Elder asked the witness about another brother, who lives in Flatbush, but who was supposed to have a voting residence at 129 Metropolitan Avenue, a house owned by ex-Senator Harden. This brother, it was brought out in the cross-examination, registered and voted from the Metropolitan Avenue address. The witness denied that this brother registered and voted in the Fourteenth Assembly District to help him in his fight against Senator Carroll.

Senator Harden on direct examination asserted that when he protested against the disorder at the primaries Michael Rosenthal, one of the Election Inspectors, said:

"For heaven's sake, Mr. Harden, don't say anything or you will get killed."

While several witnesses for the prosecution were standing in Livingston Street outside the Court House yesterday afternoon two of them were knocked down by an automobile which ran up on the sidewalk to avoid a collision with a trolley car. George Morris of 55 Metropolitan Avenue was injured seriously. The wheels of the automobile passed over him and he was removed to the Long Island College Hospital. Charles Rowan of 141 North Third Street, the other person knocked down by the auto, was not hurt.

SALE OF NAPOLEONANA.

A Mezzotint by C. Turner Brings Best Price at Auction.

Prints of the battles of Napoleon and events of his life and portraits of his Marshals and Generals, his Cabinet, adversaries, and celebrities of his reign were dispersed yesterday afternoon and evening in the William T. Latta sale at the Anderson Auction Company's rooms. The highest price was $62.50, paid by Joseph F. Sabin for a rare mezzotint by C. Turner, after Masquerier, entitled "Bonaparte Reviewing the Consular Guard." This was published in London in 1802 by the artist, Turner. William Patten paid $20 for "Napoleon Signing the Concordat," by Bernardi; "Napoleon Inducing Pius VII. to Sign the Concordat," by Robinson, after Wilkie, and a lithograph by C. Motte, after Champion, entitled "Concordat Signé Avec le Legat du Pape."

The grand total for Part II. thus far is $10,588. The final two sessions of this part will be held to-day.

A letter of Napoleon II., King of Rome, only son of Napoleon Bonaparte and Marie Louise, was bought for $15.50 by Charles Scribner's Sons at the Warren C. Crane sale in the American Art Galleries last evening. The letter is dated July 29, 1829, and expresses the writer's pleasure at hearing that the waters of Aix-la-Chapelle are of so much benefit to his mother. The unusual signature is "Nap," in imitation of his illustrious father, who signed frequently in this manner after the year 1806.

The grand total thus far is $9,238. Two sessions to-day will bring the sale to an end.

BURY BOMB IN A LOT.

Police Catch Three Men After Black Hand Warning.

The policemen of the platoon which left the Parkville Station in Brooklyn at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon were instructed by the Lieutenant to watch for men of the Black Hand type, as several threatening letters had been received recently by Michaele Palone, a coal dealer at 556 Gravsend Avenue.

Two hours later Policeman Burboneck saw three men who aroused his suspicions. Burboneck followed them and when he came to the posts of Policeman Flood and Policeman Endress they joined him.

The policemen saw the three men walk into a vacant lot between Thirteenth and Fourteenth Avenues, near Thirty-ninth Street. Burboneck crawled close enough to watch them. One of the men scooped a hole in the dirt with his hands, placed some object in it, and then laid a board broken from a crate in a position to indicate where the article had been buried.

When the three men left the lot the two other policemen continued to follow them, while Burboneck went to the spot where the hole had been scooped. There he uncovered a bomb, consisting of three sticks of dynamite wrapped with twine and an eight-inch fuse attached.

Burboneck figured that the three men would return. He again covered the bomb and went into hiding. Soon the suspected men returned and, digging up the bomb, started away with it. The other two policemen, who had followed them, were not far away. To these policemen Burboneck gave a signal, and at the right moment the three policemen attacked the strangers.

The three men were overpowered and taken to the Parkville station.

They described themselves as Giuseppe Lomangino, 165 First Avenue, Manhattan; John Colvitto, 176 Lafayette Street, Manhattan, and Sardino Camillio of 299 East Eleventh Street, Manhattan. Palone, who had received the threatening letters, identified Lomangino and Colvitto as two men who had tried to buy his business.

The letters received by Palone demanded $1,000 and threatened his death and the dynamiting of his home if he did not deliver the money on Brooklyn Bridge to a man who came up to him and said, "I am Giuseppe."

CLEARS SUBMARINE MUDDLE

Daniels Forfeits Two Lake Contracts and Extends Others.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.—An adjustment of the default of the Lake Torpedo Boat Company has been arranged by which the contracts for the two boats being built at Bridgeport have been declared forfeited, and the Government will proceed to finish them.

The Lake company has contracts with the Navy Department for five submarine vessels: G-2, 90 per cent. completed; G-3, 74 per cent. completed, and new contracts for submarines L-5, L-6, and L-7.

The company notified Secretary Daniels that "owing to the difficulties attendant upon borrowing money" it could not continue its work on the G-2 and G-3.

Secretary Daniels declared the contracts on G-2 and G-3 forfeited, and issued the necessary instructions to the inspector of machinery and the superintending constructor at the Bridgeport works to proceed with the work on G-2 and G-3, so as to permit these vessels to be taken to the Navy Yard, New York, where all work upon them would be completed at the expense of the Lake company.

Mr. Daniels also informed the company that the contracts for submarines L-5, L-6, and L-7 would not be declared forfeited at present, but that the time limit would be extended so the work could proceed after the contemplated reorganization of the company.

Resolved, That the Maritime Section of the Navy League of the United States, organized for the purpose of collecting and distributing accurate information about the navy and its needs, considers this an appropriate time to call the attention of all patriotic citizens to the fact that for several years last past the building programme adopted by the General Board of the navy (after due consideration of the nation's requirements at home and abroad) has been curtailed until the United States has lost the place among the nations which its responsibilities demand it to take, in spite of the recommendations of successive Presidents and Secretaries of the Navy, and therefore urges upon the President and the Congress the prime importance at this time of authorizing the construction of four new battleships of the first class.

Cloth Spongers' Strike Threatens the Garment Industry.

The strike of the cloth examiners and spongers, which began on Monday, caused a number of garment workers to be thrown out of work yesterday for lack of cloth which had undergone the sponging process. The examiners also were needed.

A meeting of representatives of the firms affected by the strike was held yesterday at the Hotel St. Denis. A committee was appointed to confer with the strikers.

It was said that windows in the shops of Kahn & Kaempel, 118 West Twenty-second Street; the Globe Sponging Works, 43 West Sixteenth Street; B. S. Moss, 12 East Twelfth Street, and the L. & L. Cloth Examiners, 108 West Eleventh Street, were broken yesterday by missiles which it was thought had been thrown by strikers. Samuel Stone, business agent of the union, yesterday denied that the strikers had broken the windows.

The strike of the spongers, according to the officers of the Cloth Spongers and Examiners' Union, will stop all garment making and if it lasts a week longer make 150,000 garment workers idle. A general sympathy strike of garment workers also is threatened. Four of the cloth sponging firms reported that their firemen and engineers had struck to prevent the employment of non-union spongers.

Michael Brayer, President of the Employers' Association, said last evening: "The leaders of the strike took advantage of a busy time to strike. We offered some concessions, but their demands were prohibitory. They want increases in wages of from $1 to $3 a week, an eight-hour workday, a Saturday half-holiday, and payment for legal holidays. Employers could not grant these demands and remain in business."

FUND GETS $186,369 ON ITS RECORD DAY

Women's Committee Carries Off the Honors with Subscriptions of $73,591.

GRAND TOTAL $2,849,380

Christian Associations Receive $25,000 from Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Archbold—Students in Campaign.

When the workers in the campaign to raise $4,000,000 for the Y. M. C. A.-Y. W. C. A. building fund gathered for luncheon yesterday at the headquarters at 25 Broad Street they were aroused to great enthusiasm by the announcement that new subscriptions of $186,369 had been received.

It was the record day of the campaign. The previous high-water mark was made on Monday, when contributions of $172,291 were reported. The subscriptions reported on Monday were made between Friday and Monday, while yesterday's subscriptions were the result of only twenty-four hours' work.

George W. Perkins, Chairman of the Executive Committee, smiled broadly when he said:

"When I announced yesterday that we could get $50,000 by raising $100,000 there wasn't a cheer. Well, we got it, and we can get more. The hardest thing we have had to do was to get this amount between $2,500,000 and $3,000,000. We are well on the way to $3,000,000. We can get it by to-morrow with the same amount of work we put forth to-day. Let us make that our slogan."

The subscriptions of yesterday raised the grand total to date to $2,849,380, and the hands of the clocks in various parts of the city were sent toward 12 o'clock. The Women's Committee led all others, with gifts amounting to $73,591, and the Executive Committee was second, with $50,000, while Mrs. Francis Louis Slade had the pleasure of beating her husband by nearly $46,000.

Several large gifts were announced yesterday. John D. Archbold sent this letter, which was read by Mr. Perkins:

Mr. Dear Mr. Perkins: I have your favor of yesterday and have talked the matter over fully with Mrs. Archbold. We feel alike as to the magnificent character of the proposition on which you are working, and beg to congratulate you and your associates on the progress thus far made, and wish for you the fullest measure of success in the accomplishment of the desired amount. We feel that you are doing a great service to the community.

You may put us down, Mr. and Mrs. John D. Archbold, for $25,000, of which my subscription will be $20,000 and Mrs. Archbold's $5,000.

I desire that our subscription should be credited through Team 24, of which Mrs. Carroll J. Post, Jr., of 151 West Fifty-seventh Street is a member, and through whose intelligent and zealous presentation our interest has been increased in this matter.

A contribution that came as a surprise to the campaign leaders, because it was entirely unsolicited, was one of $25,000 from Mrs. John D. Rockefeller, Jr. Mrs. Rockefeller made her gift through the Harlem Women's Committee.

Cleveland H. Dodge added $25,000 to the $250,000 he had subscribed previously. Mr. Perkins added $25,000 to the $50,000 subscribed by himself and his wife. The last amount subscribed is to be employed in helping to carry out the plan to establish a boarding house for the Y. W. C. A.

Mrs. Henry M. Flagler gave $10,000, and there was an anonymous gift of $5,000 by the same person who recently contributed $15,000 in memory of Robert R. MacBurney, the late secretary of the Twenty-third Street branch. The $5,000 gift yesterday was also in his memory. Other gifts of $1,000 or more were:

Dr. John H. Finley, retiring President of the College of the City of New York, and Robert Adamson, Secretary of Mayor Kline, were the guests of honor at the luncheon yesterday. Both praised the work and aims of the two associations and Mr. Adamson said that if he had the Y. W.-Y. M. C. A. workers with him while raising the Fusion campaign fund it would have been collected in one day without violating the eight-hour law.

A one-day campaign in aid of the cause was begun at 9 o'clock yesterday at the College of the City of New York and will end at 9 o'clock this morning. By that time it is expected that $500 will have been subscribed by the students. Sixty canvassers scoured the campus yesterday. A seven-foot thermometer was put up in the Great Hall which registered $400 at 9 o'clock last night, most of which was in small contributions.

TIMES FINDS MISSING BOY.

Butts Thought Teachers Disliked Him and Had Run Away.

Harry Butts, son of Stephen H. Butts, owner of the barber shop in the St. Regis, who disappeared from in front of the Public School at Eighty-ninth Street and Amsterdam Avenue on the morning of Nov. 7, is back at home. Harry simply had run away, and it was through the little story of his disappearance published in THE NEW YORK TIMES on Tuesday that he was found and brought back. Distracted over his disappearance the boy's parents had asked THE TIMES to aid in the search.

A workman in a tailor's shop in Newark read the story in THE TIMES and was impressed by the fact that the appearance of a boy who had come to work in the place only a week before tallied with the description of the missing lad. He cut out the story and laid it on the desk of the proprietor, where the latter found it on Wednesday morning. After reading it and asking the boy some questions, he telephoned to Mr. Butts. The latter immediately notified his wife, and she went over to Newark and found her son.

According to the story told by the boy, he had fallen out with a teacher who had been in school, and felt that he was in disfavor. He decided, after getting a bad report on the day before he disappeared, to leave home and make his own living. He walked from the school to the nearest ferry house, crossed to New Jersey, and by successive automobilists was carried as far as Montclair, where he found a home with the last man who had given him a ride. Seeing an advertisement that a boy was wanted in the Newark tailor shop, he applied for the job on Tuesday and got it. His employer gave such good reports of his work that his parents decided not to punish the lad, and he will be sent to a private school.

ALIENISTS TO SEE SCHMIDT.

Counsel Asks Court for a Commission to Test Murderer's Sanity.

Terence McManus, counsel for Hans Schmidt, the murderer of Ann Aumuller, applied yesterday to Judge Foster in the Court of General Sessions for the appointment of two alienists to examine Schmidt's mental condition. No decision was given on the request, but Judge Foster will probably grant it.

In opposing Mr. McManus' motion Assistant District Attorney Delahanty, pointed out that Schmidt was perfectly able to confer with counsel and had told Alphonse G. Koelble, his attorney of record, and the Coroner all the details of the killing of the girl. Furthermore, he said four alienists for the State had already reported Schmidt sane.

Judge Foster said that the question of Schmidt's sanity would take only a short time for a commission to decide, and its findings, together with the report of the four State's alienists, could then be submitted to a special jury.

"But I want to warn you," said Judge Foster to Mr. McManus, "that if the issue of the defendant's sanity is decided before a special jury, you will be prevented from raising it during the trial of the defendant for murder."

BARNARD OPERA BENEFIT.

Metropolitan Performance on Jan. 3 for College Building Fund.

A gala performance of "Madama Butterfly" for the benefit of the Quarter Century Building Fund of Barnard College will be given on Jan. 3 at the Metropolitan Opera House. Geraldine Farrar will sing Butterfly.

Loyal Barnardites have been engaged for many months in the task of raising $2,000,000 to celebrate their Alma Mater's twenty-fifth birthday in 1914. The money is needed for new buildings, as the present quarters are very much overcrowded.

The end of the Christmas holidays was chosen for the benefit performance, in order that Barnard might profit by the Yuletide generosity. Already many alumnae are planning to give one another tickets to the performance for Christmas, and a plea sent out by the committee urges all Barnardites to turn over any checks they may receive as gifts to the Building Fund.

Miss Mabel Parsons is Chairman of the Benefit Committee, and Mrs. Ogden Mills heads the Patroness Committee. Associated with them are Mrs. George McAneny, Mrs. J. E. Corrigan, Mrs. Henry Wise Miller, Mrs. Alfred Hess, Mrs. Eugene Meyer, Jr., Miss Mary L. Eaton, Mrs. Robert Stevenson, Mrs. Mary S. Pullman, Miss Josephine Paddock, Miss Alice G. Chase, Miss Virginia Gildersleeve, Dean of Barnard College, and Mrs. Sigmund Pollitzer, President of the Associate Alumnae. Many of the first and second tier boxes will be occupied by the Trustees of the college and prominent alumnae.

HETCH HETCHY MEETING.

Protest Against Bill to be Voiced To-night at Natural History Museum

A series of colored views of the Yosemite and Hetch Hetchy Valleys will be shown at the public meeting to be held to-night at the American Museum of Natural History to protest against the Hetch Hetchy bill, now pending in the United States Senate. The meeting will be held under the auspices of the newly-organized National Committee for the Yosemite National Park, and the American Scenic and Historic Preservation Society, the New York Zoological Society and the Museum of Natural History.

The National Committee already comprises more than 300 representative men and women from all parts of the country and is constantly adding to its number. Robert Underwood Johnson, Chairman of the committee, will preside, and the various aspects of the question will be presented in addresses.

The pending bill, which has passed the House of Representatives, grants to San Francisco rights and franchises in the National Park relating to water for domestic uses and for hydro-electric power. The meeting is public.

To Test Mrs. Claussen's Sanity.

Judge Malone in the Court of General Sessions ruled yesterday that Mrs. Ida Claussen, who is under indictment for writing a threatening letter to Charles Strauss, President of the Board of Water Supply, should have her sanity tested by a jury. Dec. 1 was the date set for these proceedings.

JUMPERS AND PONIES DELIGHT HORSE SHOW THRONGS IN GARDEN

ENGLAND FIRST OVER THE JUMPS

British Army Officers Capture International Trophy at the Horse Show.

MOORE WINS WITH FOURS

Thrills Furnish Excitement for Record Crowd at Madison Square Garden.

After a dozen unsuccessful attempts, England's first victory at the Horse Show at Madison Square Garden was in the jumping class for two officers of the same nationality. Picked men and horses of all countries represented at the exhibition competed in this spectacular and thrilling event, which was followed with close interest and keen excitement by the biggest crowd of the week. Major M. F. McTaggart of the Fifth Lancers and Col. P. A. Kenna rode Surprise and Harmony to the fore, winning the cups given by I. J. H. Muurling. Riding in their uniforms, the officers presented a pretty spectacle and displayed splendid horsemanship. The Belgians, Capt. Victor Nyssens and Lieut. le Comte Albert d'Ouetremont, on La Croquette and Sunrise, were second, and two pairs of the Canadian officers' chargers were third and fourth, respectively.

No criticism is justified against the non-success of the American officers in the International jumping contests. The truth is that the War Department will not give the right sort of mounts to them, which is contrary to the custom in other countries, the French Government, for instance, having paid $30,000 for Amazone. In the classes in which they have been well mounted, as in the international ones for military chargers, the American entries have swept the boards.

Tidal waves are highest on the fifth billow, say the sharps of the Weather Bureau, and the day and evening attendance at the Garden, by a coincidence, reached high-water mark yesterday—the fifth of the annual fixture. Hearty applause, the unrestrained, floor-stamping, vociferous sort, marked the night session, and especially when the officers were sending their jumpers at the obstacles two abreast, and when the Corinthians, which means amateur rider members of a hunt club, were risking their limbs and the possible cutting off of their mundane career in the last class of all.

The veteran driver, J. J. Manning, was capsized while speeding along Frederic J. Davis's snappy going mare Elkin Belle. Buggies and road wagons need nearly as much room in turning as a team and drag, for they have no cut-unders, and the mishap to Mr. Manning has often occurred in roadster classes, and one time years ago, to the consternation of the throng, the great driver of racing trotters, Ed Geers, had such an upset while negotiating a turn at speed in the Garden ring. Mr. Manning held on to the reins, the first aid to the victim of such a turnover; the fine mare made no attempt to run away, and, when the vehicle had been lifted to an even keel, Mr. Manning resumed his place in the whirl of equipages around the oval. Despite his pluck and coolness, Mr. Manning was not in the ribbons. Ruby, Teneriffe, Frances Bain, and Edward Kearney, Jr.'s, Austral Maid was the placing. Those without the ribbons, besides Elkin Belle, included Aspiration, Miss Loula Long driving, and her second string, Expectation.

Ponies in the Ring.

In the class for Shetland ponies under saddle the little girls and boys, with shortened stirrups, sent their Newfoundland or St. Bernard sized nags along at a merry clip. Each rode with the self-possession and aplomb of a Danny Maher winning the English Derby. The winner, for the serenity of children enjoying such a competition must at length be disturbed by the drastic judges, proved to be tiny Miss M. West, who rode the pony Pohogonot Girl, owned down Piping Rock way by Miss Dorothy M. Flynn. Little Miss Helen Shumacher, who rode John McE. Bowman's Sweet Briar, was placed second. She had never been defeated before on Sweet Briar, and when the red ribbon was affixed to Sweet Briar's bridle instead of the coveted blue she received the award with tears instead of dimples and smiles.

Everything was jollity again, an hour or so later, when the children reappeared in another Shetland pony class, this time driving them to single traps. "Single traps" means one pony to each rig; really, three of the traps held two occupants, seemingly six-year-olds so small were they, and in one a groom sat behind to drive, letting the children make believe they were doing it, each one holding one rein with its two chubby hands. The traps were small enough to have been brought from toyland. There were square wickerwork carts, to suggest a laundry hamper; tiny gigs and four-wheelers. "Pitty-pat and Tippytoes," whom Eugene Field knew, had their little sisters and brothers in this class. Actually, there should have been a division of the class, so that the kiddies might have had a competition of their own. But as it was the judges had to be inexorable and to stand out for "type." Besides, said one of them, who must have been a bachelor or else the father of a large family, "a show ring is not a nursery."

Thus the blue went to the rattling good Shetland King Larigo, guided by a big boy with the airs of a professional whip. No. 2 was Miss Dora Voigt's Arnold with a grown man as driver. Miss Dora was third with her cute and bushy sorrel Senator Jackson and Miss Constance Vauclain fourth, driving an exceedingly pretty piebald, Angus.

In an earlier class Miss Constance, who is under 15, won with her roan ponies Sequel and Sequence from two of Judge Moore's crack imported ponies driven by his professional whip, George Chipchase. This little girl has the command of the reins equal to any amateur or professional whip.

American Officers Ride.

Lieut. Shepherd had the pleasure of gaining the permanent possession of the Beresford Cup, the gift of Col. Lord Decies, in the jumping contest limited to United States Army officers. This dashing Centaur of the Third Field Artillery won last year on his chestnut gelding Marshall Ney and he repeated the feat yesterday, so retaining the trophy for good and all.

Capt. W. T. Rodden's Sarah Moore and Billy G. claimed for Canada the blue ribbon in the class in which the horses had to take the jumps in pairs and abreast. Canada was second, too, with Capt. J. W. Sifton's Wasp and Lieut. Clifford Sifton's Elmhurst. Although all in the Sifton family, the pairs should be "in the same ownership." But neither the American Glen Riddle team placed third, nor the French Government team to be fourth lodged an objection.

Carrying qualities, Marie Louise, the winner of the red rosette is a typical bred Kentucky saddler, although many of the spectators and rail experts favored Walker H. Hanley's bay gelding Sir. Evelyn, a slashing specimen of the American saddle horse type, and was well ridden by J. H. Collins. Mr. Hanley, who is a new-comer, opened the show with several notable victories, but during the last two days he has been unfortunate in the placing of his horses.

Judge Moore demonstrated his driving skill once more in the class for park teams and appointments, amateurs to drive, the prize being Jay F. Carlisle's cup. The Judge drove the bays, Allan-a-Dale, Wallenstein, Robin Hood and Burgomaster. The teams he beat were Felix M. Warburg's, H. H. Salmon the whip, and the entry of Miss E. Vlau of Montreal, driven by Howard Brown. Judge Moore won this cup when it was last in competition, in 1910, and it became his own by the victory.

Miss Vlau, who has made the long journey to the show for the first year, scored an impressive victory in the competition for the Waldorf-Astoria cup, the gift of George C. Boldt, for American-bred hackneys or halfbred hackneys, in single harness. There were six entries, but Miss Vlau's halfbred Earl Grey, a bay gelding handled very cleverly by the Canadian driver A. Yeager, had the looks and action of the lot and was awarded the cup. The hackney Dark Blue, a rangy chestnut, entered by Willeden Farm of Devon, Penn., was placed reserve.

Mrs. John Gerken, after being an absentee from the show for some years, has reappeared to exhibit the chestnut mare Margaret Tate, a 16-hand six-year-old, with fine manners. Mrs. Gerken won the blue from a large field last night in the class for saddle horses over 15.2 hands. The call of the show ring may not be denied.

Stotesbury's Roadsters Fancied.

E. T. Stotesbury of Philadelphia appears to have matters all his own way in the roadster classes. His stable has had a continued run of successes, due particularly to the bay mare Ruby, which won over an unusually strong aggregation of single roadsters. Not only did Ruby maintain her reputation for speed and general appearance, the appointments which counted 40 per cent. in the judging, were perfect. Tenneriffe, a New York horse owned and driven by W. M. V. Hoffman, made an excellent showing, but failed to reach Ruby's standard.

The French saddle horse judge, Commandant Feline, has admitted the standard of the American saddler by selecting Proud Prince as the winner for horses over 15.2 hands. Harry J. Graham's well-mannered black gelding is a splendid type of horse with plenty of body and substance.

Felicitations were the order of the day among the foreign officers at the show, said Capt. Paul Rodzenko of Russia. "I only brought two horses, and considering the long journey, I think myself fortunate to have won three ribbons. Next year there will be a Russian team here, of at least five officers and with an ample number of mounts. Now the road has been opened, Russia will do all it can to encourage the success of the National Horse Show."

The Russian horses will be shipped back in a couple of weeks. The English and French horses, with the exception of Cherie, will be shipped very soon. An acquaintance remarked to Col. P. A. Kenna, V. C., yesterday, "The British team was all shot to pieces, wasn't it, Colonel?"

"Yes, with horses that were cripples and men with only one leg, we couldn't do very much," was the reply. "We have had a good time and just as much fun losing as we would have had by winning, because we were beaten by good horses and good men. Another year we may do better. It is all in the game. We have been delightfully entertained here and we want to see the New York show become a big international event."

SOCIETY WILTED BY HEAT.

Women in Heavy Brocades Envy Neighbors in Diaphanous Chiffons.

Mrs. Peter D. Martin, who was Miss Lily Oelrichs, was with Mrs. Alfred G. Vanderbilt in Box 13 at the Horse Show last night. Mrs. Vanderbilt was enveloped in an old rose velvet cloak with wide collar and deep cuffs of blue fox, and an immense hat of silver lace embroidered in gold thread, edged with brown fur. Mrs. Martin was in dull lilac chiffon over white with a black velvet hat.

Mrs. Edward B. McLean wore a silver white satin costume brocaded in moonlight blue and green with touches of palest lemon. She wore no hat nor coiffure ornament.

There were many new faces in the throng which filled the garden, both at the afternoon and evening session. The unusual warm weather made wraps and overcoats unbearable, and there were many women in the boxes who wore no hats, and who looked very comfortable in diaphanous chiffons, laces, and gauzes, while their neighbors witted under rich, heavy brocades. According to a prophet of the "clothes walk," it was the hottest day and night at any previous horse show. All the windows had to be opened, and several women were almost overcome by the heat.

The occupants of the boxes last night seemed to enjoy the fashions of the promenaders quite as much as the lookers-on, who would assemble in groups before a particular box, commenting on the gowns until they were shoved aside by the increasing crowd. One woman brought her poodle dog with her last night, and kept fanning it with a peacock fan. The English walking stick was carried by several modishly clad women. An emerald, about the size of a pigeon's egg, attracted much attention in one of the boxes which are rented for the night.

Young Society Beauties.

There was a bevy of young society beauties in the boxes. Miss Angelica Brown looked fetching in a black velvet and lace Watteau hat. Miss Miriam Harriman and Miss Mary Alexander appeared charming in simple white frocks. Near them sat Mrs. Hermann Oelrichs, who wore black net and lace over white chiffon, a small hat that was a solid mass of white aigrettes, and a diamond dog collar. Mrs. William Church Osborn was a visitor last night with Mr. Osborn and their son, Frederick Osborn. Miss Anna Sands, in taupe, dropped in for the afternoon performance, and there was a box party at the afternoon session which included Mrs. S. Stanwood Menken, Mrs. Arthur Carroll, and Mrs. von Juch Wellman.

Mr. and Mrs. E. Francis Hyde gave a box party in the afternoon for Miss Bessie Martin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. Howard Martin, whose engagement to Dr. Herbert Cornwell was recently announced. Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Ferris Simmons and Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Stuart were among the other members of the party. Miss Frances M. Ward and Miss Marjorie Cleveland were promenading with a party of young people.

In the Afternoon Throng.

Among others at the afternoon session were Mrs. Oakleigh Thorne, Mrs. G. Howard Davison, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Gallatin, Mrs. Charles G. Ayres, Mrs. James Starr, Jr., of Philadelphia, Mr. and Mrs. Rich Steers, Mrs. Birdseye Lewis, Mrs. Grenville Kane, Mrs. Carroll Winslow, Miss Georgiana H. Owen, Miss Audrey Osborn, and Miss Charlotte Lewis.

Mrs. J. Ellis Fisher, in Box 40 at the evening session, had as her guests Miss Frances Traver of Washington, D. C.; Miss Vieve Fisher, Richard Emmet, Frederick Dennis, and Gilbert Darlington. Mrs. Fisher wore violet, with a dull silver hat with gray plumes.

Billings to Breed New Trotting Type

C. K. G. Billings of New York, the owner of the champion trotter Uhlan, 1:58, and other famous champions of the Grand Circuit, has purchased from H. R. C. Watson of Edgeville Farm, Brandon, Vt., four highly bred Morgan mares with a view to developing a new and distinct type of American trotter. The Morgan mares will be crossed with Mr. Billings's famous trotting stallions as soon as they reach Mr. Billings's new stud farm on the James River, Virginia. The mares are Mink, 8 years old, by Bob Morgan, son of Ethan Allen; Bella, 9 years, by Knox-Morgan; Jessie Keeler, 9 years, by Claremont, grandson of Daniel Lambert; and Ara Gates, 5 years, by General Gates.

Mold for Cup Defender's Keel.

BRISTOL, R. I., Nov. 20.—Work on the mold for the lead keel of the Vanderbilt syndicate cup defense candidate had advanced far enough to-day to show that the keel will have a sharper outline than is usual in boats of her class. The mold is 22 feet on top and 13 feet on the bottom. It is 4 feet high forward. The greatest weight of the keel will be forward of the centre line.

BOSTON, Nov. 20.—The keel of the America's Cup defender candidate to be built for Alexander S. Cochran of New York at the yards of the George Lawley & Son Corporation, will be laid on New Year's Day. Work of assembling material for construction of the boat is going on in accordance with the plans of William Gardner of New York, the designer.

Emperor Sells Yacht Meteor.

BERLIN, Nov. 20.—The German Emperor to-day sold his schooner Meteor, with which he had so often been victorious in yacht races, to the Duke of Arenberg. A new schooner for the Emperor is being built by Max Oertz of Hamburg, and it was said when she was ordered that her success would have an important bearing on the question whether Germany would challenge for the America's Cup with a cutter designed by the same builder.

Limit Men Win Road Race.

Bronx Church House harriers held their weekly handicap road race of four miles last night over a course in the vicinity of Crotona Park, which was marked by a victory for the limit man, who finished one-two-three. Although E. Kiley, the back marker, tallied the fastest time of 25 minutes 25 seconds for the journey, he was unable to make any marked impression on the long start men. W. Burkhard, 5 minutes, who finished first in 27:40; F. Tumbler, 5 minutes, second in 28:40, and J. Monto, 5 minutes, third in 29:40. Others to finish were J. E. Wood, 1:30, in 26:15; E. Byrne, 0:45, 25:35; H. Canarea, 1:30, 26:45; E. Kiley, scratch, 25:25; George Soons, 0:15, 25:43; H. Gunther, 1:00, 27:35; M. Beaudeau, 2:15, 27:52; H. Earle, 1:00, 27:45; J. Narz, 5:00, 33:55.

INTERCOLLEGIATE RUN HERE

Harvard Team Coming for 6-Mile Race at Van Cortlandt Park.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 20.—Harvard's cross-country team left to-night for New York, hopeful of capturing the title in the fifteenth annual intercollegiate championship race to be held under the auspices of Columbia University next Saturday. Except for Capt. Boyd, who is slightly bothered by a weak knee, and MacLure, who is recovering from a cold, the team is in good shape. It is made up as follows: F. H. Blackman, R. St. B. Boyd, A. R. Boynton, H. G. MacLure, W. A. Peckham, (substitute;) C Southworth, E. P. Stone, and W. M. Tugman, Jr.

Coach Shrubb plans to give the men a try-out over the six-mile course in Van Cortlandt Park to-morrow.

Cornell Runners Selected.

Special to The New York Times.

ITHACA, N. Y., Nov. 20.—A Cornell cross-country team that is at least as strong as that which was nosed out by Harvard for the championship last year left for New York City to-night to take part in the intercollegiate cross-country race at Van Cortlandt Park on Saturday. If Potter, the fastest man on the team, were in shape to run, the Ithacans would have no doubt as to their winning the championship, but Potter's ankle, which went bad before the Harvard race, has not recovered, and he was left behind. With Potter out of it, Coach Moakley and the runners figure that they have a fighting chance against Harvard, the only team they fear in the championships. The Ithacans' chances depend almost entirely on whether Speiden and Fredericks, the two next fastest men to Hoffmire, run to form. Other members of the team are Cadiz, McGolrick, Burke, Inglehart, and Kinsley.

Athlete Kennedy Ill with Typhoid.

CHICAGO, Nov. 20.—William J. Kennedy, a member of the Illinois Athletic Club's squad and one of the foremost long-distance runners of the country, is seriously ill with typhoid at a hospital here, it was learned to-day.

A DELIGHTFUL BOOK OF TRAVEL
My Voyage in the U. S. Frigate "Congress"
1845-46
By Elizabeth D. Van Denburg

Realistic pictures of South American and Hawaiian life more than half a century ago. The day by day diary of a very bright girl while accompanying her parents on an eight months' voyage to Honolulu, her father, the Hon. Joel Turrill, having been appointed U. S. Consul General to the Sandwich Islands by President Polk.

The ship touched at the chief South American ports, and things as they then were and the incidents of the voyage are most entertainingly described. Illustrated. 8vo. Net $2.50.

A Person of Quality
By ASHTON HILLIERS
A unique novel. A competent critic says: "It somewhat resembles 'The Broad Highway,' but in my judgment excels that book. Notably in the manner in which it follows the development of Fanshawe's character as well as his fortunes; also there is a very pretty mystery to hold the reader—many well-drawn characters, and one of the tenderest love stories I have read for many a day."
Frontispiece in color.
12mo. Cloth, Net $1.25.

A Term of Silence
By FORREST HALSEY
Because a story deals with the tragic experiences in a man's life does not, of necessity, deprive the reader of all the interesting thrills he has accustomed himself to look for when he peruses a novel. Cases in point are "The Count of Monte Cristo" and "Les Miserables."
Prison life forms a large part of this story also, but there is a very dramatic presentation of all the incidents.
16mo. Cloth, Net $1.00.

The Third Act
By FRED JACKSON
The author is well known to the readers of the popular magazines, but this is his first novel in book form. He gives a brilliant picture of theatrical life as experienced by a young and ambitious playwright straight from the country, who makes an instant appeal to one of the leading actresses, and in turn falls a victim to her charms, which results in interesting complications.
Colored frontispiece.
12mo. Cloth, Net $1.00.

A Woman in Revolt
By ANNE LEE
This book tells the story of a woman who, as a type, may be said to be the last word in feminine evolution. A daring subject is handled in a daring way, but by none but the unintelligent or the prurient can its high purpose be misconstrued.
The social evil with its awful harvest of ruined lives has been approached from many sides by men; here the woman's side is presented and with exceptional force.
12mo. Cloth, Net $1.25.

Barks and Purrs By COLETTE WILLY
This is by the famous French author, Colette Willy, and consists of animated and witty dialogues between two pets in a Parisian household—a French bull and an Angora cat, in which the natures of Master and Mistress are skillfully reflected.
Deliciously satirical and thoroughly enjoyable.
Translated by Maire Kelly. About 100 marginal illustrations. 12mo. Cloth. Net $1.25.

The Fairy Minstrel of Glenmalure By EDMUND LEAMY
By the author of "The Golden Spears and Other Fairy Tales," which, in a few years, has reached such favor as to win the distinction of being regarded by librarians as a classic for both old and young.
Illustrated in color by Vera Casseau. Small 4to. Cloth, Net 75 cents.

Out of the North By HOWARD V. SUTHERLAND
A volume of Klondyke verse of rare beauty. A characteristic introduction by Joaquin Miller gives the stamp of approval of one who knows. Frontispiece. Narrow 12mo. Boards. Net 75 cents.

HARVARD AND YALE ELEVENS RESTING IN THE COUNTRY---BASEBALL---SWIMMING---BOXING

HARVARD TEAM IN COUNTRY FOR REST

Haughton's Eleven Goes to Vesper Club Until Saturday's Game with Yale.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 20.—At dusk to-night the Harvard 'Varsity football team had finished its work for the season and started on its way to the Vesper Country Club at Tyngsboro, Mass., to rest until a few hours before Saturday's game against Yale. In the drill on plays against the second team to-day the regulars were all in the line-up with the exception of Frank O'Brien, who, although he again twisted his leg, will be ready to start the game. Dana was in O'Brien's place at end, but Hitchcock and Bradlee both were back in their regular positions, and ran through the plays without a sign of lameness.

The 'Varsity work was done behind the secret practice fence, but shortly after 4 o'clock the gates were opened and it seemed as if every undergraduate in the college trooped into the stadium. The 'Varsity was cheered to the echo while it ran up and down the field a few times, the boys then rushing off to the locker building to make ready for their trip.

The undergraduates, however, got some action as the second team scrimmaged with the youngsters, songs and cheers ringing about their ears. The Harvard eleven is now in first-class condition, so the coaches say, for the coming battle.

The breaking training dinner of the second team was held to-night in Boston, and most of the 'Varsity coaches attended. Haughton, however, went with the regular team, as did "Ham" Corbett, Reggie Brown and Crawford Blagden.

Shortly after 6 o'clock to-night the Yale team arrived at Auburndale from New Haven, ten automobiles being furnished for them by old Yale men. It was one of the biggest squads that Yale ever has sent to a Harvard game. The Yale players looked as if they had recovered completely from their hard game against the Tigers, and the coaches say that they are fit and also that it has been possible to put on the work necessary between games to assure Yale of being able to present its best football in the Stadium. To-morrow the boys will remain near their hotel, but in the afternoon will have the Harvard Stadium all to themselves. The coaches who are at Auburndale with the team are Howard Jones, Frank Hinkey, Billy Bull, Ray Tomkins, and Douglas Bomeisler.

YALE'S BIG SEND-OFF.

1,500 Undergraduates March to Station to See Eleven Off.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 20.—The Yale football squad left here to-day for Massachusetts, and will play its last game against Harvard at Cambridge on Saturday. Fully 1,500 undergraduates formed in line at the dining hall. They marched behind a brass band, picked up the players in a special trolley car at Osborn Hall, and escorted them to the railroad station, where the undergraduates climbed on freight cars to form a shrieking, cheering section that shouted volleys for every player and coach on the squad and sang through the Yale repertoire of songs until the express train pulled out.

While the players went two vaudeville performers to entertain them at their quarters in Auburndale to-night and to-morrow night. The team has never before taken professional entertainers, but these were placed at the disposal of the squad by a Yale graduate.

Gradual improvement was noted in the cases of Dunn, Marting, and Carter, the bruised players, and Head Coach Jones said this evening that he expected all three to start Saturday's game, although Guernsey, Cooney, and Brann are being groomed for their places and will almost certainly get into part of the game.

The question of the weights of the players is not satisfactory. The warm wave has prevented the return to normal weight of several players who were worn down five or six pounds each by the Princeton game last Saturday.

Arrangements have been made for the players to visit the Harvard stadium to-morrow morning and to tour Boston's suburbs in automobiles to-morrow afternoon.

"HOBEY" BAKER PICKS YALE.

Princeton Captain Thinks Eli Team Is Better Than Harvard's.

Capt. "Hobey" Baker of Princeton, who had reason to become very well acquainted with both the Yale and Harvard football teams during the past couple of weeks, says that Yale has a better team than Harvard, which is quite the contrary to what Coach Percy Haughton thinks.

The Tiger leader, in speaking about Yale's chances against the Crimson to-morrow, says: "I consider the Yale team a much better balanced organization. Of course, as a whole, the Harvard backfield is superior to Yale's backs, but in Wilson, Yale has a better back than any of the Harvard men."

"In any event, the two teams should be well matched and will play a game which a field goal will decide," said Baker. "Judging the teams as we met them, the game should be extremely close. Yale has her kicks covered much better than Harvard, not only the ends but the whole line being down on the man with the ball. In addition, allowing for different weather conditions, I believe that Yale's kickers are better than any Harvard has. Their punts are long and high enough to let the ends cover them. On the defense the Yale line was much harder for the Princeton back field to pierce than the Harvard line. The gains on plunging were disappointing to us."

Penn In Long Scrimmage.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 20.—Forty-five minutes of hard scrimmage was given the University of Pennsylvania football squad this afternoon, the scrubs and regulars tackling each other as though a championship were at stake. Every man seemed to be battling for a position on the 'Varsity eleven that plays Cornell here on Thanksgiving Day. The workout resulted in a victory for the first string men by one touchdown. Russell was sent to left tackle on the 'Varsity team in to-day's practice, Carter going to the scrubs. Seelbach was at McCall's place at left end while the latter played centre. Marshall, who has played in all the games this season as quarter back, was at half back to-day, while Merrill pleased the coaches with the form he showed at quarter back.

The coaches are not satisfied with the work of the team as a unit and announced their intention to continue strenuous practice until two days before the final battle of the Red and Blue schedule with Cornell.

Williams and Colgate Captains.

Special to The New York Times.

WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass., Nov. 20.—Phillips M. Payson, 1916, of Portland, Me., was elected Captain of the Williams football team for the 1914 season at a meeting of the squad held in the gymnasium to-day. Payson has played a consistent game at right half back this season, and made an excellent showing on the eleven last year.

HAMILTON, N. Y., Nov. 20.—W. H. Swarthout, '15, of Geneva, N. Y., was elected Captain, and E. L. Parsons, '15, of Binghamton, N. Y., was elected manager of the Colgate football team to-day for next season. Swarthout played a star game this year at full back.

ARMY OF MEN TO RACE.

208 Cross-Country Runners Named for Intercollegiate Run.

The remarkable entry of 208 runners has been received by Harry Fisher of Columbia University for the annual intercollegiate cross-country championship race to-morrow, which is to be held for the first time over the Van Cortlandt Park course of six miles. Fourteen teams have been nominated, and it will be the first time in the history of the sport here that New Yorkers have been afforded a real opportunity to witness the efforts of the college lads in this the longest of the races for university men.

Yale, Colgate, Cornell, Dartmouth, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Princeton, Pennsylvania, College of the City of New York, Brown, Michigan, Penn State, Syracuse, Harvard, and Columbia are included in the list. The running of the various dual meets has left the outcome as to the probable winner in a most uncertain state, with the result that much interest attaches to the showing of the men.

Harvard surprised fall and dale followers last year by taking the Cornell lads into camp for the title, and despite the defeat of the Crimson by the Elis recently in their dual event at New Haven, the Cambridge team, which will be made up of R. St. B. Boyd, Captain; H. G. McClure, E. Stone, F. H. Blackman, E. V. Zamore, W. Ao. Peckham, C. Southworth, and W. M. Tugman, are expected to give a good account of themselves.

Pennsylvania has a number of good runners in its line-up, chief among whom are L. C. Madeira, Ed. W. M. McCurdy, and A. Langner. Princeton's best men are Martin J. Hayes and D. S. Morrison, the Captain.

It is promised that the course will be properly policed, so that there will be no breaking through the lines such as occurred last Saturday at the senior Metropolitan championship event.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Nov. 20.—The last football practice line-up of the week was held at the Naval Academy this afternoon. To-morrow there will be only signal work and individual practice along different lines, and on Saturday the team will play the eleven of New York University for the last game on the home grounds. A hard game is not expected from the New Yorkers, as they have not been able to score on an opposing team this season. The regular Navy team will be used just long enough for them to hit off the fast pace that has been the rule in practice this week, and then the second-string men will have to play out the game, as no chance of injuries to the regulars will be taken.

The last practice on the Naval Academy grounds this season will be on Thanksgiving morning and the football party will arrive in New York at 10 o'clock P. M., and will stop at the Vanderbilt Hotel, retiring as soon as they arrive. Friday morning there will be a walk and a talk by the coaches. In the afternoon there will be practice on the Polo Grounds and in the evening the party will attend a theatre. Saturday morning the time will be spent as quietly as possible, as only incident being final talks by the coaches. Plans for the time after the game have not been made.

DALY RUSHES CADETS.

"More Speed," Army's Coach's Cry —Try Forward Passing Again.

Special to The New York Times.

WEST POINT, N. Y., Nov. 20.—There was lots of snap to the Army's football work this afternoon. Head Coach Daly got into the game at stages, reminding old West Pointers of his cadet days. Daly's presence in the line-up was occasioned by the extreme efforts being made to get up speed on the squad. Yost's famous "hurry up" sunk into insignificance when compared to Daly's "more speed" cry. The practice lasted until darkness put an end to the play. The unseasonable weather conditions helped to make it considerably of an endurance test, too, for the men were at it for two hours and came through in good physicial shape, despite the Summer temperature.

The regulars lined up for an hour's scrimmage against the scrubs and scored three times during the workout. Hobbs, back again behind the line, did splendid work in advancing the ball, as did Capt. Benny Hoge. Each of these men scored a touchdown. Woodruff kicked a pretty goal from placement on the thirty-five-yard line and missed one other try from the same spot. O'Hare, who has been shifted back and forth from guard to tackle on the scrub line, got the call over Meacham to-day at Huston's guard position and did well. Huston is still out of it, as is Hodgson and Benedict. Ford, Hoge, Milburn, Hess, and Altman were all tried behind the Army line to-day. Hobbs did the kicking. Britton was tried at end on the regulars after Markoe gave way early in the practice. He did the best work with the forward pass, which showed a little improvement to-day. The squad will get the lightest kind of work to-morrow on the eve of the Springfield game.

Baker and Phillips Undefeated.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 20. Capt. "Hobey" Baker of the Tiger football eleven and George Felter Phillips, both regulars on the Princeton elevens for three years, are receiving congratulations for having played four years against Yale in football and never having been defeated. In the Fall of 1910 the freshman football eleven, of which both were members, defeated the Yale cubs 6 to 0, Baker making the score. The following Fall both played on the championship eleven which trimmed Harvard and Yale, and in the past two seasons the Yale games have resulted in tie scores. Baker has played half back for four years against Yale and Phillips at tackle. Capt. Baker has received an engraved cigarette case from Coach H. G. Andrews this year, bearing the inscription: "Hobey from Ham."

Cornell's Last Home Practice.

Special to The New York Times.

ITHACA, N. Y., Nov. 20.—The ban was lifted on secret practice on the Cornell football field this afternoon, and 2,000 cheering students led by the cadet band marched from a mass meeting, which was held to arouse spirit for the Pennsylvania game, to Alumni Field, where Coach Sharpe put the 'Varsity and scrubs through the only public scrimmage that has been held in the last month. This was the last opportunity given to the undergraduates to see the team in action before the Pennsylvania game at Philadelphia on Thanksgiving Day, and they responded with great enthusiasm. The field was sloppy, but in spite of this handicap the 'Varsity forced its way through the scrubs for two touchdowns, using straight football for the most part. Philippi, Lahr, and Collyer, the new heavyweight backfield, consistently gained through the line and outside tackle, but there was a noticeable absence of forward passing.

American Riflemen Win and Lose.

NICE, France, Nov. 20.—A rifle team from the United States battleship Utah had a shooting contest to-day with the crack team of the Twenty-fourth Battalion of Chasseurs and three teams from the One Hundred and Sixty-third Infantry. The Americans had no difficulty in defeating the infantry team, but the Chasseurs proved too strong, scoring 23 points to the Utah's 16.

BASEBALL TOURISTS' RECEIPTS $97,240

Expenses of Giants and White Sox Earned in Games Played in America.

Special to The New York Times.

VICTORIA, B. C., Nov. 20.—Despite the withdrawal of several star players from the ranks at the close of the American tour John J. McGraw and James J. Callahan, managers of the world's touring baseball teams, will be able to put first-class teams in the field for the games to be played in foreign countries. When the Comiskey party, numbering sixty-seven persons, sailed from here last night, each manager had eleven players under his control, and each will be able to line up his team with players in their own positions, or at least in positions where they have had considerable experience.

The American tour gave a total of $97,240 for the thirty-one games played, or an average of more than $3,000 per game. Had it not rained on the final day, when a double-header was to have been played at Tacoma and Seattle, the $100,000 mark would have been passed. The financial success of the American tour is very gratifying to Messrs. Comiskey and McGraw, and it dispels all fear of the affair being a money-losing proposition.

Five Giants and three White Sox left the party yesterday when the games at Tacoma and Seattle were called off. These players were Mathewson, Tesreau, Fromme, Meyers, Snodgrass, Chase, Schalk, and Rath. Jack Bliss, the former St. Louis catcher, who has been in the Pacific Coast League during the past season, joined the tourists here, and he will do the catching for the White Sox in the games abroad. Daly of the White Sox can also go behind the bat, and he will undoubtedly act as utility catcher for both clubs. There will be no need of a change from team to team in any other position.

The White Sox team in the foreign games will be made up of Pitchers Scott, Benz, and Leverenz; Catchers Bliss and Daly; Sam Crawford, first base; Herman Schaefer, second base; Weaver, short stop; Dick Egan, third base; Tris Speaker, Steve Evans, Daly, or Manager Callahan, the outfield. McGraw's team will have George Wiltse, Bunny Hearne, and Faber, a Western League recruit, for pitchers; Ivy Wingo, catcher; Merkle, first base; Doyle, second base; Mike Doolan, short stop; Hans Lobert, third base; Lee Magee, Jim Thorpe, and Mike Donlin for the outfield. The American Leaguers have the better pitching staff and a better outfield, while the National Leaguers are stronger behind the bat and in the infield. McGraw's team appears to be a better hitting aggregation than the Sox, despite the presence of Tris Speaker and Sam Crawford on the Sox roster.

The baseball tourists, who sailed from here on the Empress of Japan, were the following: Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Comiskey, Mr. and Mrs. John J. McGraw, Mr. and Mrs. James J. Callahan, Margaret and Daniel Callahan, Mr. and Mrs. James A. McAleer, Mr. and Mrs. William Klem, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Crawford, Mr. and Mrs. John Lobert, Mr. and Mrs. Jake Thorpe, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Doyle, Mr. and Mrs. George Wiltse, Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Comiskey, Mr. and Mrs. James Mullen, Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Buhl, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Farrell, Mrs. Hugh Keogh, Mrs. Daniel Hardin, Mrs. Wm. S. McLean, John F. Sheridan, Ivy Wingo, Michael Donlin, Fred Merkle, Michael Doolan, Lee Magee, John Faber, Bunny Hearne, Herman Schaefer, George Weaver, Walter Leverenz, James Scott, Joseph Benz, Thomas Daly, John Bliss, Stephen Evans, Richard Egan, Tristam Speaker, Ted Sullivan, the Rev. J. J. McNamara, Harry Sparrow, Henry Phillip Burchell, N. E. McBride, W. Ryan, T. Lynch, Frank J. Farrell, N. A. Anderson, G. W. Axelson, N. L. O'Niell, Dr. Frank Finley, James Hill, Albert Kinney, Andrew Slight, and Frank McGlynn.

The Empress of Japan is due at Yokohama on Dec. 2, and the first game on foreign soil will be played the following day in that city.

LYNCH STANDS ON RECORD.

National League Gives No Reason for Deposing Its President.

President Thomas J. Lynch of the National League refused to say anything yesterday about the selection of Gov. John K. Tener of Pennsylvania for his position. "I have heard nothing official of Mr. Tener's selection," said Mr. Lynch, "and I do not care to talk much about it at this time. All that I know is what I have seen in the newspapers. My conduct of the affairs of the league for the last four years couldn't have been so bad when they had to get one of the most prominent men in the country to run against me." Mr. Lynch said that he might have something to say about the matter after he had heard something definite from the club owners.

It is practically certain that the eight club owners of the league are united for the overthrow of Mr. Lynch. President Hempstead of the New York Club was the last one of the eight to make his position known on the question. When he understood that all the other club owners were for Gov. Tener Mr. Hempstead decided to agree with them. It was President Baker of the Phillies who started the warfare against Lynch. The Philadelphia Club was so provoked at President Lynch's position in the forfeited game with the Giants last July that they stated at the time that they would not rest until they had ousted him. Baker went to Harrisburg several weeks ago and approached Gov. Tener, and at that time it is stated he received enough encouragement to make the Philadelphia Club's President believe that he would take the position if it was offered to him. The matter was to have been kept secret until the league meeting here next month, but, like all baseball secrets, it leaked out.

Gov. Tener's term of office as Governor does not expire until Jan. 1, 1915. If he is elected here next month, he will not serve as active President until that time. For a year and a month the league will be in charge of Secretary John A. Heydler, who served as President during the unfinished term of the late Harry Pulliam. Gov. Tener will be President in an honorary capacity and accept no salary until he takes up the actual duties of President in January, 1915. Mr. Heydler is thoroughly conversant with National League affairs, and the organization will be in capable hands until Gov. Tener is ready to take active charge. During the coming year, however, Gov. Tener will keep in touch with National League headquarters and his counsel will be sought on all questions of importance.

Baseball men yesterday discussed the sudden dropping of President Lynch and were somewhat surprised at the manner in which he was cast aside by the National League club owners. No specific charges have ever been made against Lynch nor has any reason been given why they wished to oust him. He has committed the "error" which has cost other National League Presidents their job—the formulation of what he believed to be a just policy and trod on the toes of the club owners. The club owners have always wanted to run the National League.

President Lynch has stood back of his umpires, and during his régime there has been less umpire baiting than ever before in the organization. In sustaining the umpires Mr. Lynch has antagonized more than one of the club owners. Neither his inegrity nor his honesty of purpose has ever been questioned, but he wouldn't be dictated to by dissatisfied club owners. Lynch is willing to stand on his record and says that no club owner can show where he did not act for the best interests of the game and the league.

If the club owners think that they are going to run Gov. Tener when he takes the office, those who know Mr. Tener say they are going to slip up. He will be there and stand for no interference, which will be something new in the National League.

He made it plain to the committee which waited upon him that he would only accept the place for a term of four years and at a salary said to be $15,000.

It is stated that one of the reasons that the National League was anxious to get a man of Gov. Tener's prominence to head the organization was to restore the older league's waning prestige. The American League, by virtue of its winning the world's series four times in succession, has given the younger league the upper hand. The National League hasn't won the world's series since Pittsburgh defeated Detroit in 1909. President Ban Johnson of the American League is the most prominent and able figure in baseball, in fact so powerful that the National League has no power, as Johnson has become a sort of Czar in the game and nothing shows this better than at the last meeting of the American League in Chicago, when Johnson cast aside the suggestion of August Herrmann for an interclub series between the two leagues to be held in the place of the world's series. Johnson killed the plan with a word. And best of all, Mr. Johnson's co-workers in the league all stand by him through thick and thin.

The American League is becoming so powerful in major league baseball that the position of August Herrmann as Chairman of the National Commission is in danger. American League club owners say that Herrmann's sitting as Chairman gives the National League a great advantage over the younger league. They want an American League official to head the National Commission, and it is said that plans are already being made to oust Herrmann, who for years has been in a position to give the National League an advantage in league affairs.

Indians In Fine Condition.

Special to The New York Times.

CARLISLE, Penn., Nov. 20.—With only one day more of practice for this season, the Carlisle Indian football squad rushed through an afternoon of practice, which included nearly everything in the training category except scrimmage. The Redskins are as fit physically as human beings can be made, and there hardly seems to be a chance that indifference or carelessness can mar two culminating games of the year against Syracuse at Syracuse on Saturday and Brown at Providence on Thanksgiving. Fundamentals of the stereotyped order such as Warner insists upon for conditioning the Indians, with signals, a modicum of kicking from placement, and punting and running down under the same, occupied the whole period to-day. Warner gave his braves a short talk in the cage before practice.

No Definite Yale Rowing Policy.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 20.—Capt. T. B. Denegre of the Yale crew returned from New York to-night, where he had held an all-day conference with the Yale Rowing Committee concerning the question of changing coaching methods. No final decision was reached, Denegre said. This was the third conference held this week. Another will be held next week, at which it is now expected final action will be taken. Capt. Denegre declined to say what was done at the meeting to-day. It is generally believed at Yale, however, that English coaching methods will not be retained.

ROBINSON TALKS OF BROOKLYN'S TEAM

Pitchers and Short Stop the Greatest Need to Bolster Up the Superbas.

Wilbert Robinson, the new manager of the Brooklyn Club, arrived in Brooklyn yesterday morning to take up his first work as the head of the Superbas. In the morning Robinson was the guest of honor at a luncheon given by President Charles H. Ebbets at the Brooklyn Club, where he met all the club officials and several newspaper men. In the afternoon the new manager held a long conference with President Ebbets regarding the 1914 training trip and other details of the preliminary season. Robinson will return to his home in Baltimore to-day, but will return to New York next month to attend the National League meeting and put through any deals that may present themselves.

Robinson is very enthusiastic about his new position and the fine prospect of placing the Brooklyn team in the first division. He paid a high compliment to his predecessor yesterday when he declared that Dahlen's judgment in the selection of players made his position quite easy, as compared with the tasks confronting most managers when they take charge of a club. He has seen the Brooklyn team so often that he is thoroughly conversant with the ability of all the players, and he figures on no more than two changes in the regular line-up.

"Pitchers are our greatest need," said the ex-Giant yesterday in discussing his new position, "and if I can get one or two youngsters in shape to take their regular turns in the box I see no reason why the club should not get out of the second division. We have three dependable veterans in Rucker, Ragan and Reulbach, and two promising youngsters in Yingling and Allen. Behind the bat the team is strong in catchers, and the three bases have capable guardians. A new shortstop will be needed owing to the release of Bob Fisher to Toronto, but Mr. Ebbets has two promising infielders for Spring trial. In the outfield my only concern will be to get a right-hand hitter, as the three regulars last season hit from the other side of the plate, the same as Daubert and two or three of the pitchers. That makes too many left-hand hitters for one team. The team has plenty of hitting and fielding strength, as the averages show, but it is weak in base running and that is one feature to which I will devote considerable attention in the Spring. I feel that my long experience under two such capable tutors as Ned Hanlon and John McGraw fits me for the task at hand, and I see nothing ahead but a winning team. I will follow McGraw's general system just as closely as is possible."

The Brooklyn team will train at Augusta, Ga. The young players will leave for that city on Feb. 20 and the regulars on March 1. Rucker, Ragan, and Reulbach will spend ten days at Hot Springs before reporting to Manager Robinson at Augusta on March 1. The players will remain in Augusta until March 25, and play very little on the way home. They are due at Ebbets Field on April 1, and will play a series of five games with the Yankees on April 2, 3, 4, 5, and 11. The opening game of this series will be the first home game under Robinson's management, and President Ebbets has decided to have a Robinson Day celebration. On April 5 and 12 the Superbas will play at Newark, and on April 9 the world's champion Athletics will be at Ebbets Field. April 6, 7, and 10 will be devoted to practice, and April 13 to rest for the opening of the National League season at Ebbets Field the following day.

"Pro" Coach to Stay Off Bench.

Special to The New York Times.

WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass., Nov. 20.—Williams College has adopted the system of keeping the coach off the bench during baseball games. This is the outcome of agitation for purging professionalism from Williams baseball which was begun by Capt. Ainslie, '14, who previously proposed that professional coaching be abolished entirely.

CROWDED OUT SCHOOLBOYS

That's Why Oxford Restricted Scholars In Athletic Competition.

OXFORD, England, Nov. 20.—A. N. S. Jackson, Dean of the Oxford University athletes and treasurer of the Oxford University Athletic Club, denies that the new rules limiting the eligibility of Rhodes scholars to compete in the University sports are the direct outcome of recent victories by Rhodes students.

He says the matter was discussed in 1911, and that unless some action along this line had been taken the Oxford University Athletic Club soon would have ceased to exist because all the energy and enthusiasm of the public school boy would have been damped.

Lord Desborough expresses approval of an age limit for competitors in all university sports. elf says it is not fair to run men who have been in competition for four years against those who have been in athletics only three years.

Wagner Outpointed by Allen.

That Young Wagner, the former Ghetto champion, was "all in" as a boxer, was proven conclusively last night at the Postman Athletic Club of Brooklyn, when Marty Allen, a young and ambitious featherweight, decisively outpointed the former favorite of the east side in the main ten-round bout. Wagner showed a decided falling off in his old-time clever and aggressive fighting style, and was an easy mark for the hard right and left hooks delivered by Allen. Wagner, although he took a severe beating and never had a chance, was always willing to mix matters with his opponent.

In the semi-final bout which was scheduled to go six rounds, Bob Lee, a negro boxer weighing 200 pounds, had an easy task of disposing of Young Sam Langford, weighing 170 pounds, and, after flooring him with a succession of rights and lefts in the first round, ended the bout with a blow to the heart.

Levinsky Knocks Out Hagen.

Ed Hagen, the Seattle heavyweight, made his New York debut at the Atlantic Garden A. C. last night in a bout with Battling Levinsky of Philadelphia, and he failed to go seven rounds of the scheduled ten. Following a knockdown of five seconds Levinsky tore in with both hands against the new arrival from the Northwest, and Hagen went to the canvas for the full count. While in a position to arise Hagen was apparently awaiting the count of nine, but he surprised the crowd by remaining down until the deciding second had been counted against him.

City College Freshmen Win.

The freshmen won the annual inter-class athletic meet of the City College held on Jasper Oval yesterday. They beat the sophomores, their nearest rivals, by 18 points. The feature event was the quarter-mile run. Moonan, a freshman, sprang into the lead at the start and led the field all the way. His time of 58 seconds on an eighth of a mile track, which was very heavy, was excellent. J. Burrows of the senior class won the half-mile run in clever fashion after a fight in the last quarter with Lovely, whom he beat by twenty yards. The summary:

440-Yard Run.—Won by J. T. Moonan, 1917; B. Margolies, 1916, second; Malevista, 1917, third; L. Horowitz, 1917, fourth. Time—0:58 2-5.

Protest Negro Football Player.

PITTSBURG, Kan., Nov. 20.—A formal protest against the appearance of a negro football player with the Southwestern College of Winfield, Kan., in the Thanksgiving Day game against the Kansas State Normal School eleven will be made by officials of the latter, according to a decision reached to-day. Every member of the Normal squad asked that protest be made.

HIGH SCHOOL BOYS SWIM FOR HONORS

Townsend Harris Hall Lads Defeat Stuyevsant "Crawlers," 33 to 20.

Townsend Harris Hall swimmers triumphed over their opponents from Stuyvesant High School last night in the pool of the City College by a score of 33 to 20 after six events had been contested. There was fancy diving, plunging for distance, and sprint and relay swimming races, each contest of which had its full measure of interest to the partisans of the schools, who made the natatorium resound with their concerted rooting.

The team winners accounted for four firsts of the six decided, with B. Handschuck the stellar performer by his wins of the fancy diving and the 50-yards race. He had in each of these events as runner-up Abbey of Stuyvesant, who just lacked a bit of the winner's class.

The cleanest cut victory was scored by H. Vollmer of Stuyvesant in the 220-yard race, which he won in the handiest fashion imaginable. Vollmer, who is the short distance champion of the Public Schools Athletic League, paused at one of the turns on two occasions to chat with his fellows and thereby probably lost ten seconds. The first century of the route was covered by the title holder, who swims a finished crawl, in much faster time than that accomplished by the winner of the 100-yard race.

The hundred yards was the best contested race of the series, and showed Reiss of Stuyvesant and Frankel of Townsend Harris swimming almost stroke for stroke throughout. Cheered by their mates, each put every ounce of power into his last length of the pool, but Franked had the most in reserve and made the winning touch by the margin of six inches in 1 minute 15 seconds, while Reiss beat Sperlich of Townsend Harris a yard and a half for the place.

Bernhardt of Stuyvesant rather outclassed his opponents in the plunging, and annexed the honors for his school with the fine distance of 56 feet.

In the 800-foot relay, with each of the boys on the teams to swim 200 feet, Abbey, for Stuyvesant, went away in the van and handed his second man a fair lead. This was quickly lost, however, when Frankel, the second boy for Townsend Harris, "crawled" into the lead which was never afterward surrendered by the ultimate winners, who beat Stuyvesant handily. The summary:

50-Yard Swim.—Won by Handschuck, Townsend Harris; Abbey, Stuyvesant, second; Cantrell, Townsend Harris, third. Time—0:30.

Plunge for Distance.—Won by Bernhardt, Stuyvesant, with 56 feet; Crawford, Townsend Harris, second, with 49 feet; Naffis, Stuyvesant, third, with 46 feet.

Fancy Diving.—Won by Handschuck, Townsend Harris, with 22½ points; Abbey, Stuyvesant, second, with 19¾ points; Emanuel, Townsend Harris, third, with 17 points.

800-Yard Foot Relay Race.—Won by Townsend Harris team, made up of Cantrell, Frankel, Vermilye, and Handschuck; Stuyvesant team, made up of Abbey, McGuinness, Reiss, and Vollmer, second. Time—3:08.

100-Yard Swim.—Won by Frankel, Townsend Harris; Reiss, Stuyvesant, second; Sperlich, Townsend Harris, third. Time—1:15.

220-Yard Swim.—Won by Vollmer, Stuyvesant; Carson, Townsend Harris, second; Wade, Townsend Harris, third. Time—3:05.

McFarland-Britton Bout Dec. 8.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Nov. 20.—Packey McFarland, Chicago, and Jack Britton, New York, this afternoon accepted terms for a ten-round no-decision boxing contest in Milwaukee on Dec. 8.

The heaviest isn't always the best!

The old idea that an overcoat must be heavy to be warm has been disproved by such fabrics as our new shetlands, chinchillas and cheviots.

Furthermore, we've lined some of them only through the shoulders, in deference to the men who want a medium weight coat for all Winter.

On the other hand, we've heavier coats and still others lined throughout, some plush lined and some double texture fabrics—ideal for motoring or watching football games.

Men's overcoats, $18 to $75.

Everything for the game to-morrow, from warm overcoats to Thermos bottles.

"Really, the Finest Limousine I've Ever Seen."

That's the comment of every one who has seen the New Chalmers "Six" Limousine.

People who have owned enclosed cars costing from $5000 to $8000; people who are used to having the best; carriage builders; even competitors selling higher priced cars—admit that no finer product of coach building has ever been offered.

It's hard to give you an idea of the superlative luxury of this car. You must see it yourself. Let your eyes feast on the grace of its external appearance—its streamline body, its rounded top, bell-back, tapering bonnet, its elegant finish.

Luxury and Roominess

Now enter the wide, hospitable door—lighted, when open, by a concealed step light.

The spacious interior, you find, is finished in whipcord or broadcloth. Deep cushions invite you to sink back and take your ease. There's plenty of room. Three big people can sit comfortaby on the rear seat. Auxiliary seats, real man's size chairs, accommodate two more. And still another passenger can sit in front with the chauffeur.

To ventilate the Limousine, all you need to do is turn a handle on the door, raising or lowering the window glass to any position. No straps to pull.

A Car of Super-refinement

Soft light may be had from the recessed shoulder lamps—or a brilliant glow, if desired, from the dome light in the top.

Every accessory for comfort and convenience is provided—foot cushions, speaking tube, memo pads, clock, flower vases, etc.

And all this luxury, all these super-refinements are furnished on the wonderful New Chalmers "Six" chassis—with its Master Motor, its silent power, its utter flexibility, its freedom from trouble and repair expense.

Nowhere Such Value as This

All this, too, is offered at an astonishingly low price, $3600. Can you afford to be without this car for the coming winter? Is it worth while to think of paying more? Is it wise to pay less? A demonstration of this great car will give you the answer.

We are always glad to show the New Chalmers "Six." Please call or phone us.

COURTING DISASTER.

We hope it was not in vain that Mr. TAFT appealed to WOODROW WILSON'S work on Constitutional Government for confirmation of his hope and belief that the Administration will be guided by the light of wisdom and experience in its policy of providing a Government for the Philippine Islands. Mr. WILSON wrote, in the passage quoted from his book by Mr. TAFT, that "self-government is not a mere "form of institutions to be had when "desired," but "it is a form of character. It follows upon the long discipline which gives a people self-possession, self-mastery, a habit of order and peace and common counsel, "and a reverence for law which will "not fail when they themselves become the makers of law; the steadiness of self-control and political maturity." For the sake of our national honor and reputation it is, we say, fervently to be hoped that respect for these profound political truths will be the safeguard of the Administration against a policy in the Philippines that can lead only to disaster.

It is very evident from the testimony of Mr. TAFT and of Mr. WORCESTER that Gov. HARRISON has not made a good beginning in the Philippines. He has chosen the wrong advisers, he has replaced men of knowledge, proved capacity, and experience with new and untried men, and he has proceeded with such haste as to beget the suspicion that he has been too much influenced by the mere desire for spoils. The public knows from what source the influences come that have guided the present Administration in the paths of adventure and experiment in the Philippines that, in the judgment of those who best know the Islands and their peoples, lead in the direction of danger. The Baltimore platform, which has been a veritable Pandora's box for this Administration, has in the matter of the Philippine policy, as in the shaping of the money bill, been one source of unwisdom. Then, there is Mr. BRYAN, who, in respect to the Philippines and to financial legislation, has muddied and darkened the Administration counsels with his fantastic and rejected theories. As a warning against the acceptance of advice from such quarters stands the testimony of Mr. TAFT and Mr. WORCESTER.

It is undisputed, it is beyond all dispute, that these two men, from their long and intimate experience have a profounder and a surer knowledge of the Filipino character and of the needs of the people of the Philippine Islands than any other men in the United States. To disregard the warnings of these men and to turn for guidance to others who have no competence whatever to express an opinion upon the Philippines, and who speak with the self-given authority of theories formed without any study or any knowledge, theories which WOODROW WILSON condemned in his earlier writings, cited by Mr. TAFT, would be a course of incredible hardihood. To encourage the Filipinos in the belief that independence and self-government are to be theirs within a short time would be an act of unspeakable cruelty to them. But to prepare for the application of such a policy and actually to put it into execution in the Islands would lead us to endless difficulties and confusion, to inevitable disaster. The Administration has something more vital than its own theories to consider. The honor of the nation is involved in its Philippine policy.

THE TAX ON THRIFT AND BENEVOLENCE.

In these days of Progressive morality it is singular to find our Government taxing the instruments of thrift and benevolence which other Governments establish by the taxing power. Yet that is the effect of the taxes collected from the insurance companies, the agencies of those who voluntarily do for themselves what the laws of some Governments make compulsory, and which some Governments do for those who are unable to do it themselves. England and Germany have long been held up to us as examples of monarchical systems in advance of ourselves in the matter of social justice by aids to the afflicted, old, sick, unemployed, and so on. Yet the income tax, like the corporation tax, is levied upon the insurance companies whose activities relieve our Government from the necessity of much of the Governmental insurance of other countries.

States and nation are alike to blame. President KINGSLEY of the New York Company has calculated that if his company had paid to the nation at the same rate it paid the States the taxation on the company's income, paid by the policy holders, would have reached 4.4 per cent. That is about the rate collected from these malefactors who are wealthy enough to pay the additional income tax. Other Governments that levy any tax on this form of thrift levy it upon the policy holders, who know what is done. Our Governments levy it upon the corporations, and the policy holders neither see nor appreciate the influence which saps their security. In England the tax is one-fourteenth that paid in the United States, in Germany one-twentieth. In France, Germany, Spain, Denmark, Russia, the tax is simply for the cost of the administration of the insurance department of Government.

Those Governments make the tax negligible, merely the cost of supervising the business, because they know that what the companies do the Government is relieved from doing. Our Governments regard the accumulated wealth of the companies, the security of 42,000,000 policy holders against penury through bereavement, as a proper source of spoliation. The process is indirect, and the policy holders are not aroused against the Government capable of such unwisdom.

"CUT THE ULCER TO THE BONE."

Gov. GLYNN and Attorney General CARMODY have pledged District Attorney WHITMAN their full co-operation in the proceedings undertaken by the District Attorney to run down the men who conspired to extort money from contractors on the Barge Canal and State highway construction. It is known by Mr. GLYNN and Mr. CARMODY that these criminals were instruments of the party organizations of this State. The Governor and the Attorney General have, nevertheless, promised to throw the prosecuting power of the whole State, including that of the District Attorneys in the several counties whither the trail of graft has led, into working unison with the man whom this city expects to find and to convict the conspirators.

To cleanse the Democratic Party they must do this. If the men who are influential in the Democratic organization were really moved by a desire to plunge their party into an abyss of ruin in the next State election, they could do it most effectually by throwing out a line of interference in behalf of the grafters.

Mr. WHITMAN lacks jurisdiction outside New York County, except in cases where the alleged crimes were committed at least partly within its borders. Jurisdiction might have been conferred upon him by a special act from Albany. But Mr. OSBORNE was chosen head the prosecution of the graft cases up State. A vast amount of work must be done, and that unfortunate individual John Doe must be haled before the court repeatedly before the cases with their hundreds of witnesses, most of them up-State contractors, are made up. There is work enough ahead for Mr. WHITMAN and for the State prosecutors, too. If Mr. CARMODY, Mr. OSBORNE, and the men subject to their direction fail to produce positive results, while Mr. WHITMAN proceeds to expose the rascals within his jurisdiction, the glory will be his. An attempt to protect the Democratic organization, or to poultice the ulcer that has been eating into its vitals, or anything short of a whole-hearted and thoroughgoing effort to cut it and cast it out, will result in a vote against the New York State Democracy next year beside which the recent defeat of Mr. MURPHY in the Mayoralty election will seem small.

HAS THE GOVERNMENT A CONSCIENCE?

It would be useless to urge that the Government should have a heart toward the railways and other public utilities, but it ought to have a conscience. Yet the fact is that the Government graft rivals any known in the business world, and that a virtue is made of oppression and extortion practiced for the good of the people. The case of the postal parcels raises the plain question whether the people wish to be receivers of goods taken from those who protest the taking. The railways claim that they are not fairly paid for service in carrying the parcels. At the same time the Post Office is claiming a profit originally placed at $10,000,000, and recently raised to $30,000,000. We believe that the people appreciate the Postal Parcel Service enough to be willing to pay for it, and that they would support a plea for fair play. A price paid in accordance with a statute may or may not be fair. It cannot be admitted to be fair so long as those who render the service do so under duress. When profits earned in this way are said to justify the extension of the Government service to the telephones and telegraphs the outlook is nothing short of alarming for the taxpayers. When the Government runs the railways and the telegraphs there can be no more profits made by not paying bills. The bill will be paid or the service will stop, regardless of the Treasury deficit.

Another example of the conscienceless attitude of the Government toward public utilities is shown by the attitude of the counsel employed by the Interstate Commerce Commission in the matter of the advance of freight rates. Mr. BRANDEIS proposes to use the application as a lever for reforming the alleged abuse of interlocking Directorates. The railways ask to be allowed to pay their bills, and Mr. BRANDEIS proposes to listen when they have improved their financial methods in a manner satisfactory to him. It is as though when your tailor sends in his bill you should refuse payment because he does not live with his wife. He ought to live with his wife, and it might be that if his bills were paid he would be better able to do so. But the payment of the tailor's bills and the reform of his morals ought to be dealt with each on its own merits. Nobody would object to Mr. BRANDEIS's ravaging reforms in their season, but the payment of bills cannot await the process. The Interstate Commerce Commission reports this week that the railways' gross earnings for September increased $17,000,000, and the net fell $5,000,000. The railways are paid by piecework. They are indisputably working harder for less pay. They have pieced out their earnings by borrowing and spending $335,000,000 which must be paid or funded within a year if the railways are to be kept solvent. That the companies can travel this road no further appears from the economies which they are practicing to the damage of other interests than their own. The railways' contracts for rails this year have decreased 72 per cent., car contracts have decreased 42 per cent., locomotive orders decreased 30 per cent., structural orders decreased 25 per cent. The Eastern independent steel companies are running 40 per cent. capacity, and the larger interests are doing but little better. It is idle to say that the railways are willfully extravagant when they are not allowed to control the expenditure of their income. They are told how much money they must spend, and how they must spend it. They ask to be allowed to collect the money they must disburse, and they are told that they must reform their morals. They should do whatever they ought, but they must meet their bills at the due dates. Even if Mr. BRANDEIS were to assist the process of giving them permission it would be months before the order were entered. Meanwhile the outlook is that the larger rates if collected will be upon a smaller volume of business.

In business not Government controlled prices are raised when business is overwhelming and prices are lowered when dwindling business needs encouragement. The reverse of this customary and approved practice is a novelty whose outcome is obscure. In contempt of counsel Commissioner MARBLE said to THE TIMES that the Commission was striving to make private management of railways profitable. The next day he recalled his words, and Counsel BRANDEIS's utterance of stern virtue was made. This oppression of the railways is practiced not because Counsel BRANDEIS is better than other men, or the Commissioners worse, but because of an assumed popular mandate. The people have allowed the oppression to run along on the idea that the railways were too big and rich to be damaged. The people are in the way to discover that the railways can be injured, and that the injury will recoil upon the people.

WHO SHALL SAVE MEXICO?

The common question is, "What is going to be the end of the trouble in Mexico?" and the common answer is, "Nobody knows." The outlook seems to grow more bewildering and more desperate every day, yet whenever an intelligent Mexican opens his mouth to express an opinion on the subject all he can manage to say is that if intervention is attempted patriotism will unite all Mexicans in opposition to the invader. The kind of patriotism which would induce all, or any considerable portion of them, to unite to save their country from anarchy, however, does not seem to exist.

Yet there must be thousands of law-abiding Mexicans in the professional classes, among the merchants of the capital and Guadalajara and Monterey, the manufacturers of Orizaba, who have given much sober thought to the reawakening of the old revolutionary spirit in their country and the havoc it has caused since PORFIRIO DIAZ fled. These men must have some idea of a way out of the difficulty. They must favor some plan for the restoration of peace, and it is not credible that they believe that any lasting benefit to their nation can come from either the Dictator who kills men who question his political actions or the murderous brigands of the North. What do they expect to happen? What do they hope for? These are the really important Mexican questions.

Certainly the fate of Mexico is in the hands of its patriotic and intelligent middle class. There is no reason at present to tell us how its members would act in case of intervention. Nothing can be much clearer than the indisposition of Washington to intervene. No policy of President WILSON has a heartier support than his policy of non-intervention in Mexico. But there is an eager desire all over this country and in several European countries to know what the better class, the intelligent middle class, of Mexican citizens think ought to be done to save their country's honor and restore to it the confidence of the world which it possessed while old PORFIRIO was its Chief Magistrate and something more.

These are the people whose withdrawal of support from DIAZ made the well-intentioned but tragically futile revolution of MADERO successful. What do they want now? Restoration to the Catholic Church of the powers which JUAREZ took away from it? That might be one way out. The masses in Mexico are fanatically religious. The Church could restore a semblance of order, and it would tolerate neither a Huerta nor a Villa. Or have they in mind the possible formation of a commission of the ablest men in Mexican political life, men like MANUEL CALERO, PEDRO LASCURAIN, JOSE Y. LIMANTOUR, and half a dozen others representing all shades of political belief to form a provisional Government which would restore peace and prepare for a Constitutional election?

The address of Gen. HUERTA to the new Congress, the legal election of which the Washington Government refuses to recognize, is little more than an apology for his recent usurpation of all power, and it still leaves room for his early retirement, which is not at all unlikely. But that event might precipitate a condition of anarchy throughout the country unless provision were made beforehand to put the machinery of government temporarily in safe hands. As to the outcome, we cannot safely predict an exact repetition of Mexican history. The middle class of merchants, bankers, manufacturers, and professional people scarcely existed in the era of SANTA ANNA and ALVAREZ. It was developed in the thirty years of peace and prosperity under Don PORFIRIO. The question of the hour is whether Mexicans of this class have the intelligence, the devotion, and the courage to save the country from present destruction.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Efficiency Must Not Be Ignored.

That the burning of the Volturno created no such sensation and commanded no such space in the newspapers as did the sinking of the Titanic is easily explicable. There was nothing intrinsically interesting about the Volturno herself, for she was neither large nor new. Moreover, she carried not one person known outside of a narrow and humble circle, while the manner of her destruction, if not exactly familiar, is common as compared with collision with an iceberg in the most traveled of ocean roads.

When one tries to account for our failure to get as much excited, or anything like it, by the rescues from the burning Balmes as we were in the closely similar case of the Volturno, difficulty arises. In each of these instances about the same number of people, of much the same sort, were subjected to the same experience, and that perhaps the most terrible to be met at sea. There was a like heroic struggle on the part of the officers and crew to save the ship, and the transfers from her were effected in like conditions of danger. But there were differences, and though these were seemingly slight, or rather seemingly irrelevant to the question under consideration, of course in them must lie its answer.

For one thing, there was lacking in the case of the Balmes the converging rush of many steamers to the scene of disaster, and their picturesque manoeuvring around the burning ship. For another thing, and perhaps even more important, no controversy arose as to the relative skill and courage of the various rescuers—as to whether this one had done a little more, and that one a little less, than the seaman's full duty when life is at stake.

Only the Pannonia heard the appeal for desperately needed help sent out from the Balmes, only the Pannonia gave it, and only the Pannonia's Captain was called upon to prove his competency to meet the most trying of maritime emergencies. And for that reason alone, apparently, there seems to be more than a chance of failure by the public to recognize how magnificently Capt. CAPPES, his officers, and his men met the requirements of the situation that confronted them. That they did their best is hardly worth mentioning. Of course they did, and the number of men afloat who wouldn't have merited that much of commendation is negligible. What counts is that their best was seamanship of the very highest and most efficient quality—that they took off all the Balmes' passengers in exactly the right way and without a single mishap or accident.

Two Views of the Philippines.

With the theory presented by one of our readers—that we need the Philippines as a training school for our army—there will be a good deal of easily explicable and justifiable dissent. Few of us will like to think, as he did, that the islands are worth keeping merely because several millions of their inhabitants are likely for a good many years to come to give an otherwise peaceful nation a chance constantly to practice on them the art of man-killing, and, by encountering the dangers and hardships of real war, make them ever ready for fighting against other enemies.

That some of the wilder Filipinos will need a lot of subduing before they arrive at appreciation of civilization and settled government is probable enough, but it hardly follows that the performance of this task would be the best or even a good preparation for possible encounters with foes not savage, waging war in wholly different ways. Of course the experience would be of some value, but those of our soldiers who were killed, wounded or worn out by tropic campaigns would not be of much use thereafter or elsewhere, and the idea that one gets ready for enduring hardship by enduring it has now been abandoned by all except the oldest of military experts. That was the notion which led to the camping of our troops on the sands of Tampa for months before they were sent to Cuba—an experiment not likely to be tried again.

A more convincing, or at least a more plausible, argument for our retention of the Philippines is that of those who, while hoping that little more fighting will be necessary there—and believing that it won't be if the civilizing agencies already at work can be continued—take a long look ahead and see a time coming when the nations in the temperate zones will be more dependent for food than now on the fertility of well-watered tropic soil. The weight of this argument is not great for the present generation, and will not be much greater for several if its successors, but—well, there is no doubt that the earth is cooling off, that aridity is slowly spreading through the temperate regions, and that humanity will have to make its last stand in the tropics. The races that have a firmly established foothold there then will not be the last to succumb to the inevitable.

"Charity" Suffers Too Long.

Commissioner DAUMOND of the Charities Department suggests, and all will agree with him, that high among our causes for thanksgiving at this season is the general and remarkable development among us of the various agencies by which the more fortunate can help the less fortunate, and by which for the benefit of all various diseases can be cured or prevented.

These are surely reasons for rejoicing, for they indicate not only an increasing confidence among us that many an ancient evil, once hopelessly accepted as a matter of course, can be remedied or abolished, but also that we are gaining efficiency in both endeavors. However, that "charity," in the old sense of that word, is more abundant than ever before might possibly mean that it is more needed, and by more people, than ever before, and that would indicate that things were not going as well as they might or even that they were not going well at all.

The real optimist looks forward to a time when nobody will need charity and nobody will give it—an expectation at which the constitutional pessimist cynically jeers and the meliorist sadly smiles. Fortunately we are turning more and more away from the cure of ills physical and economic and paying more and more heed to their prevention. That is what Commissioner DRUMMOND'S little private and personal Thanksgiving Proclamation should have emphasized more than it did.

Perhaps it was only respect for his official title that stopped him from saying that the word "charity" was hateful to him and the thing itself tolerable only as an expedient necessarily used while waiting for better days. More people than he thinks would have applauded that opinion had he expressed it.

AIMS OF THE SPUGS.

Mrs. Belmont Says They Try to Encourage Real Giving.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

May I ask for a little of your valuable space to correct a false impression which is taking root regarding the purpose of the Society for the Prevention of Useless Giving? I would like to state as briefly as possible what we are trying to do and what we are not trying to do. We attack the collective giving which is current, customary, and, therefore, almost compulsory at Christmas, which results in unfair taxation of workingmen and women, and which it is most unfair to call Christmas giving.

We attack the exchange system of giving which has degenerated into an abuse of Christmas and has drifted to the level of the common swap, utterly devoid of the faintest trace of sentiment or meaning. But we did not organize to prevent giving! That would be foolish in New York, to say the least. New York, which is always the first to respond to a call of need; New York, which is always first on the list of subscribers; New York, which, in spite of her faults, stands alone and unrivaled in generosity.

On the contrary, we urge—give; give generously, but not from fear, to further some ulterior motive, or even because it is a tiresome custom, but give willingly for the pleasure or help you may bestow; give for the love and joy of giving.

The society may bring about a few changes in the kind of presents sold to anxious buyers as useful Christmas gifts, but we do not expect to interfere with or limit the purchase of Christmas presents. If any one thinks that by joining the Spugs he is exempt from giving, he is very much mistaken. But we believe in the right of the individual to freedom as regards Christmas giving.

Any one believing as we do is urged to become a member; each member is urged to form a squad that is to secure ten other members, thus becoming by automatic promotion a Captain of Spugs. We plan to have a big Christmas party, and each member is expected to bring or send to that party some lonely person who would not have a happy day otherwise.

The dues of the society are ten cents a year. This includes the pin which must be worn during the campaign. The pins may be obtained at the Spug headquarters, 105 West Fortieth Street, or any local secretary of the Vacation Savings Fund.

President, The Society for the Prevention of Useless Giving.

"English-Irish" Colonists.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

A few days ago there appeared in your columns a letter objecting to the coupling of English to Irish in referring to people from Ireland. In Lecky's "History of England During the Eighteenth Century," Vol. II., Page 415, the following I believe justifies this use:

> As early as 1612 Sir John Davis said "there have been so many English colonies planted in Ireland that if the people were numbered at this day by the poll, such as were descended of English race would be found more in number than the ancient natives. In 1640 in the 'Remonstrance of Grievances' drawn up against the Government of Strafford, it was urged that the people of Ireland were 'now for the most part descended of British ancestors.'"

The Growing Use of "Slang."

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Our varied language, which was rich enough for the beautiful thoughts of Shakespeare and the immortal truths of Lincoln, seems to be entirely inadequate for the present generation. They are constructing a new language—the language of the vaudeville stage—slang. Words meaning in English one thing have acquired different significations in this new tongue of the twentieth century. For instance "some" in slang may mean beautiful or powerful; or it acquires any meaning according to the whims of the speaker.

Married Women's Signatures.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

May I ask a question through your columns of some women who are ably defending the cause of the protest against the extension of the suffrage? What is their reason for signing their communications to the papers with their titles as married women? Surely we were taught that such title could only appear in brackets as an identification of the writer to a correspondent who might not know her status, but never as a signature—at least according to ordinary epistolary etiquette. In the instances referred to there must be some reason underlying the departure from the rule, and I am anxious to know it. X. Y.

PIRACY OF STYLES

Is as Prevalent as the Pirating of Designs.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your editorial article, "A Law to Guard Designs," admirably canvasses the situation, analyzing in succinct fashion the needs of the various trades whose interests are involved, and pointing out the dangerous pitfalls into which those who are framing the contemplated legislation are most likely to fall.

There is another phase of this subject of industrial piracy which does not seem as yet to have been carefully considered. I refer to the distinction which may be drawn between design piracy and style piracy. Style piracy consists in copying an entire model, such, for instance, as a coat, dress, waist, piece of neckwear, or undergarment. Design piracy, on the other hand, consists in merely reproducing the design or motif in a piece of lace, embroidery, silk, tapestry, carpet, or wallpaper. Both kinds of piracy are rampant in every field of industrial endeavor in this country and also abroad—not only in the field of textiles, but practically in every field where originality of thought and exclusiveness of product are considered an asset. Both kinds of piracy bring in their wake stupendous losses.

Nevertheless, I have found among those who should be keenly interested a singular lack of unanimity of opinion regarding the advisability of concerted action against the evil. This apathy is particularly noticeable among those trades which suffer the most from piracy of styles. Manufacturers, for instance, in the lines of cloakmaking, suits, skirts, infants' wear, waists, dress goods, furs, undermuslins, petticoats, and others appear the least anxious to see a law enacted which would make more difficult the pirating of original ideas. In the case of many of these manufacturers, such a law, if it could be passed, would, it is believed, soon become a matter of evasion and avoidance.

There is not in my mind the slightest doubt that a bill may be drawn sufficiently broad to protect the interests of every industry in which the element of originality is considered an asset, and I also believe that if such a bill is drawn it will secure the cordial support of each of these industries, even in those fields in which there is to-day a certain amount of apathy. The proper procedure, of course, is first to have competent patent authorities draw such a bill and then to submit this bill to the various trade associations throughout the country for their consideration and constructive criticisms. And, this being done, no difficulty should be met with at Washington, for, having already provided for the protection in this country of the patented products of foreign manufacturers, Congress cannot consistently refuse to extend to American manufacturers the same protection under as reasonable conditions.

MAIL WAGON ACCIDENTS

Due to Disregard of Traffic Rules at Crossings.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

With reference to your editorial comment in THE TIMES of this morning upon the communication of James Stewart, Second Assistant Postmaster General, with regard to the operation of mail trucks in this city, may I be permitted to point out that the fatalities consequent upon the driving of these trucks have not been due altogether to the speed, but more to the disregard of the police traffic regulations at crossings?

During the years these regulations have been in force the public has been slowly educated to take advantage of them by waiting to travel parallel with the vehicular traffic in crossing a street. The mail drivers, however, have, with lofty disregard of the regulations, long been in the habit of breaking through the stream of traffic at right angles, and quite obviously this introduces an element of danger without regard to the speed at which such a course occurs. It is all the more hazardous because it is wholly unlooked for by pedestrians.

A fallacious impression that the mail trucks are above the law seems to have grown up in New York, and this quite without reason or precedent so far as I have been able to ascertain, and Mr. Stewart's assertion that the mails would suffer in service if the present operation is interfered with is but one of the specious pleas for special privilege which are as dangerous to a community as is the personally sought privilege.

Financing of Crops in Europe.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In your issue of yesterday, the 19th, in an article on "Cutting the Cost of Living," you say that I told how the question of agricultural short-term credit for the raising of crops, rather than for permanent improvement of the land itself, had been solved on the Continent of Europe by land mortgage banks.

Your reporter misunderstood my remarks. The European land mortgage banks handle, as the name implies, the mortgaging of land, otherwise known as "long-term credit." The money required for the financing of crops, &c., otherwise called "agricultural short-term credit," is furnished by a different kind of financial organization.

This whole subject, connected as it is with the placing of land mortgaging and agriculture on a better business basis, in which is involved the much wider subject of the betterment of rural life and the permanent welfare and prosperity of our country, is such a great one that I feel a newspaper like yours will wish to present all the facts with entire accuracy.

THE AMBITIOUS PAN-HANDLER.

Up three long flights in that small room of mine,
Unframed there hange a plain "No
Cooking" sign.
So silence keep, if you should chance to see Me buying eggs or sometimes cake or tea,
Spareribs or beefsteak—such-like make my meal.
To-day a chop; to-morrow, say, it's veal.
My frying-pan, warmest of all my friends,
A dainty makes from many odds and ends.
With bulging pockets up the stairs I
creak,
Hungry but fearful, seven nights
a week.
And in my room—exalted attic space!—
Always I fear a step, a peering face.
It seems to me there may be some one looking,
I wait a sniff, a swift "Who's cooking?"
And at the thought my knees begin to shake;
Vainly I wish I'd never fried a steak.
But when I've supped I quit the racking game,
With nerves at rest I work for wealth and fame.
And some day on the bookstands, if you'll look,
You'll see my "Roomer's Guide and Suitcase Cookery Book."

ART NOTES.

Weinberg's Pastels on View—American Pictures at Snedecor's.

At the Hotel Raymond is a collection of exhibitions arranged by the Picturecraft Shop, and, like most of the small exhibitions of this month and next, addressed to the holiday public. Louis Weinberg's pastels are a perfect illustration of what the word pastel conveys to the general public, pictures charming and delicate, in style, pure colors, and looking as evanescent as they are in reality permanent. Three or four character studies of Jewish types are in a sturdier vein, and one head, of an old, bearded man, drawn on rough brown paper, is real and alive and quite vigorous.

Robert Wacik's landscapes have the strength of color that seems to be the Bohemian inheritance. Wacik puts a white house into a patch of sunlight and it blazes whiter than any house could outside of a Bohemian picture, and his shadows are full of hot color. It doesn't add up technically, perhaps, but there it is for those who care for color that blazes and sun that shines. Harriet M. Olcott shows studies of east side life, the originals of illustrations, that also push home certain truths with an emphasis not to be gainsaid. The artist has the true caricaturist's spirit, exaggerating what is characteristic at the expense of what is incidental or general. The old crone, with a single and prominent tooth, in "Driftwood" is concentrated down-and-outness. Her dressy lady, for whom a simple child of natural beauty has been thrown over, is the pure essence of dressiness, just as the discarded child is simpler than simplicity. There is much energy in these studies and much observation of life. The art is used a bit roughly as a means to an end, which is much better than when it is made an end in itself. With the paintings and drawings are shown a number of sculptures by Joseph Krupka, several of them clever carvings in wood.

A group of American pictures is on view at the Snedecor Galleries until Dec. 4. It contains a picture by George Inness of the same period as his "Peace and Plenty;" a "Winter Landscape" by Eastman Johnson, a little square of glowing color by Blakelock, a large water color by D. W. Tryon that holds its own courageously in juxtaposition with full-bleeded oils. There is a good little Lyme landscape by Charles Gruppe, and there is a beautiful "Sheepfold" by Carlton Wiggins, whose translucent shadow and true draughtsmanship will be more fully appreciated by the collectors of the future than they now are.

In the window is a picture that has a perfectly true story as its reason for being. In Wyoming last Summer a couple of children were left alone in their home on the outskirts of a forest, their parents having gone into town. A forest fire announced itself, and it was necessary to make a swift escape. They went to the barn, loosened the halter of a family mare and mounted her without saddle or bridle. The mare ran for all their lives with the children grabbing desperately at her mane, and R. W. Leigh, the well-known painter of Western drama, saw in the incident his opportunity for a story picture, one that would appeal to the Wyoming public perhaps more promptly than to New York, which is forgetting the look of a trusty horse.

Other Western pictures by Mr. Leigh are to be put on exhibition next week at the opening of the new clubhouse of the Rocky Mountain Club.

At the Dudensing Galleries until Nov. 29 is an exhibition of water-color sketches painted by William Prettyman at the Panama Canal last Winter. The topographical character has been scrupulously preserved by the painter, while he also has succeeded in giving his sketches the spontaneity of work done on the spot. The brilliant tropical color is reproduced without garishness, and the series forms a most interesting record of the aspect of the canal before it was filled with water.

OLD MASTERS AT $15 TO $45.

Knellers, Lelys, and Gainsboroughs Cheaper Than Some Wall Paper.

Prices not calculated to flatter the pride of old masters were fetched at a sale advertised as of antique and modern paintings, watercolors and etchings, at Silo's Fifth Avenue Art Galleries last night, to dispose of the collection of art works of Thomas Myers, who, according to the catalogue, is "a Yorkshireman long domiciled in Canada and the United States, with a pure eclecticism of British taste that inclined him to selecting such canvases as those of Sir Godfrey Kneller and Wouwerman." It was explained by the auctioneer, James P. Silo, that Mr. Myers, who is in the seed business in Niagara Falls, was selling his collection because he desired to return to his native England.

Among the old masters whose names were connected with pictures in the catalogue were such celebrities as Sir Godfrey Kneller, Sir Peter Lely, Thomas Gainsborough, and Wouwerman. A "Portrait of a Lady," attributed to Kneller, brought $290; a "Portrait of Dean Swift," according to the catalogue by Sir Godfrey Kneller, and "formerly in King Charles's House, Worcester," brought $15. A portrait of William of Orange, also said to be by Sir Godfrey Kneller, and to have come "from the Guerdan Hall collection," brought almost a record price for the evening—$45—after the auctioneer had suggested that a St. Patrick's Day parade might be headed by some one carrying it.

"So I have had experience both as a Federal and as a State Inspector. It would be well if the inspectors in every State hitched the Federal authority to their State authority. Recently I found some bad tomatoes. I traced the cans containing them to jobbers, and got together two car loads of the stuff. An important canner in Utah pleaded that he be allowed to ship the stuff back to save the packing boxes. I made a contract allowing him to do that. But he bragged in his home town that he wouldn't have to destroy the goods, and belittled the condemnation. So I ripped off my State seals and put on United States seals. And as a Government official I sent a deputy along with the shipment who saw that every can in it was destroyed.

"Now, that shipment of tomatoes was prepared under unsanitary conditions. No power at present can reach such conditions, so long as the food product is not found to be actually contaminated. That is a fatal defect in the Pure Food law which we hope to amend.

"I handled that situation in Idaho by making regulations without specific warrant in law. 'Fine us any amount you want, but don't let the newspapers get the story' was the cry of those whose shops were not sanitary. So I took a camera squad along and had photographs made. When they loomed up in the front pages of the newspapers there was a scurrying to make improvements which mere fines would not have accomplished.

"I entered a Pullman dining car one night and found the attendants asleep on the dining tables. Next morning I looked for their bedding. I found it tucked away in the pantry. I found the food was cooked in a little room full of flies and without ventilation. To-day a fly swatter is part of the equipment of every Pullman porter on any part of his train. The kitchen and dining car attendants do not sleep on the tables. They have sanitary cots. The cots are stowed with the bedding in compartments built underneath the floor. They have been taken out of the pantry.

"The cook has an electric fan to play on him. His helpers also have electric fans. Double screened doors lead from the kitchen to the car, and the windows are all screened. I simply told the Pullman officials what I expected and seized at Pocatello all the food found on every diner that came through till they complied with the order. I told them the food was not fit to serve."

Mr. Wallis will return to Washington to-night for further conferences before returning to his home town, styled "Buzz-less Boise" because of his campaign against the flies there.

COTTIER SALE BRINGS $6,998

Four Old Dresden Ecclesiastical Figures Sold for $320.

The second day of the Cottier sale at the American Art Galleries brought $6,998. C. J. Charles was one of the largest buyers, the marble sculpture going to him, a pair of busts, George IV. and his Consort, bringing $160. A large blue and white Chinese porcelain jar and cover 25 inches high went to Charles for $130; another, of the K'ang-hsi period, 31 inches, for $155, and a pair of Chinese vases, quadrangle shape, with dragon handles painted in colors on a white ground, for $200. For a large famille rose plaque he paid $105, and $112 for a garniture of five Chinese vases.

Four beautiful old Dresden ecclesiastical figures went to W. Wareham Harding for $320, and the same buyer paid $75 for a third Dresden figure, a poet. Miss Elsie de Wolfe paid $53 for three Chinese bowls.

Antique panels, various articles in metal, antique, and Cottier furniture, fireplaces and over-mantles, and boxes of English tiles will be sold this afternoon.

SEES A NEW ERA FOR PURE FOOD LAW

Head of National Association Says Officials Are Now Working for a Fixed Standard.

FALSE LABELS MUST GO

This Will Be Accomplished, Wallis Asserts, Through the Adoption of a New Law Now in Preparation.

The agencies having to do with the enforcement of the pure food law are beginning to work together to a degree thought to be impossible a year ago, according to President James H. Wallis of the National Association of State and Federal Dairy, Food and Drug Officials. Mr. Wallis says this makes the opening of a new era in the enforcement of the laws against adulterated and unfit food. Mr. Wallis is in New York to confer with Ralph M. Easley, Chairman of the Executive Committee of the National Civic Federation upon ways and means to obtain amendments to the present pure food statutes.

At the convention of the National Association of State and Federal Dairy, Food and Drug Officials in Washington last week, President Wallis was authorized to name a committee of three members to work with three members of the Association of Official Chemists and three members of the Bureau of Chemistry in drawing up a new Pure Food law. Mr. Wallis has named the men to represent his organization upon this joint committee. It is planned to submit the new measure, to a committee of the National Civic Federation so that the Federation may decide in advance whether or not to support it upon its presentation to Congress.

At his rooms in the Park Avenue Hotel yesterday Mr. Wallis told newspaper reporters some of the things he hopes to see new pure food law accomplish.

"In the first place," he said, "State officials—I am the Sanitary Inspector and Pure Food Commissioner of the State of Idaho when at home—work in a jumble of confusing State laws. Some corn syrup reaches our State marked 'glucose.' We find that one State requires that this product shall be marked 'glucose' and another that it shall be marked 'corn syrup.' Where they call it glucose we find the people reject it, thinking that it has something to do with glue. And where it is styled 'corn syrup' they welcome it as beneficial.

"We are going to end all that by united action. State officials are together with the Bureau of Chemistry of the National Government for the first time, and so for the first time there will soon be a national standard of food products. When this happens no State will reject products that other States welcome, and no State will tolerate low-standard goods while other States are trying to observe high standards.

"I found a higher type of delegate at our convention this year from the man encountered five years ago. The new delegates were determined, for one thing, to end the use of that fraudulent label, 'Guaranteed Under the Food and Drugs Act.' Jobbers have assured us they accepted the goods we condemned because the Federal Government guaranteed them. We have condemned hundreds of cases of goods, and their owners have protested that we were violating a Federal guarantee.

"Then another thing we must obtain in the new pure food law is a clause giving the proper officials jurisdiction over labels. Fraudulent labeling isn't prevented by the present law, especially in the case of blends.

"Coffee comes to the States in small packages that formerly bore the name of Mocha and Java. As that was a downright fraud, the Pure Food Inspectors prevented it. But now instead you get coffee that you can't tell anything about from the label. It is 'Mother Jones's Coffee,' or some similar brand. Coffee by wholesale is bought in ten grades, and blends are of 'Rio Seven,' for instance, and 'Santos Eight.' We plan to draw an amendment which will abolish the difference between wholesale and retail trade terms and permit the consumer to know as much about the goods he buys as

MISS WILSON GETS HOUSE NECKLACE

Diamond Gift to White House Bride in a Miniature Trunk of Silver with Gold Key.

BRYAN GIVES A TEA TABLE

Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Carnegie a Dozen Silver Plates—Cook Book of Grandmother's Recipes.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.—Miss Jessie Wilson received this afternoon the diamond pendant on its chain of platinum and small diamonds, her wedding gift from the House of Representatives. The necklace was taken by the local jeweler through whom it was purchased and left at the White House just like scores of other gifts being left there every hour of the day, but was accompanied by a message, which read:

The Representatives of the people in Congress send this gift to Miss Jessie Woodrow Wilson, with their sincerest and best wishes, as an evidence of the tender interest and hearty good will of all the people, on the happy occasion of her marriage to Mr. Francis Bowes Sayre, Nov. 25, 1913.

The message was signed by Champ Clark, Oscar W. Underwood, James R. Mann, Victor Murdock, Henry A. Cooper, Robert L. Henry, Phillip P. Campbell, Thomas W. Hardwick, Robert N. Page, Ben Johnson, A. Mitchell Palmer, Richard W. Austin, Edward W. Townsend, H. Robert Fowler, and Walter M. Chandler, committee of the members of the House of Representatives.

The pendant to which the slender necklace is only a detail, is a superb jewel with its central stone a large canary diamond of more than six carats, surrounded by eighty-five smaller stones, all of perfect color and shape. The outline is pear-shaped with seven or nine diamonds at the top, all set in platinum in lacelike design.

The necklace is composed of slender links incrusted in small diamonds with a large stone between the mountings. In all thirty stones enter into the making of the necklace alone. The necklace was inclosed in a jewel case of solid silver in the form of a miniature trunk, which contains three large and five small compartments all lined in orchid pink velvet. Accompanying this were two keys, one of silver, the second a special order of Representative Mann, who practically selected the gift, was of gold marked with the bride's monogram, and a setting of small diamonds.

Other presents received to-day included one dozen silver plates from Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Carnegie, silver compote from Minister from Nicaragua and Mme. Chamorro, silver platter from Minister from Colombia and Mme. Betencourt, a mahogany tea table and chair from Secretary of State and Mrs. Bryan, a Chinese porcelain vase from Secretary of War and Mrs. Garrison, a set of andirons in bronze with scuttle, tongs, and shovel, from Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Houston. A silver vase marked with a large "W" from the Secretary of Labor and Mrs. William B. Wilson.

A cook book containing "All the good old recipes grandmother used to make" is among the wedding gifts. It has been compiled from contributions of best recipes from 450 women, among them wives of Cabinet members, Government officials, Governors of many States, and other official families. Some of the famous old Southern dishes from Miss Wilson's maternal grandmother's cook book have been included in the volume.

Francis B. Sayre arrived at the White House this evening, where he will stay until Sunday, when with his brother, the Rev. John Nevin Sayre, he joins the house party of Justice and Mrs. Hughes, to remain until he and his bride leave for their still guarded retreat, where the first days of their honeymoon are to be passed.

The officers of the U. S. S. Mayflower will give a dinner Monday night for the members of Miss Wilson's bridal party and her house guests.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 20.—A silver service costing $1,500, the gift of women voters of Northern California to Miss Jessie Wilson, daughter of the President, on the occasion of her wedding next Tuesday, was sent to the bride-to-be to-day. EDUCATION BOARD TO ANSWER BUTLER

His Charges Against President Churchill, It Will Contend, Are Unsupported by Facts.

FIGHT TURNS ON MAXWELL

His Supporters, It Is Said, Urge Attack on Churchill—Women Teachers Active in Battle.

While those who signed with President Butler of Columbia University the letter to Mayor Kline opposing the reappointment of Thomas W. Churchill to the Board of Education declined yesterday to add anything to the letter itself, Mr. Churchill's supporters in the board considered the letter at some length.

At a meeting of a majority of the Commissioners, lasting most of the afternoon, a letter to Mayor Kline was drawn up. This will serve as the board's official answer to President Butler's charges. It was not made public last night, as the Commissioners held it would be improper to do so before it had reached the Mayor's office.

It is understood that the letter is brief, and denies totally President Butler's charges that the board has been deteriorating for the past two years and that the merit system of making promotions is in danger.

The members of the Board of Education also considered yesterday an article written by President Butler for The Educational Review. It was held that the data set forth therein can be answered, and will be answered by the board, if Mayor Kline desires it to do so.

Mayor Kline has received a much increased number of letters on the question of selecting a successor to Mr. Churchill or reappointing him since President Butler's letter was published. One from Alfred J. Talley, attorney for Mrs. Bridget Piexotto, the "mother teacher," whose reinstatement after her removal by the Board of Education was recently ordered by the Supreme Court, indorsed Mr. Churchill, and read:

In view of what appears to be an inspired opposition to the reappointment of Commissioner Churchill to the Board of Education, I take the liberty of saying that, in my opinion, the failure to reappoint Mr. Churchill would result in great detriment to the school system of this city.

A considerable part of my recent professional activities have been in opposition to some of the policies of the present Board of Education and its predecessors. It has been necessary for me for several years past to know what the Board of Education has been doing, and how it has been doing it, and my professional attitude has generally and necessarily been one of opposition to many of their writings. My professional attitude has not altered my earnest convictions that under the Presidency of Mr. Churchill the board has made distinct and commendable progress.

What the educational system has needed most is simplification of teaching methods and subjects, more thoroughness, fewer ornamentals, a curriculum based upon the need of practical education, and not upon the pedagogic fads, fancies, and vagaries of the hour.

Your late predecessor knew the defects of the system and designated Mr. Churchill to correct them, and his associates have made a record of accomplishment along progressive lines, and it is inconceivable that the work done by them would be non-negatived by a failure to reappoint the one man who has given so much time and endeavor to so important a work.

Many of the teachers agreed yesterday that the present agitation was really the result of the fight for control between President Churchill and Supt. Maxwell. They were both strong men, they explained, neither of whom had ever been accustomed to yielding to any one else. Then President Churchill mapped out a policy for the supression of Supt Maxwell, and counted on his own reappointment by Mayor Gayner, to carry it out.

A majority of the board, it was said, were in harmony with this idea, and these commissioners had been rather disconcerted by the sudden outbreak of hostility to the President, as soon as it became evident that through the death of Mayor Gaynor he could no longer count on reappointment.

Abraham Flexner, one of those who signed the protest submitted to Mayor Kline by President Butler, was quoted yesterday as being in favor of a radical reorganization of the board and the appointment of educational experts in place of the present "lay" members. Seth Low, who also signed the protest, declined at his home in New Bedford to discuss the nature of the evidence at hand to support the statements it contained.

Otto T. Bannard said he was not accustomed to put his name to petitions without having facts to support the assertions. He referred inquirers to President Butler's Educational Review article for the data upon which the charges were made.

The women teachers have entered the field as an organization and are issuing blank petitions to be signed by those who favor Mr. Churchill. This letter has been sent out by the Interborough Association of Women Teachers:

INTERBOROUGH ASSOCIATION OF WOMEN TEACHERS.
Nov. 11, 1913.

To all Delegates:

Please distribute the enclosed petitions to those of your members as will secure signatures and mail them to Hon. Adolph L. Kline, Mayor, City Hall, New York.

Try, also, to secure letters from citizens endorsing the administration of President Churchill and his co-workers on the Board of Education.

Please mail petitions and letters as soon as possible, since the Mayor must make his appointments this month.

DO IT NOW.

LILLIAN I. POWERS, Secretary.
President, Grace C. Strachan, 1,115 Ocean Avenue, Brooklyn.

Scores of petitions were received yesterday by Mayor Kline as a result of the activities of the women teachers. Each of them had the same printed text, and urged that President Churchill's "progressive policies have borne good fruit" and entitle him to reappointment.

ATTACK STERN AND WINGATE.

Women Object to Their Views on Mothers as Teachers.

A protest against the reappointment of Abraham Stern and Gen. George W. Wingate as members of the Board of Education was sent to Mayor Kline yesterday by the members of the League for the Civic Service of Women.

The league objects to their reappointment on the ground that "by their speeches and through interviews to the press they have clearly shown that their antagonism to married women and mothers in the schools is based on unsubstantiated theory and prejudice." "From the Board of Education," the letter goes on to say, "the public has a right to demand actions based on expert consideration of educational facts and not upon individual theories of domestic life."

The league will hold a meeting on Monday night at Cooper Union "to protest against the action of the Board of Education in Penalizing Marriage and Maternity." The speakers will include Norman Hapgood, Gilbert E. Roe, Mrs. Inez Wholland-Boissevain, Edwin E. Slosson, and Mrs. James Lee Laidlaw. Judge John J. Freschi will preside.

Luncheon for Miss Trevor.

Miss Helen Kierstede Hiss gave a small luncheon yesterday at her home, 48 West Eleventh Street, for Miss Louise Trevor, who is making her début this Winter. The guests included the Misses Alice Haven, Elise Francke, Harriet Paris, Dorothy Taylor, Mildred Dennis, Constance Peabody, Cornelia de Lancey Cammann, Dorothy Chisolm, and Marie Taller.

THE PHILHARMONIC PLAYS

A New Suite by Max Reger—Kramer, Concert Master, Soloist.

A new composition by Max Reger, his "Ballet Suite," Op. 130, was played for the first time in New York at last evening's concert of the Philharmonic Society, and was found interesting and attractive in a measure beyond many of the prolific German composer's works that have been heard here. It is one of his latest—though in the case of one who so frequently bestows new ones on the world it would be dangerous to say that it was his very latest. It had a special interest for the audience of the Philharmonic Society from the fact that it is dedicated to Mr. Stransky, who brought it with him on his return this Autumn to New York.

Reger has dropped or concealed much of his contrapuntal severity in the six movements of this suite, which moves in the imaginary world of a pantomime, and is concerned with the conventional characters of the ballet, Columbine, Harlequin, Pierrot, and Pierette, with a Valse d'Amour, and gives in addition an Entrée and a Finale. There is play of fancy in the six movements, and though the composer uses only a moderate orchestral apparatus he uses it with much skill in gaining varied and delicate orchestral tints. There is something alluring in the amorous languor of the "Columbine" and in the unstable kaleidoscopic harmony of the "Harlequin" with its abrupt and unexpected ending. A 'cello solo is the principal feature of the "Pierrot," but there are many interesting fragmentary suggestions in the orchestral treatment that are left undeveloped. The "Valse d'Amour" perforce invites comparison with certain noted specimens of this genre. It is not without distinction in its insinuating melody, and was immediately called for a second time.

The suite is one of the more interesting of Reger's orchestral works, though far from one of his most pretentious. He has made a small amount of musical idea go a good way in it, but there is enough more than skill and cleverness in it to give it value among the meagre orchestral productions of recent years.

The orchestra played the "Ballet Suite" unusually well, with fine finish, and a full exposition of the rich and delicate orchestration. Mr. Stransky conducted it with obvious zeal and enthusiasm. There was much brilliancy and dash, too, in its performance of the overture to Mozart's "Marriage of Figaro." The last number was Tschaikowsky's Fourth Symphony, with which Mr. Stransky is in fullest sympathy.

The new concertmaster of the orchestra, Mr. Leopold Kramer, made his first appearance here as a solo player in Max Bruch's second violin concerto. It was a praiseworthy performance; not that of a great virtuoso, but intelligent and in many ways musical. Mr. Kramer's tone is not all that it might be in beauty, warmth, or power; nor has his playing all the finish and precision expected from one who devotes himself wholly to the playing of concertos, which it could hardly be expected to have. But he won the approval of the audience, as was made evident.

"CHRISTOFORO COLOMBO."

American Premiere of Franchetti's Opera—Ruffo in Title Role.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 20.—"Christoforo Colombo," a historical grand opera, by Alberto Franchetti, who also wrote "Germania," received to-night its first performance in this country by the Philadelphia-Chicago Grand Opera Company at the Metropolitan Opera House. Titta Ruffo sang the title rôle, and Rosa Raisa, a coloratura soprano, made her first American appearance as Queen Isabella.

The story is unusually simple. The first act takes place in the convent of St. Stephen, Salamanca, where Columbus unfolds to Isabella the wonderful prospect of discovery he has in view; the second, aboard the good ship Santa Maria, from which the first glimpses of America are had, and the third, at the tomb of Isabella, in the Cathedral of Medina, where Columbus dies.

The scenery was elaborate, and principals and chorus were attired in fifteenth century costumes.

WAGNER'S LIFE IN FILMS.

"The Life and Works of Richard Wagner," with a narration and an organ recital, got its first public presentation yesterday afternoon under the direction of Klaw & Erlanger at the New Amsterdam Theatre. The story, which is in four parts, is told in moving pictures, which were made abroad. They start with a view of the boy Wagner, 8 years old, playing for his dying stepfather, and carry the audience through all the trials and triumphs to the first performance of "Parsifal," closing with apotheosis of the dead master surrounded by the great characters he had created.

Among the characters introduced during the unfolding of the photo play are Liszt, Von Bulow, Ludwig of Bavaria.

Yesterday afternoon also William Sulzer made his début as a film actor, the first pictures of him in a photoplay being shown in the Comedy Theatre in Fourteenth Street.

MISS EASLEY'S RECITAL.

Miss Donna Easley gave a song recital, assisted by Mr. Francis Rogers, yesterday afternoon in Aeolian Hall, where there was a large audience drawn, it would appear, more by claims of friendship than by the excellence of Miss Easley's singing. Her light soprano voice has some attractive qualities, but her method and style of singing have not been cultivated to a point enabling her to do justice to the exacting numbers in the program. Mr. Rogers sang artistically, with a nice differentation of the spirit and significance of his selections. Mr. Sprosa played accompaniments well.

"Niobe" by Williams Cap and Bells.

Frank Lea Short of the open-air players has commenced rehearsals for the annual performance by Caps and Bells, the Williams College dramatic club. "Niobe" is to be the offering this year, and the performance will be given at the Hotel Plaza on Jan. 5. The title rôle will be played by Charles W. Brackett, son of Senator Brackett.

Among the players who have volunteered for the benefit to be given in aid of the Widowed Mothers' Fund at the Hotel Astor next Monday afternoon are Clara Palmer, Wellington Cross, Lois Josephine, and Tyler Brooke. Jerome D. Kern, who wrote the music for "Oh, I Say!" has also volunteered his services and will play his own compositions. Among others to appear are Bessie Clayton, Gloria Gray, Joan Sawyer, and Sebastian.

By cable arrangement, the Palace Theatre will present next week the English satire, "Buying a Gun," with Cyril Chadwick and company. This satire is being played in London by G. P. Huntley.

GEN. BOOTH TO MEET ESTRANGED BROTHER

The Past Is Past, and We Ought Not to Keep Alive Ancient Grudges, He Says.

ARMIES WON'T CONSOLIDATE

Talks of New Homes for Girls Where They Can Entertain Male Friends or Be Courted by Them.

Gen. Bramwell Booth, commander-in-chief of the Salvation Army, outlined at the Army Headquarters, in Fourteenth Street, yesterday the plans he has formed for his organization as a result of his visit to this country and Canada. It was evident from his talk that there would be no amalgamation of the Salvation Army and the Volunteers of America, at the head of which is his brother, Ballington Booth, whom he has not seen or spoken to in seventeen years.

"I have written to my brother Ballington asking to see him," said Gen. Booth gently, "and we shall meet. I am going to meet him as my brother, and I hope as my friend. The past is the past, and we ought not keep alive ancient differences or grudges. As for an amalgamation of our two organizations, I do not think he desires that, and I do not want to put him in a position of being obliged to say that it is he who is holding out against that. So I would rather not discuss that matter."

Gen. Booth said the meeting would take place in this city in the next few days. He admitted that he had not been informed by his brother in the latter's letter of any unwillingness on Ballington Booth's part to amalgamate the rival armies, but he said he knew his brother was opposed to that.

"There is much to be said on both sides of the question as to whether or not there is a dissipation of strength in having two great organizations engaged in the same work," explained Gen. Booth. "Christianity has been helped by as much by having its tenets impressed upon different people from different angles as by approaching them with one avenue of appeal. If I had the power, for example, I would not bring to an end the Church of Rome, although I am not in sympathy with its views, but with those of Protestantism, the human mind, the cosmos, and one man receives the truth by entirely different channels than another."

Plans New Homes for Girls.

Gen. Booth said he had grown to like the United States and Canada vastly. He found the Salvation Army here as loyal and efficient as that in England and was determined to call some of its officers to England or to missionary fields in the East in the near future. He was especially gratified by the increase in numbers of the army here and by its spread into new areas.

"One thing we are going to take up in connection with our campaign against vice from this time forth," said Gen. Booth, "is working on a large scale to provide home influences for young girls now lacking it. We are going to establish lodges, hotels, and homes for them on various principles; some conducted on the order of a regular hotel and others more like a private home, but all on lines that will permit of the girls meeting young men whom they may care to meet and ultimately marry.

"I think we shall come out with a semi-boarding house with a mother for every twenty girls. The mother will devote her whole life and service to the interests of those engaged in them. At present many young people who may want to get married have no place to meet and become acquainted except the streets or dance halls, and the marital unhappiness and divorce harvest is the result. If we establish these homes a young man can be brought home by a girl, entertained with tea and talk, and remain there pleasantly for an hour or two."

Gen. Booth said his experience in the Salvation Army, where men and women work side by side both in the ranks and in command, had made him inclined to give women the same privileges as men in the political field also.

Women Good Governors of Men.

"Much to our surprise," he said, "we found that women did just as efficient work as men under conditions of equality in the Salvation Army. We found that the woman with a gift was just as good a governor as the man. Women have been proverbially good governors and managers of men. I deprecate, however, the militant suffragette nonsense as an injury to the suffrage cause itself. My interest in the matter, of course, is purely humanitarian, not political."

Miss Evangeline Booth, the General's sister, commander of the Salvation Army in America, who was present at the interview, explained that she was decidedly in favor of votes for women, although not in sympathy with the militant suffragette movement in England.

One matter in which Gen. Booth considered this country far behind enlightened countries of Europe, he said, was in the prevalence of child labor in the slums of big cities reported to him by the Salvation Army workers.

"This matter is the more important to you in America," he said, "because of the complex population that you receive—population that is often not of the highest level. It is incumbent upon you, therefore, to see to it that the children of this class of your citizens shall not be stunted, but raised to a higher level than that of their parents.

"Your great problems in this country, problems which the Salvation Army must deal with, are those of the slums, of overcrowding and of a mixed population. Wherever the Salvation Army is working there has been a marked decrease of poverty and the attendant moral evils. In England we are decreasing poverty through our recent labor and social legislation—old-age pensions and the like—and I consider the labor troubles there a healthy sign of the stirring and upward striving of British labor. The Britisher is a thriftless beggar, if I may put it so, and the labor laws are doing much to stimulate him into habits of greater thrift."

Army to Invade Far East.

Gen. Booth announced that he was going to organize a series of great new crusades of missionary work for China, Japan, and other Eastern countries, sending out not parties of tens or hundreds, but parties of thousands of Salvation Army workers to devote their lives to the Christianization of those lands.

In expressing his thanks to the people and press of the country for the kind reception given to him, Gen. Booth said: "I came here practically a stranger to the world, having spent most of my life in executive work under my father—a wonderful old fellow, a wonderful old fellow! Of course, I had drunk in some of his spirit, coming into closer contact with him than any other person. But I was not prepared for the wonderful reception accorded me here."

A reception will be tendered to Gen. Booth by Mayor Kline to-morrow morning, on which occasion the Mayor will make a speech of welcome from the steps of the City Hall, and Gen. Booth will reply to him. There will be a parade of 2,000 or 3,000 Salvation Army workers from Chambers Street to the City Hall.

On Sunday morning and evening Gen. Booth will speak in the Lyric Theatre. On Sunday afternoon he will address a mass meeting in Carnegie Hall, at which District Attorney Charles S. Whitman will preside. The honorary Vice Presidents for this meeting include Police Commissioner Rhinelander Waldo, Fire Commissioner Joseph Johnson, Assistant District Attorney Frank Moss, Ogden M. Reid, Chauncey M. Depew, the Rev. Dr. S. Parkes Cadman, the Rev. Dr. Charles H. Parkhurst, and Lloyd C. Griscom.

Gen. Booth will sail for home on the France on Wednesday morning. A parade of Salvation Army workers from many States will escort him to the steamship.

RITUAL MURDER IN PLAY.

Adler Acting in His Stage Version of Beiliss Case to Crowds.

While uptown vaudeville managers have been making offers to Mendel Beiliss, who was charged with the murder of the Russian boy Yuschinsky in Kieff, Jacob P. Adler has dramatized the case and is playing it nightly to packed houses in his East Side Theatre.

Before the case was completed Adler had begun to play his stage version, and as the murder trial progressed, as reported by cable in the newspapers, Adler kept adding to and changing the play to make it conform to the facts. In its present version the play now ends with the acquittal of Beiliss, but for several days the end of the drama came when the man was taken to court charged with the murder of the lad.

The play shows the murder of the boy by Vera Tscheberiak in her den by the gang who are full of hatred for the Jews. The second act shows the home of Mendel Beiliss and his arrest, and the third act takes place in the jail, where the Rabbi of Kieff assures the prisoner that he has the support and protection of the Jews of the entire world. There is a powerful scene in the synagogue in which the Rabbi reads the Hebrew prayer for the man charged with murder, and the last act takes place in the court room and the scene is a terrible arraignment of Russia.

The play, although crude, is very dramatic. Plans are on foot to present the darama for one performance at least in a Broadway theatre.

DOUGHERTY TAKES UP NEW GRAFT CHARGE

Brings In Ex-Capt. Riley's Name in Answering Cohen Confession in Wire-Tapping Scandal.

NO OFFICER NAMED BEFORE

Deputy Commissioner Says Retired Captain Was Never Employed on Wiretapping Cases.

Second Deputy Police Commissioner George S. Dougherty issued a statement yesterday in connection with the charge made by ex-Detective Alexander Cohen, who on Wednesday confessed to District Attorney Whitman and Assistant District Attorney Groehl that he had served as a "go between" in carrying graft from the "wire-tappers" to a retired Police Captain. Cohen said this Captain told him that he took the graft on behalf of persons "higher up" in the Police Department. Dougherty's statement was unexpected, and when it was shown to District Attorney Whitman he glanced over it and remarked: "Nothing to say."

In none of the information given out at the Criminal Court Building has the name of any police official "higher up" been mentioned, nor has the name of the retired Captain referred to by Cohen been given out. In his statement Dougherty asserted that at no time while he was connected with the Detective Bureau, nor at any other time, did ex-Police Capt. Dominick Riley have anything to do with the investigation of the activities of the wire-tappers. Capt. Riley, who retired from the force last week, is now under subpoena to appear before the Grand Jury in the course of the investigation that District Attorney Whitman and Mr. Groehl, his assistant, are conducting into the graft paid by the wire-tappers.

Commissioner Dougherty, it was said at Police Headquarters, considered that it was his duty to make "a statement of some kind" in reply to newspaper stories having to do with the investigation now being made by the District Attorney.

"Referring to the statements alleged to have been made by ex-Detective Alexander Cohen," Commissioner Dougherty says in his statement, "the records of this department show that he was assigned as a detective on Nov. 19, 1910. On Jan. 24, 1912, he was transferred from the Detective Bureau at my request, and he resigned from the Police Department Feb. 16, 1912.

"May 3, 1912, Dominick G. Riley worked under the supervision of the Police Commissioner until Aug. 20, 1912, when he was transferred to the Detective Division. Nov. 6, 1912, he was transferred from the Detective Division, and during this, and at no time prior thereto, did Lieut. Dominick G. Riley engage in the investigation, by my direction, of any wiretapping complaints."

Mr. Dougherty goes on to tell at great length of the efforts made under his direction to arrest all the wire tappers concerned in swindling Simeon M. Jones of Pittsburgh, and others. Beyond what was contained in the statement Commissioner Dougherty refused to say a word yesterday in regard to the charges of the wire tappers that they paid graft to the police.

District Attorney Whitman said that these disclosures would be brought to the attention of the Grand Jury early next week, perhaps on Monday. He would not say whether he expected any indictments immediately, but he did not deny that he expected one, or more, to be returned sometime next week.

DEFENDS FIRE DEPARTMENT

Guerin in Tilt at Meeting of the Women's Federation.

The Public Safety Committee of the New York City Federation of Women's Clubs had its hands full at its meeting at the Hotel Astor yesterday morning. H. F. J. Porter told the committee, of which Mrs. Robert Francis Cortwright is Chairman, of the need of fire walls in loft buildings and fire doors on each floor to afford escape from one building to another in case of fire. Frederick H. Elliott, President of the Travel Club, was there to ask the club workers to aid him and his club in getting pedestrians to show more consideration for vehicular traffic at crossings, and John Brower of the West End Association presented a list of hotels and restaurants which have rigid revolving doors. These, he said, were a menace to life in case of panic.

Chief Guerin of the Bureau of Fire Prevention was present for the Fire Department to talk about the revolving doors, and he grew a little warm as he discussed the subject. He said the Fire Department had done and was doing all it could in the matter, and he asserted that it was not going to be "rushed" by a body of women.

"A suggestion has come to the department that there is a great deal of undue ardor about this matter of collapsible doors," said he. "It has been impressed with the idea that some one has a special interest in them."

"I am the man you are talking about," said Mr. Brower, coming forward amiably, "and I have no personal interest in the matter at all. I am out of business, Commissioner Johnson said the revolving doors were dangerous, and I made up this list."

"We have acted in perfect good faith in the matter," went on Chief Guerin. "We have put on one Inspector—all we could spare. We have conditions to deal with that would make you tremble, and much more important, we think, than collapsible doors. We have found many of the places that you have named adequate. We are not in favor of revolving doors at all, but we will not be budged by any club or any federation of clubs. This is a government of laws and not of men. There has been enough pressure brought to bear on us in this matter to revolutionize all New York.

"There is only one corporation making doors of the collapsible type, and you are throwing this work into the hands of a corporation. We will do whatever we can, but we will not give in to a monopoly. The department has greatly reduced the number of fires in this city in the last two years."

As Chief Guerin departed the committee told him that it thoroughly appreciated the Fire Department and that it did the finest work done in the city.

Mr. Brower said that there was a fire regulation covering revolving doors, and the women decided to send a letter to the Fire Department.

"The Commissioner told me he had the power to close places not complying with the law," said Mr. Brower. "The work has been going on since August, and the worst places have not been closed yet."

SASANOFF HELD FOR TRIAL.

Opera Singer's Child Corroborated Mother's Story of Assault.

After an examination in the Morrisania Court yesterday afternoon Max Sasanoff, singer of the Century Opera Company, was held for trial on the charge of assault preferred by his wife, Rose, who says he knocked her senseless in his mother's home at 915 Prospect Avenue, the Bronx. She had reproached him for compelling her to live in such crowded quarters as his mother's home afforded, she says, and he struck her. Her version of what happened was substantiated by the testimony of their nine-year-old son Michael.

The singer's mother and several other witnesses took the stand to support his denial, but Magistrate Levy decided that a prima facie case had been established. Mrs. Sasanoff is a dental surgeon and a graduate of a Western university.

SLAYERS REVEAL GRAVE OF VICTIM

Two Pennsylvania Farmers Confess Murder of Tax Collector and Lead Police to His Body.

ONE JEALOUS OF VICTIM

Disappearance of S. Lewis Pinkerton Cleared Up by Officials of Media.

MEDIA, Penn., Nov. 20.—The mysterious disappearance of S. Lewis Pinkerton, a Delaware County tax collector, was cleared up to-day when two farm hands confessed that they had killed him, and led the officers to a lonely spot in the woods where they had buried the body. The self-confessed slayers are Roland S. Pennington and George Marsh of Glenn Mills, Penn. Jealousy and robbery were the motives for the killing.

Pinkerton, who was 26 years old, vanished on Nov. 7. He had $300 in his pockets, and it was suspected at once that he had been murdered. The suspicions of the county officers were directed to Pennington and Marsh and they were arrested yesterday.

Under close questioning they admitted that they had killed the tax collector, and in the darkness of the early morning the accused men led the officers to the woods and with the aid of lanterns uncovered the body, which had been thrown into a hole and hidden with leaves. Pinkerton's skull had been crushed and his body riddled with shot.

March, in his confession, said he had suspected Pinkerton of being too friendly with his wife, but the police said they believed there was no ground for the suspicion. March told his suspicions to Pennington and, according to the confession, March went so far as to suggest killing Pinkerton and taking his money. The three men met in a barn and Pinkerton was felled with a blackjack and shot.

Besides being Tax Collector, Pinkerton was the manager of four farms, and the accused men were employes on one of the places.

PRODS NEW HAVEN HEADS.

Must Reorganize Soon or Face Anti-Trust Suit, Says McReynolds.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.—Unless the Directors of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad speed up their plans for reorganization of the company to conform to the Sherman anti-trust law, Attorney General McReynolds intends to take the matter into the courts. This was made plain to-day when the Attorney General, Howard Elliott, Chairman of the New Haven Board of Directors, and John W. H. Crim of the railroad's counsel, talked over the New England transportation problem at the Department of Justice.

Mr. Elliott reported on the work done by the committee of Directors appointed more than a month ago to look into reorganization of the trolley, steamship, and railroad holdings of the New Haven. The Attorney General indicated that he was not disposed to hurry into the courts, but the Directors must show a willingness not only to investigate, but to act.

Mr. McReynolds has taken the position in several anti-trust suits that if possible he prefers to accomplish the end desired without resort to legal proceedings.

It is said in official circles that information has come to Washington that the efforts of Chairman Elliott to meet the requirements of the Government have not been fully supported by the New Haven Directors.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Nov. 20.—The intimation from Washington that the Directors of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad are not in sympathy with Chairman Elliott in his reforms caused surprise here. George Von L. Meyer, Chairman of the Stockholders' Protective Committee, said to-night that he had heard nothing of the sort. Not a Director of the company who resides in Boston could be found.

LATEST CUSTOMS RULINGS.

Conkey & Co. Lose Protest Against Malt Extract Classification.

The United States Court of Customs Appeals has overruled a protest by Conkey & Co., relating to the classification under the Tariff act of 1909, of merchandise classified by the Collector at New York as condensed extract of malt, and as such assessed for duty at the rate of 45 per cent. ad valorem. The importers protested that the product was properly dutiable at 23 cents per gallon as malt extract fluid in casks, or at 20 per cent. as a non-enumerated manufactured article. The Board of General Appraisers sustained the contention of the importers that the merchandise was a non-enumerated product. The court reversed the board, and held the merchandise dutiable as assessed by the Collector.

The court reversed the board in the case of A. J. Coccaro, dealing with the classification of candles under the Act of 1909. The goods were returned for duty by the Collector at 35 per cent. as wax tapers. They were claimed by the importers to be dutiable either at 20 per cent. as unenumerated articles, or at 25 per cent. ad valorem as manufactures of wax. The board sustained the claim for 20 per cent. duty. The court, however, held that the rate of 25 per cent. was controlling.

Hensel, Buckmann & Lorbacher were sustained in a controversy relating to knitted silk mufflers, which were assessed for duty by the Collector at New York, at 60 per cent. as goods of silk. They were claimed dutiable at 50 per cent., as silk mufflers. The board's action in overruling the contention was reversed by the court.

The court overruled a claim of the Morton B. Smith Company, for a discount of 20 per cent. on scrap iron by virtue of the treaty with Cuba. The action of the board sustaining the claim was reversed by the court.

Commissioner Shields 74.

Commissioner Shields observed his seventy-fourth birthday yesterday in his usual fashion by sitting at his desk in the Federal Building, awaiting the arraignment of such offenders against the Federal laws as dishonest postal officials, opium selling Chinamen or post office safe-blowers. He received many congratulations during the day from the Federal Judges and District Attorneys and the staff of the Federal Courts.

A New Novel by H. G. Wells

THE PASSIONATE FRIENDS

"I don't want to become some one's possession!" Around this cry of his heroine Mr. Wells has written his newest novel. We hear her story in the words of the man she loved—the man who loved her. He sets it down—his story and hers—for his son to have as a record of life as it is lived today, and its gropings toward a tomorrow.

DO IT NOW

About That $4,000,000 and Your Part In It.

Mr. Citizen:

Are you really informed about this greatest money raising compaign in the world's history?

Do you know how urgently the money is needed to safeguard the young women and the young men who are flocking into this great metropolis?

Do you realize that it will barely do for this great city as much in proportion as has already been done in cities like Chicago, Philadelphia, Rochester and Toronto?

Have you noticed the sacrifices that are being made by 1,000 of your fellow-citizens who are working harder for the public good than they ever worked in their private business, and by their joint efforts have up to this time secured 5,534 subscriptions, aggregating $2,849,380? No one is being paid for raising this money. The work is being done by public-spirited men and women. You can join this band of workers and help them, at the same time gladdening their hearts by making a subscription at once.

DO YOU KNOW that it is all to be spent right here in this great city?

This is where the money will go:

A building for the Bowery Branch Y. M. C. A., where young men in desperate circumstances are put on their feet and made useful members of society.

A building for the thronging of thousands of young men in the Bronx.

A building for colored men and another for colored women where those who work by day will get moral and educational uplift at night to fit them for useful citizenship.

Boarding homes for the young women who come to our city as strangers to serve in a thousand ways the commercial enterprises of New York.

A building for the nurses who serve the sick of this great city.

A great central building for the Young Women's Christian Association, with its educational and physical privileges, its care of the body and mind as well as the spiritual welfare of the multitudes of young women who will come under its influence.

A similar center in Harlem.

Another on the West Side.

A building for the National Board of the Y. W. C. A., and its training school for secretaries. Special contributions have been received for this building.

A building for the Williamsbridge Young Men's Christian Association.

Another for the Intercollegiate Branch, which cares for multitudes of young students, strangers in New York.

Surely you are interested in this great effort for the uplift of our city. Surely you will help in some degree, large or small. You can do this by filling out the following blank, cutting it out of this paper, and mailing it direct to Campaign Headquarters, 25 Broad Street, or to any member of any campaign committee whom you may know. IN THE BUSINESS WORLD

Japanese Silk Prices Relapse.

A decline followed the recent advance in raw silk prices at Yokohama. Buying was active, however, and the last week's sales totaled 6,000 bales. Reports received from Canton by H. L. Gwalter & Co. told of firmer prices there and excellent buying. Stocks of these silks are light. Tussahs have been more active and higher at Shanghai, but other silks have been quiet. Milan tells of a better demand and an upward tendency in quotations. There has been a steady demand at New York of late, with prices irregular in sympathy with the producing markets.

Unique Way to Advertise.

Something new in advertising schemes was evolved recently by a Western retail jeweler. This dealer wired the lights in his store to a switch that could be operated by a push button outside the entrance. He placed a sign under the button which read, "You can see our store by pushing this button." Many of those who passed in the evening yielded to the suggestion. The power was cut off automatically as soon as the pressure on the button was removed, and only a small amount of electricity was used. The scheme caused considerable comment.

Can't Down Cigar Cutters.

The recent agitation against the unsanitary features of public cigar cutters and the invention of a cigar that eliminates clipping off the end, have apparently gone for nought. An Illinois firm advertises in one of the trade papers that it has placed on the market a combined cigar cutter, match vendor, and match tray which is said to operate more rapidly than any other machine yet invented. According to the manufacturers, this machine will clip the end from the dryest cigar without breaking the wrapper, will vend any brand of safety matches, and is guaranteed for five years.

Ready for Anti-Piracy Meeting.

Everything is ready for the convention of manufacturers and importers which will meet to-day at the Hotel Astor to discuss the evils of design piracy and to formulate a tentative bill to prohibit it. Fifteen speakers, most of them men of commercial prominence, are on the programme, and will deliver brief addresses on various phases of piracy and the recently enacted Kahn law. A very large attendance is expected. Seventeen prominent trade associations have appointed delegates to the meeting. If the business before the convention warrants it, a second session will be held on Saturday.

"Kelly Green" Sweaters Popular.

Sweater salesmen now on the road are sending in satisfactory business. Jobbers in the Middle West are ordering especially well. Despite the fact that prices on the cheaper grades of sweater coats have been advanced, they have sold freely. In general, however, business has so far been best on the higher-grade merchandise. Adaptations of the Norfolk jacket that are shown for next Fall, for both men and women, are popular. Many adaptations of the Russian blouse are shown in women's sweater coats, and are moving well. Maroon, "Kelly green," and Scotch heather mixtures rank well among the popular colors.

Should Not Guarantee Shoes.

An authority on leather said here yesterday that any retailer who sold shoes under a definite guarantee of their wearing qualities not only laid himself open to financial loss, but hurt other dealers as well. There is no way to gauge the wearing qualities of any kind of leather, he said, and two pairs of shoes made from the same hide and trimmings often show a wide variance in their resistance to hard usage. The returning vogue of patent leather shoes will mean loss to retailers who guarantee them, he maintained, for this kind of leather never can be depended on. The authority in question also cited the case of a truckman who wore out three pairs of heavy shoes within the life of a guarantee given on the first pair, and said that if that kind of shoe failed to wear, the lighter footgear worn by the average consumer could hardly guard against the risk entailed in a guarantee.

HUNDRED BEST BOOKS OF THE YEAR

The Committee from the Department of English, Columbia University, comprising Prof. John Erskine, Dr. H. R. Steeves, and Dr. Carl Van Doren, has completed its list of The Hundred Best Books of the year. It contains a remarkable view of the important achievements in literature since the 1st of January, and will be published Sunday, Nov. 30, as the leading feature in the Holiday Number of The New York Times Book Review, which will appear as a supplement to the regular edition of The Times. The list will have an introductory article by Prof. Erskine, which will be followed by comprehensive reviews of each of the books chosen.

Another important feature will be a discussion of four Vital Questions of the Day—Eugenics, Socialism, Feminism, and Psychism. Leading authorities on each of these subjects have been asked to review books selected by themselves from the year's publications on these special themes. Thus, Dr. C. B. Davenport, Director of the Station for Experimental Evolution of the Carnegie Institute, will review a book on Eugenics. Ellen Glasgow, the famous novelist, will review a book on Feminism. Algernon Lee, President of the Rand School of Social Science, will review a book on Socialism. Henry M. Alden, Editor of Harper's Magazine, will review a book discussing the possibility of life after death.

There will be additional contributions from well-known authors of the day, such as Mary S. Watts, Theodore Dreiser, Coningsby Dawson, Jules Guerin and many others who will write on various entertaining and instructive features of the literature of the day.

Of particular importance to the buyers of Christmas books will be the carefully annotated list of the season's gift books. This list has been prepared for the special purpose of answering the question, "What is the most suitable book for a Christmas gift?" and will furnish an admirable guide to the holiday buyer.

This Special Holiday Number of The New York Times Book Review will have an actual net paid sale of over 200,000 copies. It will contain 64 pages and will be illustrated throughout.

BORDEN'S
GRADE A MILK
PASTEURIZED
The Milk For The Baby
Yet sold at a price that makes it available for the whole family.

The farms from which this milk comes are high grade dairies every one of them. Each must score 68 points or better to meet our requirements—8 points above the requirements of the Health Department.

To get this score of 68 points the farmer must have a superior dairy equipment and employ scrupulous dairying methods. In other words, he must do those things that insure clean milk.

When the milk comes to us it is received at one of those wonderful Borden Country Plants that have won the admiration of Sanitarians from all over the country.

It is in these plants that the milk is pasteurized and bottled. It never reaches the city in bulk, but is handled in the pure, clear air of the country.

We would like you to try our Grade "A" Milk Pasteurized. We are proud of it and believe it to be the best milk investment you can make.

You can leave your order with any Borden Wagon, write a postal, or Telephone Franklin 1182 and your service will begin at once.

RETIRED BUSINESS MEN

The promise of an excessive return does not tempt the retired business man. He is anxious to conserve the fruits of his labors—to avoid taking uncalled-for chances. Before he makes an investment he insists upon evidence of strong security value and prompt interest payment. Every man should always take this same attitude toward investment—it pays best in the long run. Primary Considerations

The normal income tax of 1% amounts to only 50 cents on the annual interest of a 5% bond of $1,000 denomination.

The tax exempt feature alone should not, therefore, influence the selection of investments.

The primary considerations are still safety, marketability and fair income return.

Our current Investment List 210 includes bonds combining these features.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Traders a Trifle Less Idle—Prices Recede—The Frisco Investigation.

Stocks became a little more active and a little weaker yesterday, but at the same time trading was stagnant much of the day. There was no heavy selling or large buying in any quarter of the list but scattered liquidation and tired traders' sales sufficied to carry prices down fractionally. Among the stocks which figured most largely in the day's small total Amalgamated Copper was the one to suffer most. Emphasis was laid upon the very slack demand for copper which has been forcing concessions in prices, but there were no new developments yesterday along this line. Interest was taken in the outline of Provisional President Huerta's message to Congress, which was cabled from Mexico City, but this interest appeared more academic than practical. After having for a considerable period held itself in a state of expectancy regarding the Mexican situation looking from day to day for some startling happening in that quarter the stock market has now drifted into an attitude of indifference toward the Mexican problem in which it seems as a matter of fact to be expecting nothing to happen there so far as any change in our relations with Mexico are concerned. It is possible of course that a quick awakening from this attitude will come, but the market was not disposed yesterday to look for any such change.

Money grows easier and offers increased encouragement to corporate borrowers who have financing to do in the near future. The New York Connecting Railway issue guaranteed by the New Haven and by the Pennsylvania was yesterday's contribution to the supply of new securities. The bonds were offered on a 4.80 per cent. basis, the same rate at which a Chicago & North Western subsidiary issue was offered a few weeks ago and were nearly all taken before the end of the day. The financial community was free yesterday from the rumor mongering of the previous day which was the cause of so much inconvenience to the houses whose names were wantonly used, but which fortunately failed to bring about the disturbance which apparently it was intended to create. The statement regarding the matter issued by the Stock Exchange on Wednesday contributed apparently to the quieting of these rumors whose disappearance was perhaps the best proof that they were unfounded.

The financial community was not so much preoccupied with other matters that it did not have time to discuss with much interest the facts which are being brought out in the hearing by the Interstate Commerce Commission into the causes which led up to the receivership of the St. Louis & San Francisco Railroad. It cannot be said that Wall Street was surprised by the facts which this investigation is bringing out. What the inquiry is doing is to supply definite figures in respect to transactions about whose general character the financial community has long been fairly well informed. There may be bankers and railroad men who can so evenly hold the scales of fairness that their judgment would in no wise be warped by the chance of large personal profits through the sale of properties to a corporation in which they are Directors and of whose stockholders they are in effect trustees. But even under such conditions this double role in the management of corporations should not be attempted because it is necessarily open to suspicion. It is natural that the financial community should be regretting the facts which this Frisco inquiry is bringing into clear relief if for no higher motive than that they necessarily tend to lessen confidence in corporation management. Inferences from such facts are not as a rule drawn discriminatingly and as a consequence corporations as a whole suffer to some extent. It will not be surprsing if the facts being brought out in this Frisco investigation should strengten the sentiment in favor of greater publicity in respect to all essential facts bearing on such inter-corporate transactions as were involved in the expansion of the Frisco system.

FINANCIAL NOTES.

Time for the payment of the first instalment of 25 per cent. of the amount payable under the plan of reorganization of the Southern Iron and Steel Company has been extended until the close of business on Dec. 15. The Guaranty Trust Company and the United States Mortgage and Trust Company are receiving payments.

The Bankers' Club, an organization of employers of the Bankers' Trust Company, has organized for the coming year by electing H. D. Burrell, President; H. H. Martin, Vice President; A. J. Lins, Secretary, and R. G. Forbes, Treasurer. The election occurred at a dinner held at the Fifth Avenue Restaurant, which was attended by 160 members of the club.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Brooklyn Union Catching Up.

Directors of the Brooklyn Union Gas Company yesterday declared in addition to the regular quarterly dividend another extra semi-annual payment of 1 per cent. on the stock, making a total of 5 per cent. extra which has been paid since this plan for reimbursing stockholders for three poor dividend years was adopted. After paying 2½ per cent. in 1904 and 3½ per cent. in 1905 the dividend was cut to 3 per cent. In the year following, when the reduction in the price of gas by legislative enactment was under discussion, no payment was made on the stock, and in 1908 only 5½ per cent. was paid. Since then the company has maintained a 6 per cent. rate.

Stockholders who thought that the prosperity of the company justified them in demanding something more than 6 per cent. were told in 1912 that the Directors had decided to bring up the average rate since 1905 to 6 per cent. by declaring 2 per cent. extra each year until the 9½ per cent. which the stockholders lost in the three years of reduced payments had been made up. With yesterday's declaration all but 4 per cent. has been paid. A minority committee representing a large amount of stock is now fighting to get a still larger return on the ground that the earnings warrant a larger regular dividend.

Making the Stockholder Nervous.

While the reluctance of capital to buy securities in recent months has been evident the world over, brokers who were discussing yesterday the extreme dullness which has restricted new issues in this country pointed out that two good reasons for the lack of confidence shown by American investors have been furnished in recent weeks by the disclosures of the methods followed in putting together the New Haven and the St. Louis & San Francisco systems.

New Haven Meeting To-day.

Although the next quarterly dividend on New York, New Haven & Hartford is not due until Dec. 30, the Directors are expected to declare it at a meeting in Boston to-day. Moreover, they are expected to lower the rate established last June, when the long-time 8 per cent. dividend was reduced to 6 per cent. At to-day's meeting the Directors will make the rate 4 per cent. If Chairman Elliott's recommendations are adopted. The New Haven will not have any margin left after the payment of even this moderate rate unless earnings soon make a turn for the better. The two cuts in the dividend will cost the stockholders in the aggregate $7,200,000 a year, but will, of course, lighten the company's heavy load to that extent and facilitate the work of rehabilitation, which is being carried on as fast as the company's finances will allow.

Copper Shares Attract Bears.

Of the list of stocks which are speculative favorites only Amalgamated and American Smelting & Refining ended yesterday's session with declines in excess of a point. The dominant feature of the day was "slow" selling, but with the exception of these copper issues, the demand for stocks was extensive enough at intervals to reduce losses before the close. The Street knew on Wednesday that copper metal had been depressed nearly 1½ cents a pound from the price previously quoted by the large selling interests, but the market that day proved impervious to numerous disturbing matters. The recession in the price of copper metal lost none of its forcs as a bearish item, however, by being left over night for recognition, and it was supplemented by cable despatches saying that miners at the Rio Tinto properties in Spain had gone back to work after a strike of several weeks. The Rio Tinto mines do not turn out a great deal of copper as related to world production, yet the fact that their quota would be added to the supplies in refiners' hands occupied a prominent place in gossip of the Street.

Oil Shares in Fewer Hands.

Although there has been a very active market for Standard Oil subsidiary shares in the past year, records go to show that holdings have been concentrated instead of being distributed more widely than in 1912. Reports made to Dow, Jones & Co. from twenty-one companies in the Standard Oil group show that the total number of shareholders in these concerns on June 30, 1912, was 90,468, while on the same date this year the same stocks were owned by 82,328 shareholders. Standard Oil of New Jersey, which is looked upon with especial favor by investors, gained 450 shareholders, and there were also slight additions to the number of owners of the stock of the Standard Oil of New York and Standard Oil of California but the losses were recorded for the others. This is the way some of the issues stood when the two years were compared:

	Stockholders.
Atlantic Refining	4,657	3,971
Cumberland Pipe Line	3,663	2,792
Eureka Pipe Line	4,546	3,899
Solar Refining	4,469	3,117
South Penn. Oil	4,628	3,605
Standard Oil of California	5,357	5,542
Standard Oil of New Jersey	5,759	6,201
Standard Oil of New York	3,427	3,493
Waters-Pierce	5,009	1,891

Since the dissolution of the Oil Trust, eleven of the former subsidiaries have made capital increases aggregating $146,500,000, of which $106,100,000 was distributed as stock dividends.

A Little Cheer in Wall Street.

There was a little more cheer in commission house discussion of conditions in the Street and out yesterday, although there was little more activity in the stock market than on previous days this week. Disturbing rumors of firms being in trouble were still heard, but not with the frequency of the previous day, and they were lacking in plausible features. None of them received a respectful hearing, and the Street turned its attention to matters of greater moment as influential on the market. The steel trade was discussed seemingly with less attention to the discouraging factors than to the outlook for a revival of buying after a time. The money market was examined and found satisfactory. Chances of an early solution of the currency problem at Washington were considered and found to be no more unfavorable than they were a week ago, and so the Street took a little heart for better things by and by.

OUTSIDE SECURITIES

Curb Market Activity Confined to a Few Issues and Prices Move Irregularly.

Lessened trading occurred throughout the market on the Curb yesterday except in the case of British American Tobacco and Riker-Hegeman new stock. The last named was not recognized officially by the Curb Association but transactions were carried on in it to the amount of about 2,700 shares at 6¾ to 6⅞. A small fraction below the closing price of Wednesday, British American Tobacco lost half a point on a larger volume of trading than in some days. Standard Oil of New Jersey closed unchanged, but further large advances were reported in some of the other important oil shares.

Transactions reported were:

SENATE TO TACKLE THREE MONEY BILLS

Must Evolve Cohesive Plan from Measures Bristling with Differences.

DEBATE BEGINS NEXT WEEK

Currency Committee, Unable to Agree, Decides to Let Upper House Solve the Problem Itself.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.—All hope of inducing the Banking and Currency Committee of the Senate to arrive at even the appearance of an agreement on the Owen-Glass bill ended at the committee's brief session this morning. The Senators then agreed that any attempt to bring together the variously phrased items even on phases of the bill over which no fundamental disagreement had arisen would be a mere waste of time. They therefore decided to throw the whole subject into the Senate embodied in three separate bills and let the Senate piece together a coherent measure to suit itself.

The three bills will be the Owen-Glass measure as it passed the House, for which absolutely no support has been found in the Senate committee; a slightly modified form of the House bill, which has the support of Democrats of the committee, and a bill differing from the house measure in every fundamental particular and having the support of the five Republicans and one Democrat, Mr. Hitchcock of Nebraska. The House bill will be reported perfunctorily without recommendation, and the two other bills will be embodied in the argumentative views of the two halves of the committee.

What the Bills Provide.

All three of the proposed bills contemplate the issuance of a currency secured by the prime commercial paper held by the banks of the country. Each proposes the establishment of reserve banks, which will issue the currency in exchange for commercial paper to the banks which will hold the reserves behind their deposits, mobilized for use in any emergency, and which will rediscount the paper held by banks in the system, thus keeping available always ample credit and currency for use to ward off financial crises. Each bill proposes to put the entire system under the control of a Federal Reserve Board, to be appointed by the President.

Although agreeing as to the purposes to be accomplished by the proposed legislation, the three plans differ in almost every point in attempting to carry out these purposes. As it passed the House the Owen-Glass bill proposed the creation of twelve regional banks. The Democrats of the Senate committee cut that down to eight, the minimum number the President was willing to accept. The Republicans reduced the number to four, holding that the smaller number could concentrate more effectively the reserves of the country.

The twelve regional banks proposed by the House bill would be owned by the banks, through compulsory subscription to the stock, and the banks would elect six of the nine Directors of each regional institution. This plan was retained by the Democrats of the Senate committee, although it was further provided that if the banks did not furnish enough capital to run the system the stock might be sold to the public.

On this point Senator Hitchcock and the Republicans departed from the Administration theory of creating a "bank of banks" and materially changed the bill. They provided that the reserve banks' capital should be subscribed by the public, the banks paying whatever part the public would not take, and that the Government, through the Federal Reserve Board, should appoint five of the nine directors of each regional bank. This was the proposition which split the Senate committee into two camps.

National Bank Reserves Reduced.

Each of the bills materially reduces the present reserve which national banks must hold against deposits. The House bill would fix the reserve at 12 per cent. for country banks and 15 per cent. for banks in present reserve cities. These rates were retained by the Administration forces in the Senate committee, but the Republican wing cut down the reserves of the city banks to 15 per cent.

In the House bill the paper made eligible for rediscount and as a basis for currency is commercial paper, based on actual merchandising transactions, maturing in not less than ninety days. This provision was retained by the Democrats in the Senate committee, but the Republicans broadened it materially. Under their bill a part of the member banks' rediscounts may be made in paper maturing up to six months. The provision gives the advantage to banks with small capital, which have little so-called short-time paper.

Under the House bill and the draft by the Senate committee Democrats, the regional bank Directors would have discretion as to rediscounting for member banks without limit. In the Republican bill the right is given to each member bank to obtain rediscounts up to the full amount of its capital, and, under a tax, to twice that amount.

The gold reserve to be held by the regional banks in their vaults and in the Treasury against the new circulation is fixed at 33 1-3 per cent. in both the House bill and the measure drawn by the Senate committee Democrats. The Republican draft, however, provides for a 35 per cent. reserve, with a tax on reserves below that figure down to a minimum of 25 per cent. The House bill provided for redemption of the new notes in "gold or lawful money" at the Treasury or at the reserve banks. The Owen amendment would make the notes redeemable in gold at the Treasury and gold or lawful money at the banks, and the Republican draft provides for a straight gold redemption in both instances.

Loans on Farm Mortgages.

Both the House bill and the Owen bill would allow country banks to loan on one-year farm mortgages. The Republicans amended this to allow banks to loan one-third of their time deposits on five-year farm mortgages.

The Republicans eliminated from the bill a provision which would have required national banks to maintain separate departments to handle savings account business. Numerous other differences, principally on minor matters or relating to the language of the measure, are apparent.

To prevent a disturbance of financial conditions while bank reserves are being shifted to the proposed new regional banks, the Owen bill would provide that banks may deposit commercial paper and currency as part of their reserve, under certain conditions. The Hitchcock-Republican bill would extend the life of the Aldrich-Vreeland Emergency law for another year.

The Democratic Steering Committee decided to meet to-morrow to arrange a programme for the debate, which probably will begin early next week. The programme will be merely advisory, however, for under the rules of the Senate there is no way to end debate except by exhausting Senators. With three bills before the Senate, each of them with irreconcilable differences, it is certain that the debate will take a wide range and weeks will run into months before the final vote is reached.

WHY BANKERS ARE BARRED.

Glass, in Princeton Speech, Explains Wilson's Stand on Money Bill.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 20.—Representative Carter Glass defended the Administration currency bill in a speech here this evening. He said its object was to free the country of the tendency which money has at present to drift to New York, where it is used "to gamble in the stock markets."

All bankers who thought that the Federal Reserve Board of six men to be established at Washington would contain representatives of the banks, Mr. Glass said, were foredoomed to disappointment. He had been in favor of allowing bank representation on the board, he said, until he and five bankers had a conference with President Wilson, who defied them to show him an instance of any Government board which included private representation. They were unable to do so.

As to the proposed division of the earnings of the Federal Reserve Banks, Mr. Glass defended the Administration scheme on the basis that the Government had to give the bankers some incentive to earn money for the Government as well as for themselves, which would not be true if the measure gave to the bankers the first 60 per cent. flat of the earnings.

The contention of Mr. Vanderlip that the money issue provided for by the bill was "Fiat Money" was characterized by Mr. Glass as foolish, inasmuch as it was based upon commercial assets, a paper issue, with a backing of gold, the funds of the regional banks and the money of the stockholders—a backing much stronger than that of the present system. He added that one banker had told him yesterday that the backing was "too good and ought to be lowered."

Mr. Glass eulogized President Wilson and his Administration, and a sympathetic audience applauded every mention of the President's name.

While in Princeton Mr. Glass is being entertained by Edward L. Howe of the Princeton Bank and Prof. George B. McClellan, former Mayor of New York City.

BEST MOTOR ROUTE TO CAMBRIDGE GAME

Good Going Most of the Way to the Stadium—Details of 234-Mile Run.

For the many motorists who will make the occasion of the Yale-Harvard football game to-morrow a reason for a trip to Boston and Cambridge, the Touring Department of the Automobile Club of America has inspected the various routes and picked out the roads which give the best conditions. By following the itinerary given below the motorist will find good going practically all the way from New York to the Stadium. A convenient night stop may be made at Worcester, where good accommodations will be found, and from which it is a comfortable morning run to Cambridge, although the entire trip may, of course, be made in one day. The total distance is 234 miles.

Broadway, Central Park West, and Seventh Avenue should be followed to the 145th Street bridge over the Harlem; then east 149th Street, Mott Avenue, and the Grand Concourse into Fordham Road. The course is then over the railroad and under the elevated along Pelham Avenue and into Pelham Parkway, across the White Plains Road, the Washington Bridge, the railroad and the Bartow Bridge and through the crossroads. Then the autoist should take the right fork and later bear left and turn left into Main Street, New Rochelle. There is then quite plain sailing through Larchmont, Mamaroneck, Port Chester, Greenwich, Mianus, Stamford, and Noroton. At Darian the route bears right and at the water trough a turn is made to the left, following Wall Street to Main Street in Norwalk. The run is then through Westport and across the bridge, bearing right under the railroad and at once turning left into Southport. A mile and a half further on the autoist goes through Fairfield, and at the memorial water trough should turn left into Park Avenue and at once turn right into Washington Avenue. In Bridgeport the pilgrim takes the second turn left into Noble Avenue, and then the second turn right into Barnum Avenue, following it to Stratford. Then the run is through Bairds Corners and Milford, and enters New Haven by way of Davenport Avenue, Oak Street, Broad Street, George Street, College Street, and Chapel Street. The distance to New Haven by this route is seventy-five miles.

From New Haven the route goes through Montowese, North Haven, Wallingford, Meriden, and Berlin into Hartford, and then through East Hartford, Windsor, East Windsor Hill, Warehouse Point, Enfield, Thompsonville, and Long Meadow into Springfield. Leaving Springfield, caution should be observed after passing North Wilbraham Station. A turn to the left is made under the railroad and then at once to the right, crossing and leaving the trolley line and then following trolley tracks, crossing a bridge and passing under the railroad into Palmer. There the autoist must turn sharp left and at a school turn right and drive carefully under the railroad, then on, passing under the railroad again and through West Warren. Then the run goes through Warren, West Brookfield, Brookfield, East Brookfield, Spencer, Leicester, and Cherry Valley into Worcester. The route is then quite clear through Shrewsbury, Northboro, Marlboro, South Sudbury, Wayland, and Weston to Boston.

The belated motorist or he who does not wish to run into Boston before the game may go direct from Weston to Cambridge, cutting off eight miles. To do this take the straight road in Weston at the church, avoiding the road to the right; cross the railroad at Stony Brook Station, follow the trolley through Waltham, cross the railroad at Beaver Brook Station, then run over the railroad and, at the second turn left into Mount Auburn Street in Watertown. Bear right over the railroad at Mount Auburn Station, at the cemetery take the right fork into Brattle Street, and then the right fork again, passing Longfellow's house. Take the left fork into Mason Street and the second turn right at the Washington Elms into Garden Street, and so straight on to the common in Cambridge.

AUTO DEALERS ORGANIZE.

State Association Will Watch for Inimical Legislation at Albany.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Nov. 20.—More than 200 automobile dealers at a meeting here today formed the Automobile Trade Association of New York State. The delegates feel that there is urgent need for an organization of this kind, due to the condition which arose last year, when nearly forty bills were introduced in the Legislature, all detrimental to automobilists.

The meeting was presided over by Arthur M. Day, President of the Automobile Dealers' Association of New York City. The object of the new organization is to foster the automobile trade, promote good roads, aid in the enactment and maintenance of uniform, consistent, and beneficial automobile laws, and defeat legislation detrimental to the automobile trade.

Headquarters will be established in connection with the Automobile Dealers' Association of New York City. A certificate of incorporation will be filed immediately, and a meeting for the adoption of the constitution and by-laws will be held here Dec. 2.

NO FUNDS, SAYS SMITH.

So Dock Commissioner Would Halt Brooklyn Condemnations.

Dock Commissioner R. A. C. Smith introduced in the Board of Estimate yesterday a resolution which may result in delaying the water front improvements in Brooklyn for years. It provides for the discontinuance of condemnation proceedings for property along the Brooklyn water front known as Parcels 1, 2, 3, and 4, between Fifty-seventh Street and Sixty-first Street, "until such time as the marginal railway is in operation, and the water front conditions in that vicinity have been readjusted." Commissioner Smith explained that the department was handicapped by lack of available funds. He said:

"Instead of having $70,000,000, as was believed in 1911, the department is limited to about $15,000,000, of which $4,000,000 will be required for improvement and building of long piers at West Forty-sixth Street, and a large part of the balance for marginal railroad and terminal facilities in South Brooklyn; so that there appears to be no funds available for the acquisition of this property or its improvement.

"In view of this situation, and taking into consideration the large amount of money which the city is about to spend for the marginal railway and terminal facilities in that section of Brooklyn, I recommend that the condemnation proceedings be discontinued until such time as the marginal railway is in operation and water front conditions in that vicinity have been readjusted."

There was opposition to the resolution on the part of representatives of the property owners, who said that thousands of dollars had been expended to aid the city in arriving at a correct valuation, and that to stop proceedings now would be unfair and cause a further loss to property owners. The matter was adjourned for a week.

COAST FUEL FINE STANDS.

Norcross Must Pay $2,000 and Produce Books or Go to Jail.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 20.—The sentence of an indeterminate prison term and $2,000 fine imposed in the case of David C. Norcross, Secretary of the Western Fuel Company for contempt of court in failing to produce the books of the company before the Federal Grand Jury, was upheld to-day in the United States Circuit Court of Appeals. The prison sentence will not be enforced, however, if the books are produced before Dec. 20, although the fine stands in any event.

Eight officers and employes of the company are under indictment for alleged fraud amounting to $1,000,000 in drawback duties on imported coal. They will be placed on trial on Jan. 9.

These suits and the Diggs-Caminetti white slavery cases precipitated the charges of interference against Attorney General McReynolds, made by former District Attorney McNab, and the latter's resignation.

COMMODITIES MARKETS

The grain markets were dull, with net price changes of only fractional amounts and of no significance. Wheat, in fact, ended the day with practically no alteration from Wednesday's close, while corn was ⅛c. down for some options and steady in others. Oats was firm, to the extent of declines of from 5 to 11 points occurred under slow selling. Cotton oil and provisions eased off.

WHEAT.

Price changes in the wheat market were within an extremely narrow range yesterday, and net changes of price were unimportant. The European markets were firmer, with reports of continued light offerings from leading exporting countries and some anxiety regarding future supplies, but good rains were reported in India, the Argentine situation has assumed a more favorable outlook, and an estimate was in circulation placing the total grain crops in Russia at 320,000,000 bushels over last year's yield.

The domestic situation was again rather bearish, as receipts in the Northwest continued to run ahead of expectations, and stocks in Minneapolis have increased 400,000 bushels so far this week, while Duluth has gained 716,000 bushels. Advices from Minneapolis reported fair sales of cash wheat, but The Northwestern Miller said that flour sales fell off appreciably during the past week, and that buyers were generally contending for lower prices. Argentine exports for the week are estimated at 400,000 bushels, compared with 488,000 bushels last week and 1,000,000 bushels last year.

In the local cash market No. 2 red Winter wheat was quoted at 97½c, cost, insurance, and freight, New York export basis, and 99c, free on board; No. 1 Northern Duluth, 96¼c, free on board.

CORN.

The corn market was steady, but there was an absence of more than a moderate demand, and after an early advance of ⅛ to ⅜c prices developed an easier tone, and at the close were net unchanged to ⅛c lower. Offerings of new corn in the West were said to be somewhat more liberal, and the cash demand from the Southwest was less active. Argentine exports for the week were estimated at 2,100,000 bushels, compared with 2,525,000 the previous week and 5,236,000 last year.

In the local cash market old No. 3 yellow corn was quoted at 83c, elevator, domestic.

OATS.

The oats market was inactive and without special feature, and, in absence of aggressive operations, prices moved within a narrow range, closing net unchanged for the day. Receipts were moderate at Western points, but the demand was also light, and the cash situation showed little change.

The local cash market was quiet, standard white being quoted at 46c. to 47c.; No. 2, 47c. to 47½c.; No. 3, 45½c. to 46c.; No. 4, 44½c. to 45c.; ordinary clipped white, 44½c. to 46½c.; fancy clipped white, 47c. to 48c. all elevator.

COTTON.

The cotton market sold off yesterday in anticipation of full ginning returns from the Census Bureau at the opening this morning and on reports of a slack spot demand. General business was not active, and much of the trading seemed to reflect switching between months, or a readjustment of such commitments following the revision of spot differences on Wednesday. The close was barely steady at a net decline of 5@11 points.

The opening was steady at an advance of 2@12 points, with December lending on covering and a scattered long demand. It was realized that the changes in differences made by the Revision Committee had more bearing upon parities between the local contract and other markets than upon the general course of prices, and the market soon turned easier owing to unfavorable trade reports and a feeling that the Census Ginning figures at the opening to-day would help the larger estimates of the crop. There was enough covering or trade buying to cause moderate reactions from time to time, but the general course of prices was downward, and the close was within a point or two of the lowest.

According to latest rumors, the completed returns of one of the prominent small statistical bureaus makes the ginning to Nov. 14 10,307,000 bales. The talk in local circles suggested an impression that the census report this morning would be in the neighborhood of 10,400,000 bales, thus indicating a ginning between Nov. 1 and Nov. 14 of a little over 1,000,000 bales. Such returns would show a greater volume of ginning for the first half of November this year than during any year since 1906, and bearishly disposed traders were inclined to compare with that season when only 9 per cent. of the crop had been ginned to Nov. 14. Southern spot markets as officially reported were generally 1-16@⅛c lower.

The range of contract prices in the local market was as follows:

The local market for spot cotton was quiet and 10 points lower at 13.60c for middling upland; sales, nil; delivered on contract, 1,300 bales.

COTTONSEED OIL.

The cottonseed oil market was moderately active and rather unsettled. The near positions were firmer owing to small offering and covering, but while there was considerable selling in the late positions, believed to be against Southern crushers, at the close were lower, the decline was held in check by fairly active buying of May, believed to be for Western account.

The provision market was firm early, in sympathy with the upturn in the hog market, but late in the day there was quite active selling of lard and ribs, and these markets developed an easier tone, although pork was relatively steady. Receipts of hogs at Chicago were 23,000; estimated for Friday, 20,000. Kansas City received 10,000 and Omaha 9,800.

COFFEE.

The coffee market declined 12 to 18 points at the opening, and during the first part of the day was heavy as a result of very disappointing developments in the French market, where prices were sharply lower, and influenced by continued liberal receipts in Brazil and further decline in the cost and freight market. Private cables from Havre said that the decline there was due to aggressive operations on the part of bears, and at the close there was a partial rally in that market. The undertone was still rather feverish, but strong interests were on the buying side, and it was thought that if no further unfavorable developments occur in Brazil the situation would be much healthier, as there has been heavy liquidation in all the leading markets as well as heavy purchases of cost-and-freight coffee in Brazil.

The local spot market was slightly lower, with Rio 7s quoted at 9¾c.

COMMODITIES MARKETS

The grain markets were dull, with net price changes of only fractional amounts and of no significance. Wheat, in fact, ended the day with practically no alteration from Wednesday's close, while corn was ⅛c. down for some options and steady in others. Oats was firm, to the extent of declines of from 5 to 11 points occurred under slow selling. Cotton oil and provisions eased off.

WHEAT.

Price changes in the wheat market were within an extremely narrow range yesterday, and net changes of price were unimportant. The European markets were firmer, with reports of continued light offerings from leading exporting countries and some anxiety regarding future supplies, but good rains were reported in India, the Argentine situation has assumed a more favorable outlook, and an estimate was in circulation placing the total grain crops in Russia at 320,000,000 bushels over last year's yield.

The domestic situation was again rather bearish, as receipts in the Northwest continued to run ahead of expectations, and stocks in Minneapolis have increased 400,000 bushels so far this week, while Duluth has gained 716,000 bushels. Advices from Minneapolis reported fair sales of cash wheat, but The Northwestern Miller said that flour sales fell off appreciably during the past week, and that buyers were generally contending for lower prices. Argentine exports for the week are estimated at 400,000 bushels, compared with 488,000 bushels last week and 1,000,000 bushels last year.

In the local cash market No. 2 red Winter wheat was quoted at 97½c, cost, insurance, and freight, New York export basis, and 99c, free on board; No. 1 Northern Duluth, 96¼c, free on board.

CORN.

The corn market was steady, but there was an absence of more than a moderate demand, and after an early advance of ⅛ to ⅜c prices developed an easier tone, and at the close were net unchanged to ⅛c lower. Offerings of new corn in the West were said to be somewhat more liberal, and the cash demand from the Southwest was less active. Argentine exports for the week were estimated at 2,100,000 bushels, compared with 2,525,000 the previous week and 5,236,000 last year.

In the local cash market old No. 3 yellow corn was quoted at 83c, elevator, domestic.

OATS.

The oats market was inactive and without special feature, and, in absence of aggressive operations, prices moved within a narrow range, closing net unchanged for the day. Receipts were moderate at Western points, but the demand was also light, and the cash situation showed little change.

The local cash market was quiet, standard white being quoted at 46c. to 47c.; No. 2, 47c. to 47½c.; No. 3, 45½c. to 46c.; No. 4, 44½c. to 45c.; ordinary clipped white, 44½c. to 46½c.; fancy clipped white, 47c. to 48c. all elevator.

MRS. HAVERTY WINS FIGHT WITH CABMEN

She Has Her Guards Hire Public Hacks That Take Places of Her Taxicabs.

DRIVERS WOULDN'T MOVE

Lawyer for Cab Owner Threatens Criminal Proceedings Against Those Fighting His Client.

Mrs. James T. Haverty, who has been fighting against striking chauffeurs to operate her taxicabs, faced a new danger yesterday, but she overcame it. Public hackmen tried to pre-empt the stands before the Belmont and Murray Hill Hotels, and they would have succeeded but for a ruse. Ordinarily the "Fighting Widow," as some of the striking chauffeurs have named her, uses thirty or more cabs for the hotel trade. But during the last few days she has been able to send only from twelve to twenty to these stands. So the stands were deserted at intervals. The public hackmen took prompt advantage of the opening and put their cabs in front of the hotel entrances.

They stood there while Mrs. Haverty walked up and down on the pavement trying to think of some way of dispossessing them. Her lawyer, John W. Browne, applied for help to the Bureau of Licenses and to the police, but neither would aid him. Then Mr. Browne applied to the Yorkville Police Court, where Magistrate Nolan issued summonses which were served on the hackmen. Then the police ordered the hackmen to drive on, but they refused to go and dared the police to arrest them.

Mr. Browne told Mrs. Haverty's guards to get into the public cabs. This they did, one after another, until all of the cabs were occupied. The drivers were told to proceed to a point nearby. They saw through the ruse, but they dared not refuse to drive away. They raved in anger, but they drove away. As soon as they disappeared Mrs. Haverty's cabs, operated by non-union chauffeurs, took their places on the stands. When the public hackmen came back they made threats, but they had lost the fight. Finally they submitted and went back to their old and more obscure stands.

The men on whom the summonses were served were in the police court yesterday morning. The matter was adjourned until this morning. Magistrate Nolan wanted the matter to go over until Nov. 28, but Mr. Browne insisted upon a speedy settlement of the controversy. Mr. Browne said last night:

"Mrs. Haverty has thirty-two cabs running, and so far as her business is concerned we have won the fight. But I intend punishing the men who have so wantonly attacked her. I believe I can also prove that there has been a conspiracy to ruin Mrs. Haverty. These matters will be threshed out in criminal proceedings. I shall take action in the matter within a few days."

It is expected that Mr. Browne will consult with District Attorney Whitman and turn over to him the proof he has collected against the men who have been fighting his client. He said that he was sure a Grand Jury investigation would result in indictments.

FLORIDA LAND MEN HELD.

Eight Officials of Everglades Company Indicted in Kansas City.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Nov. 20.—Eight officials and agents of the Florida Fruit Lands Company were indicted by the Federal Grand Jury here to-day on a charge of conspiracy to use the mails to defraud in connection with the sale of 180,000 acres of land in the Everglades district of Florida.

Those named in the indictments are Richard J. Bolles, Jacksonville, Fla.; George A. Paddock, Chicago; Jesse L. Billingsly, Jacksonville, Fla., and John Matthews, R. C. Martin, J. H. Borders, Edward C. Chambers and A. D. Hart of Kansas City. Each man was indicted on twenty-one counts.

The Florida Fruit Lands Company, organized four years ago by R. J. Bolles, is said to control nearly 500,000 acres of land in the Everglades. It was alleged that a tract of 180,000 acres was placed in the hands of Martin and Borders, sales agents in Kansas City, and sold by them in small tracts to 12,000 persons, mostly in Kansas City and adjoining territory.

The Grand Jury investigation was demanded by small purchasers who were dissatisfied with drainage conditions on their tracts. It was said that more than $2,000,000 was involved in the sales contracts and that more than $700,000 was paid to the company.

Some of the purchasers said their tracts were entirely under water, and could be reached only by boat. Company agents asserted that the State of Florida was under contract to drain the land, and that canals soon were to be dug and the land put in condition for cultivation.

FOR WATER POWER CONTROL

National Conservation Congress Denounces Private Monopoly.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.—Monopolistic control of water power in private hands was denounced, with a declaration that no water power rights owned by the public ever should be removed from public ownership, by the National Conservation Congress, which adjourned here late to-day.

This climax of the water power fight which had agitated the congress for several days came after the Committee on Resolutions, to which had been referred divergent reports from the Waterways Committee, submitted that the matter had been taken from its hands by action of the convention yesterday in adopting general principles upon which the Waterways Committee agreed.

Secretary Lane urged Government ownership of railways in Alaska, and predicted wonderful development there.

"Instead of giving land grants in Alaska to railroad companies to build the railroads," said Secretary Lane, "the Government ought to build the railroads, and we, as the Government, should take the land grants to ourselves."

Efforts of the Arkansas delegation, headed by Walter Powell of Little Rock, which bolted the congress yesterday to spread the revolt, failed to-day, but another effort to get State rights delegates to meet with Arkansas will be made to-morrow. If there is any response to the Arkansas appeal plans for another conservation congress will be made. Most of the delegates, however, left Washington to-night.

DEFENDS GENERAL FILM CO.

Independent Exchanges Not Forced to Sell Out to It, Says Long.

Samuel Long, President of the Kalem Moving Picture Company, testifying yesterday morning at the Federal investigation of the so-called film trust, in session at the Hotel Manhattan, said that the moving-picture business had grown to such proportions that standardized business methods were needed. Mr. Long was preceded on the stand by J. Stuart Blackton of the Vitagraph Moving Picture Company.

The General Film Company, Mr. Long testified, was formed to place the business upon a better basis. He said that there was no lack of keen competition between the companies allied to the General Film and the independent film exchanges.

"We are paying more for motion films than ever before. We used to pay from $20 to $25 a week to actors and actresses," he said, "but now we pay as high as $200 a week. Our stage directors get as much as $200 a week."

Mr. Long asserted that each member of the General Film Company was a licensed film manufacturer. Under cross-examination the witness said:

"It was understood that the General Film Company would buy independent film exchanges as part of the work of its organization. We did buy a number of exchanges. Their owners came to us with offers to sell out to us. We did not compel them to sell their exchanges to us."

THE CIVIL SERVICE.

City.

The Municipal Civil Service Commission has approved the following:

Report of Assistant Chief Examiner Murray recommending that the application of the Commissioner of Public Works for the transfer of William Goldsmith from inspector to assistant engineer, and Samuel Shapiro from transitman to assistant engineer, be denied because of the existence of preferred list.

Report of Mr. Murray relative to a letter from the Police Commissioner under date of Nov. 11. Mr. Murray says that as it appears Commissioner Waldo has no intention of keeping the efficiency records of his department in accordance with the rules prescribed by the commission, the commission is without power to hold further promotion examinations for the civilian employes of his department.

Report of Mr. Murray, recommending that certain promotion examinations requested by the secretary to the Commissioner of Public Works, Manhattan, be allowed.

Communication from Mr. Fuld relative to his investigation of statements as to experience made by candidate on the list of assistant electrical engineer, grade E.

Supplemental report of Mr. Fuld, relative to his investigation of statements as to experience made by candidates on the list of marine engineer. The recommendation is made that no further investigation be made in the case of William J. Lee. Mr. Fuld calls attention to the case of Howard Van Pelt, who requested that his name be stricken from the list because of the fact that he is unable to verify certain statements relative to short periods of former employment. Mr. Fuld recommends that his request be disregarded, as all other statements made by him have been verified.

United States.

The United States Civil Service Commission announces an open competitive examination at the New York Custom House for shop apprentice, for men only, on Dec. 10, to fill vacancies in the Bureau of Standards, Department of Commerce, at salaries ranging from $480 to $540 a year, and vacancies at like salaries that occur in positions requiring similar qualifications. The Bureau of Standards furnishes excellent opportunities for young men having elementary training who wish to fit themselves for the advanced work of mechanicians. The bureau employs a number of instrument makers and other assistants. Subject to the provisions of the Civil Service law and rules, young men filling successfully the position of shop apprentice are eligible for promotion in the mechanical lines of work as they become proficient. Competitors will be examined in arithmetic, letter writing, practical questions, education and training. An educational training equivalent to one year in a manual training high school will be required for a rating of 70 per cent. Applicants must have reached their sixteenth but not their twentieth birthday on the date of the examination. Further information may be obtained from the United States Civil Service Commission, Washington, D. C.

EDUCATION NOTES.

The Municipal Civil Service Commission recently received a communication from A. L. Brassefield, Secretary of the Board of Promotions, Department of Education, saying that the efficiency records of his bureau had been completed up to June 30. On Assistant Chief Murray's recommendation, Mr. Fuld has been directed to inspect them, and if found satisfactory that the promotion applications hereafter sent be amended and the promotion examinations held at the regular time for examinations in the clerical service.

The Board of Education has granted consent to the transfer of Francis T. Lawless from the Bureau of Supplies to the Department of Health. It has also granted consent to the transfer of Joseph Urgo and Joseph Fritz, first grade clerks in the Bureau of Supplies, to similar places in the office of the Corporation Counsel.

Permission has been granted to the members of the Giles Club and Dramatic Association of Public School 20, the Bronx, to pay dues not exceeding 10 cents a month.

The Board of Education has adopted appropriate resolutions relative to the death of William J. Hartman, janitor of Public School 73, Brooklyn. He had been in the employment of the Department of Education for twenty-three years.

City Supt. Maxwell is gradually getting his annual report to the Board of Education into shape. He sends his manuscript to the printer not consecutively, but on subjects as they come to hand. After all his manuscript has been put into type the report will be arranged in its proper order. It is expected that the report will be one of the most interesting that Dr. Maxwell has made. The Board of Education since Thomas W. Churchill became its President has passed various measures in spite of Dr. Maxwell's objections. Perhaps the City Superintendent may have something to say on one or more of these subjects in his report.

SAYS VAIL PLANNED A TELEPHONE TRUST

B. G. Hubbell Testifies That A. T. & T. Sought Control of $400,000,000 Independents.

CHICAGO, Nov. 20.—An attempt by the American Telephone and Telegraph Company to absorb independents with an appraised value of $400,000,000, was made a year and a half ago, according to B. G. Hubbell, President of the Federal Telephone and Telegraph Company of Buffalo, who testified here to-day for the Government in its prosecution of the American Company on charges of violation of the Sherman anti-trust law.

Mr. Hubbell asserted that Theodore N. Vail, President of the Western Union Telegraph Company, and a Director of the American company, and H. P. Davison, member of J. P. Morgan & Co., tried to bring about the deal.

Mr. Hubbell said that Mr. Vail at a meeting of the owners of thirty of the larger independent telephone companies in Chicago, about eighteen months ago, and suggested that there might be a division of territory by the American and independent companies. The plan was intended to stop profit cutting competition, the witness said.

"The upshot of his talk was the appointment of a committee of seven, of which I was one, to confer further with Mr. Vail and also with Mr. Davison in New York on a possible method of adopting such a scheme.

"Such a conference was held in New York and arrangements were made to appraise the value of the 20,000 independent companies and also to divide them into classes. The appraisal was necessary to make way for a readjustment of the stockholdings of the independents, which would go out of business if the plans matured.

"Pending the furtherance of such plans the independents and the American company, through Mr. Vail and the committee of seven, agreed to a truce," Mr. Hubbell continued. "The principal provision of this truce was that the American company, until further notice, should not attempt to absorb any of the independent companies.

"In July, 1912, however, less than two months after this truce, the American company secretly acquired the Kansas City Long Distance Telephone Company, an independent. This breach of promise would not attempt a break in the plans which were under way and nothing further has ever been done with them."

GUILTY OF ARSON PLOT.

Harms, Liberty Hotel Man, Caught in Trap and Convicted.

Special to The New York Times.

MONTICELLO, N. Y., Nov. 20.—Richard Harms, owner of a large hotel at Liberty, Sullivan County, was found guilty of attempted arson here to-day after a trial lasting ten days. Harms was charged with attempting to burn his hotel on Aug. 17.

W. H. Chalvin, a detective, was sent to Liberty to shadow Harms and boarded at his hotel for two weeks. He discovered a room where Harms had preparations made to start a fire, and was told that the hotel man had offered to pay $200 to his barkeeper to start the blaze. This was reported to the Liberty Business Men's Association, and it was planned to have the bartender engage in conversation with Harms while a committee was listening. Frank Bridges and Isham Young, two bank cashiers of Liberty, and Dr. William Buckley listened outside of the room where the bartender and Harms were talking. They heard the hotel owner repeat his offer of $200 and say he would pretend to be sick and go to a sanitarium before the time for the fire so he could prove an alibi. Harms then was arrested.

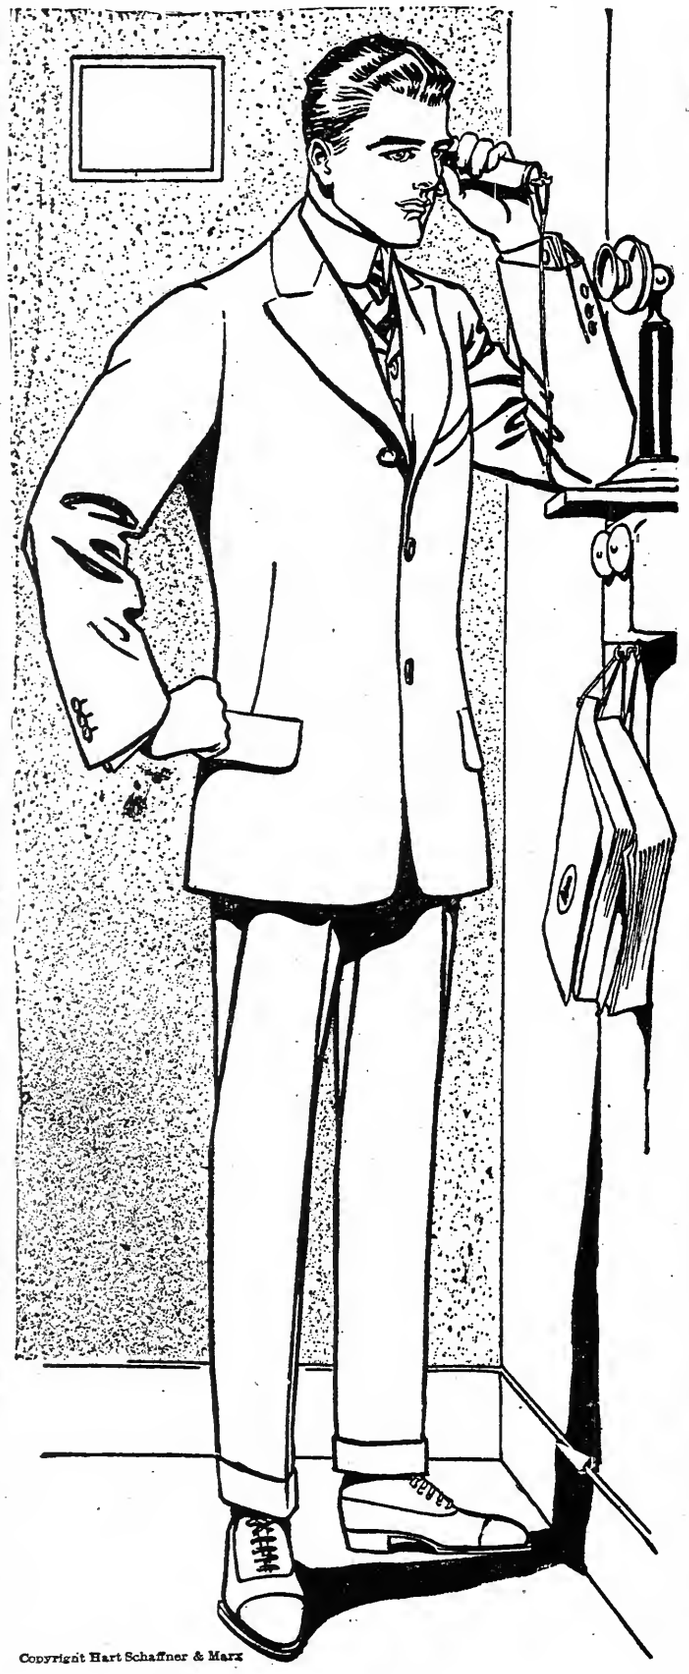
Thanksgiving



Copyright Hart Schaffner & Marx

EACH Thanksgiving Day as it comes around should bring with it the thought: "What can I do to make my next Thanksgiving more thankful?"
And here is one way—there are thousands of others—but here is the one that is uppermost in our minds right now.
You spend a certain amount each year for your clothes. Now if you can get better, more becoming clothes for your money, you have an added reason for Thanksgiving, which is where our Wallach-Hart, Schaffner & Marx clothes come in.
For these suits and overcoats of ours at $25 or any other price from $18 to $50 really are far better in style and quality than any others in New York at their prices.
There is only one way to prove it—which is, to wear them. And if you buy a suit or overcoat of us—you just can't lose, for if at any time you are dissatisfied with it, bring it back and get your money—another reason for Thanksgiving.

Suits $18 to $50 Overcoats $18 to $75

Hats
OUR Wallach Hats are famous all over New York for their style and quality at $2. Our Wallach Silk Toppers at $5, $6 and $7 have the sort of style you would look for in a $10 hat.
As to Stetson Hats—there can be no better hats made at their prices than our Wallach-Stetsons—$3.50, $5 and $8.

$50 Dress Suits $32.50
THE recent changes in the tariff caused Hart, Schaffner & Marx to discontinue certain lines of dress suit fabrics. That is why we are able to offer these $50 dress suits made of imported cloths at $32.50.

Haberdashery
LIKE our hats and clothing, our furnishing goods offer superb values:
Shirts, Gloves, Hosiery, Underwear, Neckwear, Sweaters—everything in the way of haberdashery.
Among others some silk pleated Dress Shirts, with ties and waistcoats to match.
If you have no time to call—telephone—we will send anything you want.

M'GUIRE ADMITS TRYING 'HOLD-UP'

Sought $5,000 Each from Three Concerns and Hinted at State Favors.

ALL DEALT IN ROAD SUPPLIES

Insists That He Had a "Plan" and That It "Didn't Work Out."

HOT CLASH AT INQUIRY

Whitman Wins His Point—McGuire Tells of Business Relations with C. F. Murphy, Jr.

George H. McGuire of Syracuse admitted under oath yesterday in the John Doe investigation into campaign and contract graft that he had attempted to collect large sums of money from three corporations in this city for the Democratic State Committee. He went to these corporations, he acknowledged, with a proposal that if they gave $5,000 each and promised to pay him and his brother, James K. McGuire, former Mayor of Syracuse, a commission he would seek to have their road materials specified in contracts by the State Highway Department.

It came out also that McGuire is a business partner of Charles F. Murphy, Jr., nephew of the Tammany chief.

Just before McGuire made these admissions under the questioning of District Attorney Whitman, McGuire's attorney, Henry A. Wise, protested, and questioned the legality of the John Doe proceedings. A clash between Mr. Whitman and Mr. Wise resulted which threatened to break up the proceedings. Mr. Whitman, protesting against the "outrageous" conduct of the attorney for McGuire, appealed to Chief Magistrate McAdoo, "in the name of the people of New York" to stop him, and Magistrate McAdoo stopped him. Mr. Wise was told to sit down, and to keep out of the proceedings.

Martin W. Littleton, counsel for Everett P. Fowler, indicted for the extortion of a campaign contribution from Seneca P. Hull, a Cortland contractor, witnessed the clash from within the railing but he left the court room when it ended. It was Littleton who had whispered in Wise's ear just before the storm broke.

What McGuire admitted about campaign contributions, according to the statements of District Attorney Whitman in open court, constituted offenses punishable by a year in the penitentiary. McGuire admitted going to three separate corporations for contributions but Mr. Whitman, it it said, has the names of two others which were visited by McGuire. According to the District Attorney's information, McGuire's activities involve a man high in Democratic politics against whom official action, is certain, will be taken.

It is significant that McGuire, according to a well authenticated report, made the admissions to the Grand Jury as well as before Magistrate McAdoo. It is the Grand Jury room admissions, it is understood, on which Mr. Whitman is depending for most far-reaching developments.

The fact that McGuire attempted to get contributions from contractors in New York City, it was said after the hearing, made it certain that District Attorney Whitman had jurisdiction in the investigation. It was also pointed out that McGuire was most active as a "bagman" this year and that this precluded any possibility of the application of any statute of limitation to his acts.

Mr. Whitman repeatedly referred to McGuire's attempted collections for the Democratic Committee as "hold-ups" and "blackmailing." He asked McGuire how many persons he had "blackmailed," and McGuire finally reached the point where he did not object to the District Attorney's invectives. The McGuire of yesterday, in fact, was a much different man from the McGuire of a few days ago. At the critical moments of the investigation he seemed to be in awe of Mr. Whitman.

All that Mr. Whitman had to do yesterday was to shake a number of affidavits before McGuire and instantly McGuire advanced another step in his revelations. When McGuire took the stand he started at once to follow the tactics which at the preceding hearing aroused the wrath of Mr. Whitman. He changed his testimony many times and fell into several traps.

Erie County Leader Testifies.

Before McGuire was called testimony was given by Henry P. Burgard of Buffalo, new Democratic leader of Erie County. Burgard ousted William H. Fitzpatrick at the last primaries. Burgard testified to making a $1,000 contribution to the Democratic State Committee in 1911, and also said that he got two checks, one for $5,000 and one for $1,000, from Reeve Smith, a consulting engineer of Fulton, N. Y. Mr. Whitman will call Burgard again.

Following McGuire on the stand were four contractors of Syracuse, all Republicans, but all contributors through Everett P. Fowler, the "bagman," to the Democratic State Committee. These contractors testified that they were called to the office of William H. Kelley in Syracuse by letters and telephone, and that Fowler asked them for contributions. They said nothing about threats, but admitted that they made contributions to the party with which they were not allied because they had State road contracts and because they thought it was "for the good of their business."

Burgard, a tall, well-dressed man, was the first of the witnesses to appear in

CALL SCHENECTADY STRIKE.

General Electric Walkout To-day Unless Union Leaders Are Restored.

Special to The New York Times.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y., Nov. 21.—Officials of the twenty-five unions involved decided to-night to call out on strike the 12,000 union men and women employed in the General Electric Works here at 9 o'clock to-morrow morning. The strike order is conditional on a failure of the company to reinstate Frank Dujay and Miss Mabel Leslie, union leaders, who were discharged. None of the leaders was hopeful to-night that this demand would be granted.

George E. Emmons, general manager of the company, said to-night there was absolutely no discrimination against union labor. James A. Smith, general superintendent, said the slump which has been felt at the company's other plants had just reached Schenectady and that between 1,000 and 2,000 men would be laid off within ninety days. The men allege that the company's action is part of a plan to rid the works of unions. There are 17,000 workers in the shops, including 1,800 girls.

ANOTHER PATERSON STRIKE

Walkout of 5,000 Workers Expected—175 Weavers Already on Strike.

Special to The New York Times.

PATERSON, N. J., Nov. 21.—Another big strike threatens Paterson. Fifteen hundred I. W. W. ribbon weavers met at Institute Hall, the I. W. W. headquarters, on Market Street to-night, and by unanimous vote decided to quit work unless their demand for a nine-hour day is granted. The demand will be drawn up and presented to the manufacturers on Monday morning at 9 o'clock. One week will be given for an answer. If the manufacturers refuse, a general walk-out will occur. All the mills must agree to prevent a walk-out. Ewald Koettgen, recent local leader of the I. W. W., was in charge of the meeting.

About 175 weavers went on strike today at the Johnson Cowdin mill in the Riverside section because the Superintendent, John Eagleson, refused to discharge a man not belonging to the I. W. W. The mill is tied up and can do no work. Supt. Eagleson said to-night that he would absolutely refuse to discharge the man.

"We will make no move," he said, "it is up to the weavers. We will close up first. They know our stand, and we will positively not change it, no matter if they stay out forever."

In the Pelgrim & Meyer mill, it is said, a secret vote was taken, and the 500 weavers will go out when they get their pay next week.

Merchants and business men are alarmed. The city has not recovered from the recent strike, and another one would spell ruin to hundreds of small businesses. The manufacturers say they will not recognize the I. W. W., and most of the citizens fear that Dec. 1 will see Paterson with more than 5,000 workmen on strike.

CALLS VAIL PLAN ILLEGAL

But Hubbell Says Independents Were Willing to Divide Territory.

CHICAGO, Nov. 21.—B. G. Hubbell of Buffalo continued his testimony to-day concerning the alleged activities of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company toward absorbing 20,000 independent concerns in 1912.

In the cross-examination of Mr. Hubbell at the Federal anti-trust inquiry to-day counsel sought to show that the purpose of consolidation was to save expense, and would have resulted in lowering the cost of service to the public. Mr. Hubbell thought the motive of the American Company was to eliminate costly competition. He also told of an effort by the American Company to obtain control of the Stromberg-Carlson Company of Rochester, N. Y., reputed to be the second largest manufacturer of telephone supplies in the country. Mr. Hubbell said if the negotiations had been successful the independents would have paid more for their supplies.

Mr. Hubbell said there was no objection among the independents when Theodore N. Vail suggested a plan for a division of territory, the plan ultimately to result in consolidation.

"If Mr. Vail had submitted anything unfair or unlawful, or what you would have considered contrary to the interests of the public, would you have gone further with the proposition?"

"I thought he was acting in good faith," Mr. Hubbell replied, "but I believed what he suggested was unfair and unlawful."

The witness was asked if the plan was not calculated to effect a saving in operating the telephone systems of the nation.

"Partly," he said. "But back of the idea I think there was no particular intention of reducing the telephone cost to the public."

EXPECT ZELAYA'S ARREST.

United States Government Anxious to Turn Him Over to Nicaragua.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—Secretary Bryan's refusal to receive José Santos Zelaya was based on the determination of the United States Government to take all steps in its power to have Zelaya brought to trial for the numerous crimes ascribed to him when he was dictator of Nicaragua, it became known to-day. Zelaya is under surveillance and his arrest may be expected at any moment. The arrest depends only on the representations that are expected from Nicaragua.

The chief crime charged to Zelaya was the killing of two Americans in Nicaragua four years ago. The men were Leroy Cannon of Harrisburg, Penn., and Leonard W. Groce of Hempstead, Texas.

In October, 1909, one of Zelaya's war vessels, the Diamente, with 400 troops on board, was passing down the San Juan River when a mine was exploded near her, but no damage was done. The next day Cannon surrendered to some troops he thought were revolutionists. Several days later Groce and a Frenchman named Conture also gave themselves up. When the matter was reported to Zelaya he at once moved to have the men tried and put to death. The Captain in charge of the firing squad refused to give the command to fire, and was tied up and subjected to 300 lashes. Another officer, in fear of the dictator, gave the order and the two men were shot.

OPIUM RAID GIVES PIANO TUNER SHOCK

Revolvers Greet Him as He Calls to Collect Overdue Piano Payment.

DR. SEIDLER IS ARRESTED

Forty Opium Pipes Found in His Offices—His Sister, a Lawyer, Pleads Not Guilty for Him.

The Federal authorities took possession yesterday of the apartment of Dr. Herman Seidler, a specialist in gynecology, on the first floor of 152 East Twenty-second Street, and late in the afternoon placed the physician under arrest on the charge of manufacturing opium without a Federal license. Before this was accomplished, however, the tenants of the apartment house witnessed some exciting scenes.

For some little time Inspector Elmer J. Lewis, the representative of the Federal Government in the crusade which is being carried on against the opium trade, has been looking into the affairs of Dr. Seidler. An inspection of his expensively furnished apartments yesterday, so the Inspector said, showed that the physician kept on hand a supply of opium sufficient to keep in good humor a small army of persons addicted to the drug. Moreover, he had forty pipes and they all seem to have been used.

Then the Inspector and an assistant decided it was time to interfere, and sat down to await the return of the physician, who was out when they made their call.

One of the first of their visitors was the piano tuner. He rang the bell of the apartment before the elevator man could tip him off to what was going on. As the door was opened, he found himself staring down the barrel of a revolver, held firmly in the right hand of a uniformed official.

"Hold up your hands," came the order and he obeyed.

He was wondering if the police usually did such things in broad daylight, the piano tuner was searched. A big wrench he carried in his trousers pocket was tossed on the floor. When it was discovered that he did not carry a gun, he was ordered to sit down and tell his story. Dazed by all that had happened to him he gasped out a brief recital of his occupation and the reason for his visit. He had come to collect a payment on a piano, he said. The Federal officers told him to get out and say nothing about his experience, and he obeyed.

Two or three patients who dropped in were handled with a little more consideration and were permitted to depart on their promise to keep their own counsel. It was about 4 o'clock when Dr. Seidler appeared. He seemed to be in the highest spirits and not at all worried by the presence of the Federal authorities. Later he admitted that he had himself been an opium smoker. He readily agreed to accompany the officers wherever they wanted him to go and the apartment was closed. There was nobody there early last evening.

Inspector Lewis said that he had gathered his first information about Dr. Seidler from a conversation with persons whose names he did not want to disclose. When the doctor was arraigned before Commissioner Shields half an hour after his arrest he was ready to plead guilty to the charge, according to the Federal Assistant District Attorneys.

His sister, however, is Miss Jennie Seidler, a member of the law firm of Levinson & Seidler. She appeared in his behalf at the arraignment, and when he was asked how he wished to plead to the charge, she almost took the words out of his mouth and told the Commissioner that he would deny the accusation.

Then, on her advice, the defendant, who hardly seemed conscious of what was going on, also waived examination. He was held under $2,500 bail for the action of the Federal Grand Jury.

Just before the Federal Building closed for the day, Miss Seidler managed to get a representative of the Illinois Surety Company to go on her brother's bond. Dr. Seidler was permitted to go away with her. The authorities will investigate closely the character of his practice and his prescriptions.

TEST WIRELESS ON TRAIN.

Lackawanna Reports Success and May Install the Service.

Special to The New York Times.

SCRANTON, Penn., Nov. 21.—The first wireless equipped train in the world reached this city at 1:45 o'clock this afternoon. It was an express train of the Lackawanna Railroad from New York bound for Binghamton and points West.

L. B. Foley of New York, in charge of the telegraph and telephones, was aboard, as were Marconi experts. Efforts were made to send messages all the way, but they were too faint to be picked up here. This was expected, since the purpose of the tests was to determine the exact manner of arranging the apparatus so as to bring the moving train and the stations here and at Binghamton within the proper radius.

The Pennsylvania Railroad has made experiments between stations, but this was the first attempt in the history of wireless to have communication with trains in actual motion.

At the offices of the Lackawanna Railroad last night it was said that the express which left Hoboken at 10:15 o'clock yesterday morning for Buffalo carried with it a full wireless equipment, and that during the journey of the train wireless messages were dispatched to this city, Scranton, and Binghamton. Soon after leaving Hoboken it was said that the wireless succeeded in getting in communication with this city.

No one at the railroad office last night was able to tell how successful the tests were. It was said that the experiment was made with a view to establishing a wireless service for passengers and for dispatching trains if the tests proved successful.

STRAUS TO DEVOTE HIS LIFE TO CHARITY

Retires from R. H. Macy & Co. to Give All His Time to His Humanitarian Plans.

Nathan Straus has retired from active business and will devote himself in future exclusively to humanitarian work. Instead of withdrawing from one business interest to give his attention to his other large business and financial affairs, as was stated in the brief announcement on Thursday of his retirement from R. H. Macy & Co., he will engage in a world-wide campaign for the improvement of social conditions.

In particular Mr. Straus will strive for the universal adoption of the pasteurization of all milk fed to infants, a work in which he has long been engaged here, and which he has seen so successfully carried out elsewhere. Because of the illness of Mrs. Straus and his solicitude for her recovery, Mr. Straus has of late withdrawn from all but the most pressing of his business affairs, and has remained at his home, 27 West Seventy-second Street.

Mr. Straus declined yesterday to talk of himself or of his future philanthropic plans, but his son, Nathan Straus, Jr., after a conference with his father, authorized this statement of what his father has in mind in a humanitarian way:

"In reply to the many inquiries as to how Mr. Straus intends to spend his time in future, I would like to say that one of my father's chief objects in retiring from the Thirty-fourth Street business is to give more of his time and energy to philanthropic undertakings. For the present, before I again enter business, I shall devote myself to assisting him.

"In particular, my father's enterprises in Palestine need more careful attention. They were undertaken, it will be remembered, just at the time of the Titanic disaster. My father then, of course, did not have his mind on finishing up thoroughly what he had started. Since then my father has twice started for Palestine, once getting as far as Alexandria, but each time something has interfered to prevent his reaching his destination. Now is the opportunity for which he has waited to carry out in person his various humanitarian projects.

"I shall accompany him, and shall remain in the Holy Land several months to extend the work of the Nathan Straus Relief Bureau, which operates soup kitchens; the International Health Bureau, and the Pasteur Anti-Hydrophobia Institute, all of which have been established by my father. We shall start for Palestine as soon as Mrs. Straus, who is still confined to her room, is able to travel.

"I may add that my father has spoken to me for at least ten years about some work in the distant future making a worldwide personal campaign, urging the universal adoption of pasteurization of all milk fed to infants. He has always said that he wanted me some time to make a trip, giving lectures on the subject, and showing by personal demonstration with a baby how easy it is to secure safe, wholesome milk for the babies.

"My father is delighted that these plans of his can now come to actual consummation, and before I enter any business I shall give at least a year to furthering the philanthropies to which he has devoted so much of his life."

It is expected that Mr. and Mrs. Straus, who has improved so much that she will be able to go out in a few days, will sail for London early in May. While Mr. Straus and his son propose to give their attention to the work abroad for the time being, his numerous philanthropies here will also be carried on and will ultimately be largely extended.

In all this work Mr. Straus emphasizes the unsectarian principle. All races and creeds are the same to him in his public benefactions. This idea is carried out in his enterprises in Jerusalem, as it has prevailed in his humanitarian activities here, the number of which no one knows but himself.

In addition to the Health Bureau in Palestine, which has brought remarkable results in the reduction of diseases and the practical eradication of malaria, trachoma, and other diseases, Mr. Straus has established workrooms for the unemployed and a household school for the instruction of young women in domestic service. For the last four years he has contributed annually $10,000 for the relief of poverty in Palestine, and has also given much more in the aggregate for other purposes, including the Jewish Agricultural Experimental Station, the purchase of land, the establishment of a laboratory and hospital work.

One of the important industrial enterprises by which it is hoped that many of the unfortunate Jews, who look to Palestine from various lands, may be made self-supporting, is the factory Mr. Straus established and equipped with machinery for the making of buttons. Some of its products are now being sold here and Nathan Straus, Jr., will try to increase the output of the factory by obtaining a broader market for its goods.

New and scientific farming methods are now being carried on in Palestine by the Jewish settlers and an era of increased prosperity and success is promised as a result of the Zionist movement. For the success of some of his work, particularly the improvement in the health conditions in Palestine, Mr. Straus gives credit to both the German and French governments, which have given their hearty co-operation in his efforts.

LUCY BURNS FINED $1.

Militant Proudly Pays for Chalking the White House Walk.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—Miss Lucy Burns, the Capital's first militant suffragette, paid a fine of $1 in police court to-day for chalking the White House sidewalks with "Votes for Women."

The Judge proposed to release Miss Burns on her promise not to repeat the offense.

"I want this thing settled and over with," said Miss Burns; so the Court imposed the fine.

Several sympathizers pleaded for the privilege of paying the dollar, but Miss Burns insisted on having the distinction herself.

MERGER HALTS BANK TROUBLE IN CAPITAL

United States Trust Company, Embarrassed, Taken Over by Munsey Concern.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—Following a serious run on the six bank buildings of the United States Trust Company the assets and liabilities of the embarrassed concern were taken over bodily to-night by the Munsey Trust Company, a local institution of recent origin.

Frank A. Munsey hurried from New York this afternoon, when it became evident that the United States Trust Company could not weather the storm, and to-night, after a protracted meeting of the Directors of the two companies, he announced the merger.

Lawrence O. Murray, who until last Spring was Controller of the Currency, has been President of the United States Trust Company since his resignation from the public service. He succeeded Eldridge E. Jordan, who became Chairman of the Executive Committee and retained an important interest. The general feeling here is that the United States Trust Company under Mr. Jordan's influence tried to extend its business too rapidly.

High rates of interest were offered to depositors and great extension of its branches was carried on. Within the year a handsome branch building was erected in Dupont Circle in the heart of the fashionable residence section. But the building did not seem to attract the expected business. Mr. Jordan is widely interested in real estate.

Rumors of impending disaster for the trust company have been floating about for several days. Recently the Controller of the Currency, who is charged with the supervision of all banks and trust companies in the Distruct of Columbia, began an investigation. He became suspicious and his inquiries at other banks as to the value of certain assets started rumors. Deposits were accepted to-day by the United States Trust Company, and the Controller said this afternoon the deposits were perfectly safe.

In its last return to the Controller's office the United States Trust Company showed individual deposits subject to check, amounting to $5,387,949.40. Its paid-in capital was $1,250,000, and its resources included bonds, securities, and the like, amounting to $1,107,992.31. Its banking houses and fixtures were valued at $548,978.38.

The paid-in capital stock of the Munsey Trust Company is $2,000,000, and the surplus fund is $152,620.

The United States Trust Company kept its doors open through banking hours to-day, but closed them promptly at 3 o'clock, leaving hundreds of people in the street.

In an interview to-night Mr. Munsey said:

"I arrived in Washington at 4:30 o'clock this afternoon, after having received reports from my representatives, who have been at work night and day for three days, trying to be of service to the depositors of the United States Trust Company and the Washington financial and banking world.

"At 10 o'clock to-night we came to a final definite understanding ratified by the boards of the Munsey Trust Company of Washington and the United States Trust Company, by which the Munsey Trust Company has taken over bodily and entire the United States Trust Company. In other words, the United States Trust Company now becomes merely a part of the Munsey Trust Company, the Munsey Trust Company guaranteeing the deposits and paying the Munsey Trust Company interest rates on the deposits."

MRS. WILSON EARNS BY ART.

Three of President's Wife's Paintings on Exhibition Sold.

Three of the paintings of Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, wife of the President, of the five at the exhibition of the Association of Women Painters and Sculptors at the Arlington Art Galleries, 274 Madison Avenue, to be sold, have already found buyers. The first of these was "Autumn Fields," which went to Alexander M. Hudnut, an old-time Princeton man and art collector, for $100. Another, "Ascutney," was sold to a well known Western woman collector of American and foreign modern paintings for $150, and a third went to the wife of a prominent New York physician, for $100. This is called "Light and Shade." "The Terrace," a charming picture, the most attractive of the five, Mrs. Wilson considered too intimate a picture of the Presidential Summer home at Cornish to be sold.

Mrs. Wilson was invited to become a member of the association last Spring by members who saw her work exhibited in the Macbeth Galleries, and she accepted immediately. This is one of the open exhibits of the organization and has been a successful one. It was opened on the 15th and twenty-two pictures have been sold. Mrs. William C. Rockefeller has been one of the purchasers, buying "Yellow Garden Roses," by Mrs. E. M. Scott, and two pictures, "Chickens" and "Ducks," by Matilda Browne.

A reception will be given this afternoon by the Association to the New York State Federation of Women's Clubs.

PARIS TIME BY WIRELESS.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—The Naval Observatory is now regularly receiving time signals from the observatory of Paris by wireless telegraphy between the Eiffel Tower and the naval radio tower at Arlington, Va. These exchanges have been going on every day for three weeks. The scientific object is to measure by the velocity of the propagation of radio signals over the intervening distance the precise difference of longitude between Paris and Washington.

The complete success of the work had been more or less disturbed by interferences from other radio stations and also by atmospheric conditions until last night, when the beats of the Paris clock, as transmitted by wireless, were compared with the Washington clock for several minutes. This is the season of the year when the electrical conditions of the atmosphere are most favorable to such long-distance work, and it is now believed that the work of the American and the French Commissions on longitudinal determinations may go forward with their task.

The same signals which are sent by the Arlington radio station for the Naval Observatory are to be used by naval hydrographic surveying parties in the West Indies and Central America.

TYSON & CO. HAVE THEIR TICKETS NOW

Agreement Speedily Reached When Prosecutor Announces That Disposal Was Criminal.

TERMS ARE NOT DISCLOSED

But Tickets and Excess Payments Are to be Turned Over to Subscribers at Once.

The customers of the theatre ticket agency, Tyson & Co., of 1,122 Broadway, have won in the sharp contest over the $54,000 worth of Metropolitan Opera tickets, held by the Metropolitan Trust Company of 49 Wall Street as collateral for a loan to the ticket agency. Counsel for the trust company and for the ticket agency reached an agreement yesterday whereby the tickets were delivered immediately to Tyson & Co. for distribution to their subscribers after 10 o'clock this morning. As forecast exclusively in THE NEW YORK TIMES yesterday. All efforts to learn the terms of the agreement from officials of the corporations and their counsel were without result.

Tyson & Co. and the Metropolitan Trust Company were preparing formal announcements of a settlement within two hours after the District Attorney's office had announced that the tickets when paid for by the subscribers "became the absolute property of the purchasers," and that "any disposal of those tickets, other than their immediate delivery to the purchasers, was illegal and criminal." That statement was made by Assistant District Attorney Arthur C. Train before Magistrate Deuel, when William L. Marshall, of counsel for Tyson & Co. asked for a postponement of the criminal proceedings. The complainant in the case was Adolph E. Dick, of 244 West Seventieth Street, who charged that Tyson & Co. had misappropriated his season tickets and the money with which he had paid for them.

The Metropolitan Trust Company, through its secretary, George N. Hartman, issued this statement:

Mr. Beverly Chew, Second Vice President of the Metropolitan Trust Company, states that the inconvenience caused to subscribers for opera tickets from Tyson & Co. by reason of delay in the delivery of the tickets for which they subscribed, has been a matter of great regret to himself and the officers of the trust company. He is glad to announce that Tyson & Co. have satisfactorily arranged for the discharge of the indebtedness for which the tickets were pledged, so that they have been delivered to Tyson & Co. for distribution to their subscribers.

This statement was issued by Tyson & Co.:

Tyson & Co. are glad to announce that they have succeeded in effecting the necessary financial arrangements whereby they are now in possession of the opera tickets for which their patrons subscribed, and are ready to make delivery of the same after 10 o'clock on the morning of the 22d of November, to all subscribers, at their offices, 1,122 Broadway, upon surrender of their receipts. They further announce that the arrangements made provide for the repayment to their subscribers who have paid duplicate, and they will receive checks for the same in due course. They regret the embarrassment which unfortunately has arisen respecting the delivery of the tickets, and, now that it is satisfactorily relieved, they bespeak the continued favor of their customers and patrons.

Magistrate Deuel, who was designated to conduct the proceedings against Tyson & Co., will resume to-day the hearings at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon in the Criminal Court Building. At the urgent request of Mr. Marshall, however, he agreed to postpone the hearing until 2 o'clock next Monday afternoon, when the testimony in the case probably will be concluded.

Mr. Marshall explained that he desired to keep an appointment that had an important bearing on the opera ticket controversy and the inference was plain that he was about to complete arrangements with the counsel for the trust company for the release of the tickets.

Assistant District Attorney Arthur C. Train, who has made the investigation, agreed to a postponement provided Magistrate Deuel thought this the best course for the subscribers. Mr. Train said to the Magistrate:

"From the sworn testimony already taken it appears that the public has subscribed for opera tickets to the value of over $50,000. Each of the subscribers has paid for definite and particular nights. The tickets thus paid for, when issued by the Metropolitan Opera Company and delivered to Tyson & Co., became the absolute property of the purchasers. Any disposition of those tickets other than their immediate delivery to the purchasers was illegal and criminal.

"It appears that Tyson & Co. received from the Metropolitan Opera Company on Sept. 13, 1913, tickets of the market value of $180,000. These tickets were placed in a wooden box and annually delivered to R. J. Hartman, President of Tyson & Co. In this box were not only tickets which had not been subscribed for, but the tickets which had been paid for in full. Hartman, however, immediately turned over all the tickets to the Metropolitan Trust Company as security for a loan of $100,000 in conformity with a written agreement entered into three days previously between him and Mr. Beverly Chew, its Second Vice President. But the tickets referred to, which had been paid for, did not belong to Tyson & Co. and Hartman could give no better title to the Metropolitan Trust Company than he himself had in these tickets, which was no title at all.

"It is a matter of dispute whether the officials of the Metropolitan Trust Company knew or did not know that they had accepted as collateral security for a loan tickets which had been paid for to the extent of over $50,000. Mr. Chew testified under oath that he had not been told so. Mr. Hartman has stated to the contrary. Whether or not Mr. Chew knew that part of the tickets which the trust company received as collateral had been paid for, a search warrant could properly be issued by your Honor, directed to any peace officer, commanding him to search for the tickets belonging to those subscribers who have paid for their tickets, and to bring them into court.

"No practical purpose would be accomplished by asking for such a warrant, however, or by bringing the tickets into court, since the Court of Appeals has held that no disposition of such property can be made upon a criminal process where there is a controversy between the person from whom it is claimed that the property was stolen and the person from whom the possession of the property was taken by the search warrant. It is a matter wholly between the contending parties and of no direct concern to the State. It must be contested in a civil action in which the parties are by the Constitution entitled to notice and a hearing, and, if demanded, a trial of the issue by a jury.

"For this reason, although requested to do so, the District Attorney makes no application for such a warrant. Indeed, upon the statements made by the Attorney for the defense, no further legal proceeding is necessary in order that the subscribers who have paid for their tickets may secure their property."

It was learned yesterday for the first time that the State Banking Department had made an investigation of the transactions by which the allotment of tickets were hypothecated with the Metropolitan Trust Company, and found that the trust company was within its rights when it accepted the tickets as collateral for a loan to the ticket agency.

ALFONSO'S LITTLE JOKE.

Tells French Hunting Party How He Fooled One of His Ministers.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

PARIS, Nov. 21.—King Alfonzo told President Poincaré's shooting party at Rambouillet on Wednesday an amusing story of a trick he played on one of his Ministers in Spain.

This Minister, said the King, was a very bad shot. One day he saw a little rabbit moving slowly through the grass about 15 yards away. He fired with both barrels and missed as usual, but the rabbit still remained in sight. Once more the Minister fired. He fired in all thirty-six cartridges, and at last bowled the rabbit over.

Delighted, the Minister ran and picked up the rabbit, which, however, had tied around its neck a card with the words, "Long life to Señor ——," and then came the Minister's name. It was a stuffed rabbit which a keeper pulled about by a string.

"It was a year before my Minister forgave me for the trick I played upon him," concluded Alfonso.

HUNTING GOOD FOR ROYALTY

Less Costly Than Running After Venus, Finance Minister Argues.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Nov. 21.—The Bavarian Finance Minister, in supporting a motion for an increase of the Bavarian King's civil list to $1,350,000, observed, according to Dr. Muellermeiningen, who opposed the vote to-day, that the expenses of the royal hunting lodges and game preserves were not excessive, and that it was better that royalty should shoot and hunt than run after Venus, which was a still more expensive occupation.

Dr. Muellermeiningen protested against the assumption that royalty must have expensive habits, and that it was better to choose the lesser of two evils.

"These are hard times for everybody," he declared, "and the Court must be sparing, too."

DECORATIVE MOLE A PERIL.

Scratch It and You May Catch a Cancer, French Physician Says.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Nov. 21.—Dr. Jean Dartier, speaking to-day before the French Association for the Study of Cancer, referred to the tragic possibilities of the decorative mole which again has come into fashion.

"Scratch a mole," he said, "and you may catch a cancer."

Some moles were harmless and some were potentially poisonous, he continued. The only wise course was to leave well enough alone and resist the temptation to scratch the mole. Warts and wens should be borne patiently, lest worse befall their possessors. Dr. Dartier told of a man who, by cauterizing a harmless wart on his hand, transformed it into a cancer.

NO ROCKEFELLER CREDIT.

None, at Least, Until the Clerk Learned That He Was "Good."

CLEVELAND, Nov. 21.—"Please have these charged to John D. Rockefeller of Forest Hill," said the wealthiest man in the world, to-day, to a young woman clerk in a downtown department store, from whom he had made some purchases.

The saleswoman, confessing that she did not know Mr. Rockefeller of Forest Hills, telephoned the head of the credit department.

Of course Mr. Rockefeller was accommodated, and the young woman clerk who had questioned his credit blushed in confusion. Mr. Rockefeller smilingly reassured her, however, and said that her caution deserved approval by her employers.

AFTER COLD STORAGE MEN.

McReynolds May Investigate the High Price of Eggs.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—Attorney General McReynolds is considering an investigation of an alleged cold storage combination which he believes may be responsible for the high price of eggs and poultry.

Charges also have reached the department that several of these concerns have sold cold storage products for fresh ones. Such transactions violate the Pure Food law.

BRIDE LEAPS FROM WINDOW.

Her Husband Would Not Speak to Her After a Quarrel.

After less than three weeks of marriage Max Roth and his seventeen-year-old wife, Rose, came to the parting of the ways three days ago. She returned weeping to her brother's home in Goerck Street, protesting that her husband was too unkind to her, and that they could not live at peace together.

Persuaded by her brother yesterday, she went back with him to her flat, at 1,1999 Brook Avenue, the Bronx, hoping that she and Max could come to some understanding. Her husband, however, would not speak to her.

Then she knew that everything was a failure, and running into the rear room she flung herself from the window. They found her dead in the courtyard four floors below.

CURZON-LEITER SUIT.

Friendly Action to Change Executors of Lady Curzon's Estate.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—Lord Curzon began a friendly suit in the District Court here to-day against Joseph Leiter to change the trustees for the $1,700,000 marriage settlement which was made upon his wife, who was Mary Victoria Leiter. Seymour Morris, of Chicago, and Henry Molyneux Paget Howard, Earl of Suffolk and Berkshire, would be substituted for Robert T. Lincoln, former Secretary of War, and William St. John Fremantle Brodrick, Viscount Middleton.

Joseph Leiter, executor of the Leiter estate, has agreed to the change.

HUERTA DALLIES TO BALK WILSON

Deliberately Keeping His New Congress from Doing Business.

"NO QUORUM" YESTERDAY

Dictator Becomes More Aggressive, Believing Washington Will Not Act.

SAY EUROPE FAVORS HIM

Politicians Strong in the Belief That the "Concert of Powers" Has Been Broken Up.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 21.—Congress failed to convene to-day on account of the lack of a quorum in both houses. This is believed to be due partly to the general lack of interest in national affairs on the part of the new Congressmen, and also to the fact that a majority of them have employments in other branches of the Government, such as the army and the various departments. It is also the general policy of the Government to delay any action as long as possible in order to postpone any decision on the part of Washington.

Dispatches from the United States to-day indicate that President Wilson will wait to see what attitude this Congress takes. This is a still further incentive to delay.

It is not believed that any matters will be taken up for some weeks except the organization and election of various committees and internal political questions. All other legislation will probably be left until the April session.

The manager of the National Bank to-day received a cable from Gen. Francisco Villa at Juarez, threatening him in case drafts drawn by revolutionists through the branch bank at Torreon should be unhonored here. The Torreon bank has been in the hands of the rebels for some time, and all the deposits have been looted by the rebels. The manager is undecided what action to take. He will probably consult the French Minister before deciding.

The bank managers have been meeting for some time past and discussing financial questions. While all refuse to make any statement regarding the matters taken up, it is believed that they are considering the advisability of using Clearing House certificates in transactions between the banks.

The banks are preparing to issue about 3,000,000 pesos in one and two-peso notes, to be put in circulation as soon as they can be printed.

The fact that all the European diplomats attended the opening of Congress yesterday is taken here as meaning that Europe is certainly not fully in accord with the American policy, since this included a desire that Congress should not convene.

Politicians here consider that the action of the diplomats has greatly strengthened President Huerta's hand in the present circumstances. The Government here says it is informed that the United States is "up in the air" and praying that something may happen to enable it to get out of its difficulty and save its face.

Gen. Huerta is becoming more aggressive every day, and is prepared for any action which may be taken by the United States. He keeps constantly informed regarding developments in Washington. His plans are kept extremely secret. The officials are very reticent, but evidently prepared to back Huerta.

General feeling here, which became adverse to Huerta after his dissolution of Congress, is turning back to him on account of the failure of Washington to take any action which is calculated to solve present problems in a manner consistent with the dignity of the Mexican nation.

It is believed that the psychological moment has passed and that the United States is unable to act at present without placing itself in an unjust light before the world.

The request made upon Secretary Bryan to protect the Cowdray interests, following the statement of President Wilson in New Orleans is considered significant. It is interpreted as showing that the United States is making concessions to England in order to obtain support for its policy here.

Sir Lionel Carden is reported to be attempting to minimize the importance of the dispatch of British cruisers to Mexican waters by saying it is only a courtesy measure.

Rumors were persistent to-day that negotiations between Chargé O'Shaughnessy and Minister Moheno had been renewed. These are denied by all the parties concerned, who say that all negotiations are off.

The situation is becoming critical here. It is believed that unless the railway lines are able to get fuel they may have to suspend all but passenger service. This would greatly hinder the Government in moving troops throughout the republic. It is also probable that several factories using crude oil for fuel will have to suspend work.

PRESSES AMERICAN OIL CLAIM.

O'Shaughnessy Backs Coleman in His Suit Against Cowdray.

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 21.—The Chamber of Deputies, immediately after the roll call at to-night's session, adjourned until to-morrow, Speaker Tamariz announcing that there was no quorum.

Representations to the Mexican Foreign Office were made to-day by Nelson O'Shaughnessy, American Chargé d'Affaires, who asked for the early adjudication of the claim of Thomas Coleman for the restoration of his title to the Island of Potreros, off the Tuxpam oil district of the State of Vera Cruz, of which he had been dispossessed by the local authorities, who had turned over the property to the interests with which Lord Cowdray is connected. The case is on the list in the Supreme Court here.

Mr. Coleman says that he was deprived of his rights and property through a concession granted by the Federal Government to the Oil Fields of Mexico Company, a Pearson concern, in spite of the fact that the law gives the owner the title to any mineral and oil deposits which may exist.

The fact that Nelson O'Shaughnessy, American Chargé d'Affaires, had had two conferences with the Mexican Minister of Foreign Affairs during the last few days became known here to-day. The exact character of these meetings and the nature of the conversation were, however, not made known, the only thing gathered in connection with the conferences being that their net result was to leave the situation unchanged.

Assurances were given at the Embassy to-day that no instructions had been received from Washington for Chargé O'Shaughnessy to leave his post; but it is known that his personal affairs are in such order that he could leave at an hour's notice if the necessity arose.

A demand has been made by the Federal military authorities upon the foreign business concerns in Monterey for cash to provide for the maintenance of the army in that district. From the Monterey Steel Company 20,000 pesos was asked and from the Waters-Pierce Oil Company 15,000 pesos, while others were taxed in proportion to their importance. The Managers here of the Waters-Pierce Oil Company instructed their representatives in Monterey to refuse payment of the levy and to place themselves and the property of the company under the protection of the American Consul.

WON'T ACCEPT LASCURAIN.

Carranza Denounces Reported Wilson Plan to Make Him President.

MADGALENA, Mexico, Nov. 21.—Gen. Venustiano Carranza, head of the Mexican Constitutionalists, in an interview to-day discussed the report that President Wilson was attempting to influence President Huerta to appoint Pedro Lascurain to succeed him, thus making Huerta's retirement possible.

"It is impossible to believe," said Gen. Carranza, "that the President of the United States, a man of such high moral personality as is shown in his works that I have read, could imitate the political methods of a man of such low morality as Huerta.

"It is impossible to believe that President Wilson intends to act in the manner attributed to him by certain press reports that have reached me.

"This action would be equivalent to approving the abominable political proceedings of Huerta. Huerta, in fact, attempted to make his usurpation and assassinations by forcing the resignations of President Madero and Vice President Pino Suarez and then elevating the more easily controlled Lascurain to the Presidency for a few brief minutes so that he, Huerta, could be named Minister of Gobernacion. In this position he was enabled to usurp the power of Lascurain and eject him from the Presidency.

"If President Wilson now intends to commit the same crime through the person of Lascurain, the only difference between this contemplated act and that of Huerta is that, in the latter, who, even disgrace, is a Mexican, acted within the realm of internal politics, while President Wilson would make the affair one of international politics."

MADEROS ON OUR FLAGSHIP.

Taken from Vera Cruz Consulate by Order of John Lind.

VERA CRUZ, Nov. 21.—Evaristo and Daniel Madero, who, after their release yesterday from the fortress of San Juan de Ulua, took refuge in the American Consulate, this morning were received on board the battleship Rhode Island.

At about 9 o'clock the two fugitives, escorted only by John Lind, the personal representative of President Wilson, and William W. Canada, the United States Consul, left the Consulate building and walked across the vacant space to the sea wall to a steam launch which waited there with an armed crew of bluejackets from the Rhode Island. The refugees stepped on board the launch, which at once started for the flagship.

As they were bidding good-bye to Mr. Lind at the launch Evaristo Madero exclaimed: "Only God can save Mexico," to which his brother Daniel added: "But only with the help of the United States." Evaristo replied: "Yes, that is true."

The party had been followed to the launch at a respectful distance by a solitary detective who had been watching the Consulate all night.

A request for the delivery of the Maderos, made by Col. Eugenio Gutierrez, the aid of Gen. Gustavo Maass, the Federal commander of Vera Cruz, was promptly denied to-day by the Consul, after which it was reported that veiled threats had been made to take the refugees by force from the Consulate.

The refugees were held in the Consulate without being permitted to communicate with anybody, and not even their wives were allowed to visit them.

John Lind conferred to-day with Rear Admiral Fletcher and was in constant communication with Washington.

PROMISE TO GUARD OIL FIELD.

Rebels Assure Washington They Will Protect Foreign Interests.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—The State Department was much gratified to-night at the successful outcome of its efforts to protect American and other foreign oil holdings in the neighborhod of Tuxpam and Tampico, on the east coast of Mexico.

When trouble was first threatened there, urgent instructions were sent to the American Consular representatives to make plain to the leaders of both the Federal and rebel forces that the United States would expect foreign lives and property to be protected. To-night this answer was received through Admiral Fletcher at Vera Cruz, from Gen. Aguilar, commanding all the rebel bands operating in the oil district:

"I am governing on a constitutional basis, my attitude being to guarantee the interests of all foreign and domestic oil corporations existing in the territory I occupy, fulfilling in this manner the demands of civilization, and not being governed by caprice or vengeance."

Huge Amount of Oil Endangered.

The State Department has information that 17,000,000 barrels of oil are stored near the refineries at Tuxpam and Tampico. It is estimated that 5,000,000 barrels are tanked at Tuxpam, and that the remaining 12,000,000 are at Tampico. Tampico is the centre of the British Pearson interests, and it is to that point that one of the British battle cruisers has been dispatched. Large American interests are also in this neighborhood, though the State Department has no information indicating that the citizens of any other countries than the United States and Great Britain have anything to lose in that part of the country.

The difficulty of protecting these enormous oil holdings is increased by the fact that the wells are many miles inland. They are connected with the tanks on the water front by pipe lines, and great damage might be done either by breaking the line or exploding the caps that hold back the streams of oil in the wells temporarily out of commission. Any tampering with the wells, it is feared, might set them on fire, with the result that rivers of blazing oil would devastate the surrounding country. The pipe lines connecting with Tuxpam and Tampico, it is also feared, might set fire to the great oil reservoirs in those places.

No information was obtainable here to-day as to any definite plans for protecting the oil. The general regulations would permit Admiral Boush, who is immediately in control at Tuxpam, to land marines, and international usage, if there were no local complications, would give the same right to the commander of the British cruiser. It is recalled that in the first revolution British marines were landed from the cruiser Shearwater on the Pacific Coast without any objection from the American Government. Inquiries made to-day, however, at the State Department regarding possible co-operation between British and American vessels elicited no information.

News that John Lind had sent the two Maderos and their companions on board the United States battleship Rhode Island, while not officially confirmed, was received here as relieving a situation that might have led to further difficulties.

While Mr. Lind was acting on direct instructions from the State Department in co-operating with Consul General Canada for the protection of the two Maderos in the consulate and in subsequently sending them aboard the Rhode Island, the Navy Department had left Admiral Fletcher to use his own discretion. The authoritative position occupied by Mr. Lind as the President's representative in Mexico is indicated by the fact that he was able through his personal representation to secure the complete co-operation of the American naval forces without the interposition of the Navy Department.

Lind Ordered to Protect Maderos.

Late last night the State Department sent instructions to Mr. Lind, telling him in substance to follow with the Maderos a course similar to that which resulted some weeks ago in the escape of Gen. Felix Diaz. This message reached the American Consulate at 6 o'clock this morning and a few hours afterward Mr. Lind and Mr. Canada accompanied the fugitives to the wharf, where a launch was waiting. Considerable interest was aroused here by the report that the bluejackets on board the launch were armed; but at the Navy Department it was explained that, as there was nothing to indicate that the bluejackets came ashore, the question of their equipment was not diplomatically significant.

Reports that Gen. Huerta has ordered his soldiers to fire on American marines if they attempt a landing are not supported by any information received by the Navy Department. Admiral Fletcher's dispatch announcing that the Maderos had been taken on board the Rhode Island made no mention of landing, and the assumption is that they remained aboard their launch, which lay alongside a wharf. The Navy Department feels that the landing of marines would have meant a very serious situation which Admiral Fletcher would not have failed to mention.

The convening of the Mexican Congress and Huerta's reading of his message are regarded by officials here as merely carrying the situation one step further along, and not as events which forecast any immediate step by the United States. The view here is that each day adds to what Administration officials regard as the steady and gradual disintegration of the Huerta régime.

No Fear of New Concessions.

The official belief is that should the Congress act on English oil concessions pending, such acts would be regarded as invalid not only by the United States, but by Great Britain. A perfect understanding is understood to have been reached between London and Washington.

Inasmuch as foreign Governments generally have signified their assent to the American policy as thus far outlined, it is being taken for granted here that so far as the nations of the world are concerned, the new Mexican Congress may legislate as it will, but its acts will not have international sanction as those of the constituted lawmaking body of the republic.

Such a favorable attitude by other nations generally strengthens the confidence of the Washington Government that the days of Huerta's ascendency are numbered. The fact that many members of the Catholic Party, by previous agreement, did not attend the session of Congress, is regarded as another evidence of the loss by Huerta of one of the chief sources of his previous support.

Hale Expected in Washington.

Dr. William Bayard Hale, it is understood, is on his way to Washington to report to Mr. Bryan and to the President exactly how his conversation with Gen. Carranza came to an end. It has been officially stated here that his mission has resulted in no practical plans for the future, but it is thought that he has some information that will be of interest to the President if dealings with the Constitutionalists are resumed.

OLIVER THINKS CRISIS GRAVE.

Senator with Wilson in Any Move He Makes on Mexico.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Nov. 21.—Senator Oliver of Pennsylvania, who is at the Ritz with his wife and daughter, Mrs. Young, after spending several weeks in Constantinople visiting his other daughter, Mrs. McCauley, wife of Lieut. Commander McCauley, in command of the Scorpion, stationed in Turkish waters, told THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent to-day that he considered the Mexican situation very grave, and had been much worried by its development the last few days. He hoped intervention would not be forced, as, if American soldiers ever entered Mexico, there was no telling what the end would be.

"But whatever policy President Wilson adopts," he said, "he'll find the whole country behind him, with not a single vote against him in either house of Congress. We may squabble among ourselves, but on any question of an outsider we are united and parties are forgotten.

"Before I left home I paired for voting in the Senate, but I told my 'pair' that the arrangement would not hold if the Mexican question came before Congress, and that I would not pair for a vote on Mexico, as I could not take the chance of being forced into a position seeming not to stand by the Administration on the question of Mexican policy. I am not a Wilson man, but am behind him every inch of the way on the Mexican question."

Speaking of the new tariff, Senator Oliver said its real effects would not be felt for some time, but American industries would ultimately suffer very materially, especially cotton, wool, and silk manufactures, and more lightly, highly finished iron and steel articles. He thought big steel products such as rails and beams would not suffer on account of the advanced American methods of manufacture, special conditions existing in America, and closeness to markets. He said that one reason why the full effect of the new tariff would not be immediately felt was that European manufacturers and business men were now very busy, being full up with orders in old markets, but when slack times come in the not distant future Europe would turn to America for her markets. Then American industries would feel the full effect of the new tariff.

Senator Oliver was much impressed by the beauty of Constantinople. As one who had lived in a progressive country he could not help thinking what might be done with such a city by progressive, up-to-date people. He found the general feeling among Christians in Constantinople was quite hopeless for the future of Turkey, not regarding the international position, but as to the progress and material welfare of the people.

"I heard no talk of war nor of the effects of war. I saw many returning soldiers, but there seemed to be no special interest taken in them. Business is going on as usual in a lively fashion, but to one used to American methods, business in Constantinople is a huge joke. Just imagine one of the first cities of the world without a telephone system and just beginning to introduce electric lights."

Senator Oliver goes to London on Saturday and sails for New York on the Olympic Dec. 3.

COWDRAY ASSAILS PIERCE OIL COMPANY

Accuses Rival of Inspiring Attacks on Him in American Press.

NOT A 'CONCESSION MONGER'

London Weekly Says We Are About to Conquer Mexico in a "Money-Grubbers' War."

LONDON, Saturday, Nov. 22.—Lord Cowdray, who has large oil, railway and other concessions in Mexico, said, in an interview, that he had learned with great interest from the newspapers that a British warship had been dispatched to the Puerto Mexico terminus of the Tehuantepec Railway, which he owns, because, while that line was still running, the Mexican Government lines joining it had been cut, and therefore several thousand employes could have been aided, in case of need, only by a warship.

Asked if he would be satisfied with the protection that could be given to his interests at Tuxpam by the United States battleship Louisiana, Lord Cowdray answered: "Certainly. It is bound to protect my interests."

He expressed the opinion that he had made a great mistake in keeping silent so long under the charge that he was "a concession monger." He said the last oil concession he had obtained from the Mexican Government had been granted nearly eight years ago. His company had the right to bore on any Government land, a right which, he added, had not been exercised to the limit. Any request he had made of the Mexican Government since the granting of the last concession, Lord Cowdray said, had been for facilities to carry on his oil business, such as the building of railways and pipe and telegraph lines, and for certain customs exemptions.

Attacks Waters-Pierce Company.

The real offense he had committed in Mexico, Lord Cowdray continued, was in daring to invade the territory of the Waters-Pierce Oil Company. Since he had done so, he said, he had been bitterly pursued and had been the victim of a press bureau, engaged to misinterpret his operations.

"Certain portions of the American press," Lord Cowdray added, "have accused me of being a concession monger. President Wilson apparently does not remember that the American Government assisted in the building of the transcontinental railway in exactly the same manner that the Mexican Government has assisted my operations in Mexico, which is in a state that still necessitates Governmental assistance for her development.

"I went in as a pioneer and had to have some guarantee back of the enormous sums I was spending to develop my oil properties. I might say at the same time that I am not seeking, and never have had, an oil monopoly, either in Mexico or Colombia."

Outlook on "Money-Grubbers' War"

Under the heading, "A Money-Grubbers' War," The Outlook to-day publishes a bitter article on the Mexican situation.

"Across the Atlantic," The Outlook says, "there is in busy preparation, if certain forces can accomplish it, a crime against civilization, against humanity. At any moment we may hear of its first overt stages, with inevitably the ensuing slaughter of tens of thousands of young Americans and half-armed peasants, the devastation of humble towns and rude countrysides, the suffering of the helpless and the innocent, and the squandering of millions of money.

"And all for what, or for whom? Wars have been waged for military ambition, but who is the Napoleon of the United States? They have been due to colonial expansion; but half the States are sparsely peopled and they have been fought for liberty—and what wars have we seen lately sheltering under this claim!

"But there is no pretense of this or of any of the historic reasons here. A war between the United States and Mexico, if arises, will be the first war waged solely for private greed—the first money-grubbers' war."

"Filching Territory for 60 Years."

After saying that the United States has been filching territory from its neighbors for sixty years and has reduced weak States to obsequious dependents through the Monroe Doctrine, which means anything it is required to mean," The Outlook predicts that American dollars will create revolutions in Trinidad and Jamaica, as it alleges they did in Panama, and predicts the annexation of the Northern Mexican States.

"If the guides of American opinion, among whom we refrain from mentioning Dr. Wilson," the article says in conclusion, "get their way, in a few weeks, perhaps days, Jim Smith of Virginia will be cutting the throat of Ivan Ivanhoe of Moreles in the sacred name of the oil trusts and the band of Wall Street hyenas."

Henry Clay Pierce, Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Waters-Pierce Oil Company, declined to comment last night on the statements made by Lord Cowdray.

THINKS WE HELP REBELS.

Paris Temps Suggests That Smuggling of Arms Is Winked At.

PARIS, Nov. 21.—In commenting on the convening of the new Mexican Congress to-day's Temps says:

"Provisional President Huerta displays remarkable serenity in face of the American 'quasi-ultimatum,' which he almost ignores in his message.

"Gen. Huerta speaks and acts like a man who is absolutely resolved to retain power in spite of the wishes of the United States Government, and the Mexican Congress seemingly will confirm his powers.

"The American Government seems reduced, in order to avoid the extreme measures which would be the outcome of that policy or the bitter alternative of retreating from its position, to cherish secret but ardent hopes for the success of the Constitutionalists under Carranza. There seems little doubt that the American authorities are favoring them by closing their eyes to the contraband traffic in arms.

"If the Mexican revolutionaries beat Huerta, the United States will be pulled out of its false position, but it is doubtful whether the Constitutionalists would be more supple in the hands of the United States than is Huerta, or would be able to pacify the country they are now ravaging. In the meanwhile the outcome of the crisis seems more uncertain than ever.

"The oil possessions which the Mexican factions and the foreign interests bound up with them are striving over are the fundamental cause and object of the series of bloody revolutions and counter-revolutions.

"In spite of the character and the high principle of idealism which President Wilson gives, undoubtedly in good faith, to his Mexican policy, in reality there are only material interests involved in the affair, and if that policy unfortunately leads to armed intervention the resultant war is likely to be called by history 'The Oil War.'"

HAMMOND ATTACKS BRYAN.

Denounces Secretary for Failure to Protect Americans in Mexico.

WORCESTER, Mass., Nov. 21.—John Hays Hammond, the mining expert, speaking to-night at the closing session of Clark University Conference on Latin America, declared that he would not invest a cen tin a foreign country as long as William J. Bryan was Secretary of State, and expressed the view that any man who would make such an investment was lacking in sense.

"A nation that does not protect its citizens and investors is unworthy the name of a nation," declared Mr. Hammond, after saying that honest working men, encouraged to locate in Mexico, had been forced to throw away the savings of a lifetime.

"They are told to get out, flee the country where their all is located," said Mr. Hammond.

Mr. Hammond's subject was "The Development of South American Trade." At the beginning he announced that he would refrain from discussing Mexico, but during his speech, following his reference to Secretary Bryan, he commented briefly upon the situation in that country. He declared, however, that he did not favor intervention and had opposed it from the first.

"As an argument against protection for some property," he continued, "it has been claimed that concessions have been obtained dishonestly. I have never known of bribes being offered or taken for concessions. Investors ought to be backed and protected as long as they prove honest. When they don't, put them in the Ananias Club and withhold the Government's support."

"The investment of a nation's capital in foreign countries for the development of its industries is the sesame that opens the door of trade. How wide the door of trade will be opened depends upon the success attending that nation's efforts in procuring rapid and cheap communication and transportation; in providing the character of commodities needed by the countries in question; in the establishment of banking facilities to meet the requirements both of the exporter and the importer; in the fostering of friendly relations by intimate intercourse between the citizens of the respective nations.

"Now, in order to stimulate the investment of capital in foreign lands it is prerequisite that the invester be assured of protection by his government against any unfair interference or discrimination on the part of foreign governments where these investments are made.

"If our nation is to pursue a policy of laissez-faire and decline to assume its obligation to afford legitimate protection to its nationals, its nationals will not be so foolhardy as to risk capital in the development of foreign industries. Or if, in spite of the lack of protection from their government they nevertheless decide to make such investments they will do so under the auspices of the flags of other nations which guarantee to their subjects proper protection of life and property."

Monroe Doctrine's Drawbacks.

George F. Tucker, of Boston, author of "The Monroe Doctrine," urged that the words "Monroe Doctrine" be given up and a policy of Pan-American defense adopted.

"Even those South Americans who do not fear our imperialism realize the selfishness of the Monroe Doctrine," said he, "and it makes them dislike us and mistrust our foreign policy. I believe we can safely trust the handling of the present Mexican situation to President Wilson. At the same time, I wish it were possible for him to call openly on the leading American powers for a conference as to what should best be done for the peace and prosperity of our war-stricken neighbor across the Rio Grande."

Dr. William Bingham, Professor of Latin-American History at Yale, expressed similar views, declaring that the Monroe Doctrine was distasteful to the Latin-American countries and the policy known as "Monroeism" was not liked at all.

Favors Joint Intervention.

Charles H. Sherrill, former American Minister at Buenos Aires, suggested that in case affairs in Mexico should make it necessary for the United States to intervene, Argentina or Brazil or some other South American country be invited to join. "Such an invitation," said Mr. Sherrill, "would have two marked tendencies. First, it would undoubtedly relieve any idea among our South American neighbors that our purpose was land grabbing. Secondly, it would free our Government from the persistent importunities of individuals and corporations urging our sole intervention to benefit their own pockets, but who would not favor a joint intervention by us along with other powers.

Rear Admiral French E. Chadwick, U. S. N., retired, held that while the relations of the United States to the larger nations of South America should be as an equal among equals, the question of the Carribean, the Gulf of Mexico, and that part of the Pacific bordering Central America had a different status.

Prof. Philip M. Brown of Princeton, former Minister to Honduras, advocated a union of the Central American Republics, and urged that the United States take the initiative in bringing it about.

W. B. Boyle, publisher and author, proposed a plan by which, he argued, South American trade could be obtained and retained by American merchants and manufacturers. This was by making the Panama Canal Zone a free city and a free port.

DIAZ FAVORS EMBARGO.

If in Power Would Ask United States to Continue It, He Says.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

HAVANA, Nov. 21.—Gen. Felix Diaz received THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent this evening, and for the first time since his arrival in Cuba consented to give his views concerning the situation in Mexico. He said:

"If the Congress which Huerta dissolved on Oct. 26 were to be reinstated and all the votes recounted, and if Huerta and Blanquet were eliminated as candidates and all votes which were defective or illegal were to be thrown out and classed as null and void, and the remaining votes were counted for the remaining three candidates, namely, Calero, Gamboa, and Diaz—then I would be most willing to abide by the result. That is to say, if it was found that either of the other two candidates mentioned had received a majority of the votes, I would be more than willing to conform to the outcome and congratulate the winner.

At the same time both myself and the other candidates would request the United States to continue the present embargo on all contrabands of war. If this were done I feel assured that peace would soon be reestablished in Mexico.

Gen. Diaz has received advices stating that Pedro Guerrero Mendez, who charges him with shooting him, was formerly a secret agent of Madero. Later he went over to Huerta. When last seen in Mexico City he was going to Vera Cruz on a secret mission for the Government. At Vera Cruz he was lost sight of and then turned up in Havana.

NEW MARCONI CHARGE.

Four Cents a Word the Rate for Reporting Ship Positions.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—It became known here to-day that shipping people were considerably vexed over the fact that the Marconi Wireless Telegraph Company of America had decided to charge 4 cents a word on all messages containing "ocean position" reports sent from vessels at sea to naval radio stations and the United States Hydrographic office.

Hitherto the Marconi company has sent the wireless reports from arriving ships free. These have gone to the hydrographic office and to the newspapers. Now all position reports of ships must be prepared by the vessels themselves at 4 cents a word.

The United States Hydrographic Office has sent a bulletin to the shipping world and all radio stations telling of the new rule on the part of the Marconi Company.

the courtroom. He testified that he had a $2,500,000 barge canal contract, and, also, road contracts amounting to about $75,000. He had purchased the barge canal contract from another firm, he said.

"Are you the Democratic leader of Buffalo?" asked Mr. Whitman.

"That's what they call me now," replied Burgard smiling.

Burgard said that he had contributed to the Democratic campaigns for twenty years, and had given $1,000 through the regular channels in 1911. In 1912 and 1913, he said, he had made no contributions to the State Committee, but had spent some money in local fights in Buffalo. The two checks aggregating $6,000, he said, were brought to him by Mr. Smith, the consulting engineer of Fulton, in the Fall of 1912. They were made out to Mr. John A. McLean, he said. Smith, he said, wanted $1,000 of the money sent back to the Oswego County Committee.

"But they wouldn't do that," said Burgard.

"Who's they?" asked Mr. Whitman.

"Either Norman E. Mack, John A. Mason, or George M. Palmer," replied Burgard. "They were all at the State Committee office at 1 West Thirty-fourth Street when I brought the checks there."

Neither of the Smith checks, it was said yesterday, appears in the McLean statement of receipts for 1912. Mr. Palmer succeeded Mack as Chairman of the Democratic State Committee. Mr. Mason is the secretary of the committee and was secretary to Gov. Dix.

Mr. Whitman's examination of Burgard turned to the Highway Advisory Board, which was appointed by Commissioner Carlisle under the Sulzer Administration. The members of this board are Col. William De H. Washington, Harold Parker, and G. C. Diehl. Diehl is Engineer of Erie County. Burgard admitted aiding Diehl to become a member of the board, but denied that he knew that Diehl received $60 a day for 31 days in October, (including Sundays;) 29 days in September, 27 days in August, and 24 days in July of this year. He denied that he was associated with Diehl in a brick company, or that specifications had been drawn by this Advisory Board for the Highway Department so as to include bricks manufactured by Diehl's company. He had never heard that Diehl was associated with any brick company, he insisted.

Let me explain about Diehl and his appointment," said Burgard. "Diehl asked me to help him get on the board, and asked me to see Carlisle. I did, and Carlisle said that he wanted to appoint Diehl but that Sulzer objected because of Diehl's friendship for Fitzpatrick. I told Carlisle I'd speak for Diehl, and I did."

"Did you ever lay any of Diehl's bricks in the City of Buffalo?" asked Mr. Whitman, quickly.

"I'll swear," replied Burgard, "that I never laid a brick in my life made by a company in which I knew Diehl to be interested."

Burgard's testimony ended with denials that he knew anything about the Bush-Percival Company or the James C. Easterline Company of Buffalo.

Wise Fights for McGuire.

As soon as Burgard left the stand McGuire's name was called, but before McGuire stepped to the witness chair Mr. Wise addressed the court. He had no standing in court, he admitted, but wanted to ask for the court's protection of his client.

"If he refuses to answer any questions he will be threatened," said Mr. Wise, "as he was threatened last night in the newspapers, with the prospect of indictments for perjury. I protest against these things. Mr. McGuire is here to testify to the truth, and he has been advised by me that this proceeding is illegal and that he may refuse to answer any questions he sees fit. I ask the court's protection from threats and recriminations by the District Attorney."

Mr. Whitman jumped to his feet with objections. He asserted that Mr. Wise had no standing in court, and that he should be ordered to stop his interruptions. Mr. Wise on this occasion subsided. He got no ruling from Magistrate McAdoo, and the examination went on.

As had been expected, Mr. Whitman at once took up the matter of the reported conference on July 5 at Cooperstown between William Sulzer, James K. McGuire, George H. McGuire, and State Highway Commissioner Carlisle. McGuire denied that he was in Cooperstown on that day. He could not account very satisfactorily for his whereabouts between July 3 and July 7, but he was certain that his trip to Cooperstown was made later in the Summer. He could not tell where his brother, James K. McGuire, was at the time of the reported conference.

There followed a long examination on the different kinds of asphalt used in road paving. Mr. Whitman wanted to get the witness's view about the asphalt sold by the Barber Asphalt Paving Company and that of the Warner-Quinlan Company. These two companies have waged a long fight in the courts. It has been asserted that specifications were so drawn at Albany that the Warner-Quinlan product, which is a liquid asphalt, could not be employed in road construction.

McGuire insisted that there was a material difference between the products of the rival concerns. He referred the District Attorney to experts who had examined the two products.

"Don't you know that the Appellate Division has rendered a decision that there is no difference between so-called natural or Barber asphalt and the liquid or Warner-Quinlan product?" shouted the District Attorney.

That was all news to him, the witness asserted, and then Mr. Whitman, in his questions, conveyed information about natural asphalt, solid asphalt and "liquid" asphalt. He quoted from court decisions which held that the only difference between the two was that one was dried by the sun and that the other was not.

"When was this decision rendered?" asked McGuire at one point.

"I'm not giving you information. I'm seeking it from you," retorted the District Attorney.

Whitman Wins in Bitter Clash.

Then came the discussion which almost put an end to the John Doe proceedings before Magistrate McAdoo. The question which brought on the fight was this:

"McGuire, are you not the one who is responsible for the insertion of the word 'solid' in the Highway Department specifications?"

Mr. Wise, who had been conferring with Mr. Littleton, was on his feet before his client could answer.

"I object to this, your Honor," he shouted.

"And I," burst in Mr. Whitman in much louder tones. "object to Mr. Wise's saying anything here. He has no standing in the court."

In a moment Magistrate McAdoo, Mr. Whitman, and Mr. Wise were all talking at the same time. Magistrate McAdoo pounded on the desk.

"Bring me a gavel! Bring me a gavel!" he cried.

Mr. Wise and Mr. Whitman faced each other. Both gesticulated. Mr. Wise was so earnest that he jumbled his words.

"I protest against these proceedings," shouted the District Attorney. "If Mr. Wise has another word I'll take this case before the Grand Jury."

"I ask your Honor" broke in Mr. Wise.

"I will be the first to protect the rights of this witness," interrupted Magistrate McAdoo.

Then Magistrate McAdoo suggested that he would hear Mr. Wise as a personal favor to "a reputable member of the bar." He warned Mr. Wise, however, that he must say nothing concerning the man on the witness stand.

Mr. Wise immediately proceeded to bring up the question of jurisdiction, and the fight grew hotter.

"I contend that this Court has no jurisdiction, and the District Attorney no jurisdiction," he began.

"This conduct is outrageous," broke in Mr. Whitman, and those who have observed his conduct in courts for years said that he never was more vehement. "I protest in the name of the people of New York. I appeal to the Court to do its duty. It is my duty to protest."

"And I appeal to the Court to do its duty," said Mr. Wise. "I, too, speak for the people of—"

The gavel dropped, and for a moment it seemed as if Mr. Wise would have his way.

"One word more from Mr. Wise," shouted Mr. Whitman, "and I will take this witness before the Grand Jury. This proceeding is defined by law, and nothing that Mr. Wise or the Court can say can alter the law. I protest in the name of the law."

"A subpœna; bring me a subpœna!" shouted Mr. Whitman, when Mr. Wise again attempted to interrupt.

Assistant District Attorney Clark was already writing out a subpœna for McGuire, and when he handed it to Mr. Whitman the latter waved it before him.

"One word more and I'll serve it," said the District Attorney. "I'll not ask another question in this proceeding. I'll be through with it."

This changed the aspect of affairs, and Mr. Wise sat down. Magistrate McAdoo said: "Mr. Wise, you are a reputable member of this bar, and as such I address you. I shall protect the interests of your client in every respect. The hearing will proceed."

That was the end of the clash, and Mr. Wise did not interrupt again. He busied himself for a great part of the time after that with the examination of McGuire's bank accounts as they lay on the counsel table.

McGuire Wanted "Natural Asphalt"

Answering the question which had started the trouble, McGuire said that he could not recall whether he had asked to have the word "solid" inserted in highway specifications. He might have asked, he admitted, to have the words "natural asphalt" inserted.

From that time on McGuire was on the defensive and the admissions piled up one on the other.

"Why did you ask to have the specifications changed?" thundered Mr. Whitman, stepping close to the witness.

"Because it was to your interest, isn't that true?" he

"Yes," replied McGuire, "because I had an interest in having natural asphalt used."

McGuire denied in the next breath that he was aware that this change in the specifications excluded the Warner-Quinlan Company from selling its materials to the State or to contractors on State roads. He denied that he had sought this change because the Warner-Quinlan Company had refused to pay him commissions. Mr. Whitman gave him another chance, and this time he said he couldn't recall whether or not the Warner-Quinlan Company had refused to give him commissions.

Asks $5,000 Each from Three.

McGuire weakened a little later when Mr. Whitman picked up a paper from the counsel table. Whitman said nothing, but McGuire quite unexpectedly admitted that he had told P. R. Quinlan of the Warner-Quinlan Company that if his company gave a $5,000 campaign contribution to the Democratic State Committee and at the same time gave him a commission on sales he would seek to give the Warner-Quinlan product a place in State road specifications.

"And didn't you have a conversation with Fillmore Condit of the Union Oil Company of California along the same line?" continued Mr. Whitman.

"Perhaps I did," parried the witness, "but not in this county."

This phrase "not in this county" amused Mr. Whitman. It was clear that the witness, like his lawyer, was thinking about Mr. Whitman's jurisdiction.

"Never mind whether you had it in this county or not," retorted the District Attorney. "You tried to make a deal with them, too, didn't you?"

"I was trying to sell, to make a living," replied McGuire.

Again Mr. Whitman produced a paper and frankly told the witness that it was an affidavit from Mr. Condit of the Union Oil Company. It had its effect.

McGuire admitted that he knew Condit as a contractor who sold oil and other products to the State and to contractors doing State work.

"You knew, didn't you, that Mr. Condit couldn't sell the goods of the Union Oil Company unless the specifications permitted the use of his goods," was the next question.

At first McGuire insisted that Condit could sell his goods regardless of specifications, but he faltered when Mr. Whitman wanted to know what Mc-Guire's object was in dealing with Condit. Finally McGuire told this story:

"Yes, I had a conversation with Mr Condit. I told him that if he would contribute $5,000 to the Democratic State Committee and give me 1 cent a gallon on all material I sold I might be able to sell their product. Honestly I can't remember. Mr. Whitman, how much commission I got from the Union Oil Company. If Mr. Condit mentions the amount in his affidavit he may be right. Perhaps he is."

"And you told Condit that if he gave up $5,000 you would deal with the State of New York, isn't that it," asked Mr. Whitman, driving still further home

"That was a plan of mine," answered McGuire, perturbed but not excited, "but it didn't work out. The plan was to have them pay the $5,000 and to charge it against my commissions."

"To whom else did you suggest this?"

"I might have said it to the United States Asphalt Refining Company."

"And didn't you say that their money would come back to them, and that neither you nor the contractors but the State would ultimately pay the $5,000 contributions?"

"No, Mr. Whitman, I didn't say that," protested McGuire. "I merely told them that I might be able to negotiate some sales for them."

"Didn't you know it was a crime to solicit campaign contributions from a corporation in New York?"

"No, I didn't think it was a crime if they were to be charged against my commissions. I didn't know it was a crime to get advances and charge them against my commission."

McGuire made a great point of saying that he had meant to "charge against his commissions." He got into deep water when Mr. Whitman reminded him that such an arrangement would have made him and not the corporations the contributors.

As to the United States Asphalt Refining Company, McGuire admitted that he had sold for them some 400,000 gallons of oil at a commission of one cent a gallon. He had dealt either with a Mr. Forbes or a Mr. Whitney of that company, he said. He had suggested to the man he dealt with, he said, that if $5,000 were paid he might be able to sell more of their material.

Whitman Refers to Blackmail.

"What other companies did you try to hold up and blackmail?" asked Mr. Whitman.

The witness could not recall any others. Mr. Whitman indicated that he would refresh his memory at a future time. It was learned that the two other companies on the District Attorney's list are the Barber Asphalt Paving Company and the Warner Brothers of Boston.

It had been brought out at a previous hearing that James K. McGuire, the brother of the witness, shared in all commissions on the sales of asphalt oils and other road materials to the State or to contractors on State jobs. The profits of these commissions went to a joint account of the two brothers. George H. McGuire had testified before that this account showed deposits of $8,000 to $10,000. Mr. Whitman produced the joint account in court yesterday and it showed deposits of $20,000.

James K. McGuire, the witness said yesterday, was in the West Indies. He had sailed ten days ago, he said, but he didn't know on what ship. At the last hearing he said he had sailed to South America and at that time he said he had sailed "two or three days ago."

McGuire impressed on Mr. Whitman that his plan to get $5,000 contributions from corporations was not carried out because it was found not to be feasible. Mr. Whitman got admissions that McGuire and his brother got commissions from at least seven different concerns during the Sulzer Administration. These were the Barber Asphalt Company, the United States Asphalt Refining Company, Alsen's American Cement Company, the Kentucky Rock Asphalt Company, the Dragon Cement Company, and the Knickerbocker Cement Company.

Relations with C. F. Murphy, Jr.

Suddenly the name of Charles F. Murphy, Jr., was brought into the proceedings. This is the story which McGuire told about his relations with young Murphy:

Young Murphy, he said, was in the bonding business with an office in this city. McGuire & Co., he said, did a like business in Syracuse. Both the McGuires and young Murphy represented the same company, the United States Fidelity and Guaranty Company of Baltimore. Ostensibly, McGuire & Co. and Murphy are competitors, but as a matter of fact they split their profits on all business except that of a strictly local nature.

Then it came out that McGuire and Murphy split commissions on a large percentage of the bonding business not only on the barge canal and the State highways, but also on the aqueduct and the New York subways. McGuire had known Murphy for several years, he said.

This talk about Murphy ended McGuire's testimony, and he was told to hold himself in readiness to testify a week from next Tuesday. It was understood that he could go home to Syracuse in the meantime.

Contractors Tell of Gifts.

The contractors then were called to the stand. They were John Weidman, Guy B. Dickinson, Charles O. McCombs, and William J. Burns, all of Syracuse. The first three admitted having made contributions to Everett P. Fowler in 1910 and 1911, and Burns, the last one called, said that he had contributed to William H. Kelley instead.

Assistant District Attorney Clark conducted the examination. All except Burns admitted that they thought it would help them in their business, to contribute. All admitted that they had State contracts when they were asked to contribute to the Democratic fund, and that they had never contributed prior to having such contracts.

Contractor Weidman said he received three letters from William H. Kelley to which he paid no attention. These letters were produced in evidence and proved to be similar to those which were sent to Hull, the man on whose testimony Fowler was indicted. When he failed to respond to the letters, Weidman testified, he got a telephone call purporting to come from Kelley's office. Subsequently, he said, he learned from his clerk that Fowler had visited his office and asked for a campaign contribution.

"Just before election in 1911 I mailed a check to Norman E. Mack for $200," he said. "I had five road contracts running to about $65,000. In 1912 Fowler came to Syracuse again and I went to Kelley and told him I wanted to contribute to aid a neighbor of mine and that I didn't want to pay to Fow

FRENCH AVIATORS TO DO LOOPS HERE

Garros and Audemars Coming to Perform One Above the Other.

NO TRANSATLANTIC FLIGHT

But Garros Has Plan by Which He Thinks Record from Steamship Could Be Lowered.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

PARIS, Nov. 21.—Roland Garros and Edmond Audemars intend to sail for America in three weeks to give exhibitions of upside-down flying in Florida.

Garros to-day explained that their exhibition will be different from that of Pegoud and of other loop-the-loopers in that he and his partner intend to loop the loop one above the other, one looping down while the other loops up. They have been perfecting their exhibition near Paris this week.

Garros will take with him the machine with which he flew across the Mediterranean. He does not believe an Atlantic flight possible before 1915, but he gave an interesting plan by which he thinks the Atlantic boat record could be lowered.

"I don't say I will attempt it," he said, "because I am no bluffer. I wouldn't promise to attempt to fly across the Mediterranean, but when once I got started I knew I could accomplish it. My plan would be to test the present capacity of the aeroplane. It is simply for an aviator to go aboard the fastest boat and at a certain stage of the trip fly ahead to land. He could keep on doing this, starting earlier on each of the boat's voyages, until he reached a point in the ocean furthest from the other shore that the aeroplane would be able to cross.

"I don't believe in hydroplanes, they are ten years behind the land aeros. I could have had all I wanted for the Mediterranean. They are too heavy on account of the floats and can't carry sufficient petrol. The idea of using two engines also isn't good, in my opinion, because of the extra weight, and, besides, the second engine takes up fuel room. One engine is sufficient, other things being equal, but we've got to have an aero supplied to fly for thirty hours before the Atlantic can be crossed."

TELEPHONE MARVEL DENIED

Alleged Talk from Germany to New Jersey Apparently a Mistake.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Saturday, Nov. 21.—According to a Reuter dispatch from Berlin, Rear Admiral Emsmann, Director of the Lorenz Engineering Company announced at the congress of the Society of Naval Architects that by means of the Goldschmidt high frequency machine his company had succeeded in sending a wireless telephone messages from its station at Neustadt, Hanover, to a station on the New Jersey Coast, a coherent-spoken message, being successfully transmitted for the first time on Oct. 27.

The London Times correspondent, who fully reports the proceedings of the congress, makes no mention of this alleged statement. According to his account, Rear Admiral Emsmann, discussing the Imperator's wireless installation, said that good as it was, it needed to be improved. The telephone should be employed and the day would come when there would be direct wireless telephonic communication between widely distant centres.

Herr Bredow said that telephonic communication from ships was impracticable. The English-speaking German and the English-speaking Chinese would never understand each other over the telephone.

It was stated last night at the offices of the Telefunken Wireless Telegraph Company at 111 Broadway that no such feat had been accomplished, as far as known there. A similar statement was made at the office of the Goldschmidt system at Tuckerton, N. J.

Only four friends were prescnt at the ceremony, which was performed by the rector, the Rev. W. Pennington Bickford. A wedding breakfast was served at the Waldorf. Kirby, who is an architect, has spent the greater part of the last twelve years in Italy, having a studio at Capri, where Miss Bowne has been training for grand opera for the past five years. The bride was once a soprano with the Philadelphia Chicago Opera Company. They will sail for New York Dec. 6.

REVENGE ON SUFFRAGETTES

Their Oxford Offices Wrecked, Following Lumber Yard Fire.

OXFORD, England, Nov. 21.—Vengeance was wreaked on the Suffragettes who early this morning set fire to a great lumber yard on the banks of the Thames, for while the place was still burning the offices of a Suffragette society in this city were raided and wrecked. All the furniture and a large collection of Suffrage literature were thrown into the streets.

The damage done by the lumber yard fire amounted to tens of thousands of dollars. Confirmation of the suspicions of the police that the fire was the work of militant Suffragettes was found on post-cards left on the scene. On these was written, "Send the bill to Chancellor Lloyd George to-night" and "Democracy never has been a menace to property"—a quotation from one of Mr. Lloyd George's speeches.

King Alfonso Also Promotes Them for Bravery in Morocco.

PARIS, Nov. 21.—King Alfonso to-day telegraphed to Lieut. Gen. José Marina, Spanish Military Governor at Tetuan, Morocco, announcing that he had promoted the two military aviators, Capt. His Majesty requested the General to express to the two officers his admiration of their determination and courage.

The improvement in the condition of health of the Queen of Spain, who is suffering from influenza here, was so marked to-day that King Alfonso decided to proceed to Vienna to pay the visit to the Austrian Court already arranged. The Queen in the meantime remains here, and when sufficiently recovered to travel will go to London, to which capital King Alfonso also will go after his visit to Vienna.

CANAL THREATENED BY SPOILS SYSTEM

Army Men at Panama See Endless Graft in Metcalfe's Reorganization Plan.

NEED 5,000 MEN TO OPERATE

Trained Employes Are Rapidly Leaving and Officials Are All at Sea as to Wilson's Purposes.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PANAMA, Nov. 21.—It was announced here to-day that the Atlantic division of the canal construction organization would be abolished on Dec. 1. The Pacific central division is already out of existence. For a few days only the dredging division forces will be employed at Balboa, at the docks, in the workshops, and on the hydraulic work behind the Cucuracha slide.

Then the upclearing along the length of the canal will be the only work left unfinished. The men doing this work are also being gradually reduced in number as the work nears completion. During the last three months the general canal forces have been reduced more than 10,000 men.

In the meantime nothing has been heard from Washington that indicates immediate action on the part of the Administration as to what steps it will take regarding the future government and maintenance of the canal. Without such action the present officials can do nothing toward reorganization. It is feared that the Administration, instead of applying the Mann act, and giving notice of its intention by the necessary executive order, may meditate its amendment along lines proposed by Richard Lee Metcalfe, head of the Department of Civil Administration of the Canal Zone, whose plan entails a three-headed governing commission, with divided responsibility, which would divorce railway operation, canal installation, and the contract system.

It is also feared that, in lieu of the present efficient army control, there will be endless opportunities for graft in this proposal, which would also provide countless political jobs for hungry Democrats. The plans of Mr. Metcalfe are ridiculed throughout the Canal Zone. Yet it is realized here that pressure on the Administration to provide political places may yet lead to its adoption in some form. Hence the delay in applying the Mann act.

An Executive order for the reorganization of the Canal Board is necessary because the present commission is empowered only to construct the canal. The commission has power neither to operate trains nor to provide the necessary force to man the canal. At least 5,000 men will be required for operation. There is excellent material now available, but division after division of released men are departing for new fields of work, and the opportunities for selection are correspondingly decreasing. Unless some action is taken soon it may be necessary to recruit new and untried forces.

There is no friction between the canal builders and the Administration because the former are proceeding with their work steadily under practically limitless powers. Col. Goethals, acting under executive orders of President Wilson's predecessors, but disappointment here is growing because Washington shows no evidence of continuing the methods which produced such magnificent results.

New dredges are eating into the Cucuracha slide at a record pace. The canal otherwise will be practically completed before March, when it will be navigable from end to end for liners of ordinary size. Means must be provided for training men for its operation. This will require nearly a year, and will necessitate training pilots, lockmen, and others before the formal opening of the canal to general use. The authorities need the speedy cooperation of the Administration to carry out these plans.

PANAMA CHINESE WAVERING.

Other Traders Open Stores and Relieve Food Scarcity.

PANAMA, Nov. 21.—The stoppage of business of all kinds by Chinese traders in the Republic of Panama, which started on Monday as a protest against the registration law, continues, but some signs of wavering were shown to-day. The leaders of the movement have cabled to Peking, asking for advice, and their future action will depend on the nature of the reply.

The dearth of food supplies has been relieved in the meantime to some extent by the opening of new stores by other traders. The Government to-day issued a warning to those dealers inclined to take advantage of the situation that the raising of prices would render offenders subject to arrest and imprisonment.

WILL SUE HAMMERSTEIN.

Paris Singers Engage American Lawyers to Represent Them.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

PARIS, Nov. 21.—Gabriel Astruc, manager of the Champs Elysées Théâtre, through whose musical agency Oscar Hammerstein engaged the majority of the French singers, said to-day that the artists had engaged Archibald & Furnald, American lawyers, practicing in Paris, to proceed against Mr. Hammerstein to enforce his contracts or collect damages and that a member of that firm was likely to sail for New York during the next few days.

M. Astruc has issued a strong denial to a published article by Pierre Veber that he (Astruc) and Hammerstein were associated in the New York production. Astruc says he has never been associated with Hammerstein either directly or indirectly, but that his Société Musicale is the only agency serving as an intermediary between Hammerstein and the singers. The contracts, he says, were drawn in the same form as those for the Metropolitan, Chicago, Boston, and Philadelphia operas. He declares that his agency lost a large amount in commissions through Hammerstein's failure to carry out his contracts.

De Cassagnac Repeats by Wire Challenge to German Officer.

PARIS, Nov. 21.—Paul de Cassagnac, the well-known French writer, recently sent a challenge to a duel to Lieut. Baron von Forstner of the Ninety-ninth German Infantry at Zabern, Alsace, who, according to a local newspaper, not only insulted the townspeople, but also the French flag, in front of the Alsatian recruits. The challenge was sent in a registered letter, which Lieut. Forstner returned unopened.

M. Cassagnac to-day repeated his challenge by telegraph, asking Lieut. Forstner whether he was absolutely determined to dishonor his uniform by shirking the consequences of his conduct.

JOHN L. ELLIOTT IN ENGLISH PRISON

Wealthy New Yorker Taken on Serious Charge at His Home in Sussex.

ARREST IN DEAD OF NIGHT

Former Husband of Ethel Irene Stewart, the Opera Singer, and Member of Many Clubs.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 21.—A wealthy American, said to be a New Yorker, was arrested on a serious charge last night by Chief Inspector Fowler and another officer of the criminal investigation department of Scotland Yard under circumstances of great secrecy.

The officers motored down to a house in Sussex, occupied by the prisoner, and effected his arrest in the dead of night. The prisoner was taken to the jail at Lewes and this morning was remanded in custody by the local Justices. Scotland Yard is extremely reticent about the matter.

The prisoner's name is given by the police as John Elliott, but in the neighborhood of his Sussex residence his full name is said to be John L. Elliott. The prisoner recently took up his abode at Hammerwood House, a stately Georgian mansion near East Grinstead, where he resided with his two daughters, the elder of whom is 18 years old. Locally it is said he is divorced and that differences with his wife created a sensation in America a few years ago. Elliott said he was engaged in the promotion of an oil manufacturing company and possessed various patents which he was endeavoring to dispose of in England.

The question of his arrest has been under consideration by the British authorities for some time, and there is reason to believe that before it was actually decided upon an opportunity was given to the prisoner to flee the country.

John Love Elliott was much in the public eye in this city in 1907 in connection with a divorce obtained by his wife, who was Miss Ethel Irene Stewart, the opera singer. He was President of the Consolidated Arizona Smelting Company, Vice President of the Embree Iron Company, and a Director in the Mexican Coal and Coke Company and the Conquista Coal Railway Company. He was also well known as a member of the Metropolitan, New York Athletic, Ardsley, Lawyers', City, and Midday Clubs, and of the Deutscher Verein and Municipal Art Society. His first wife, who was the mother of the two children with him in Sussex, died sixteen years ago. Miss Stewart was his second wife, and his third wife was Miss Laura Moore.

The second Mrs. Elliott was currently reported after the divorce to have received $1,000,000 in alimony. She filed a petition in bankruptcy two years ago, however, with liabilities of $24,816. Among her assets was a claim against her husband for $28,000 unpaid alimony.

Saks Overcoats at $17.50 to $28

mark the difference between clothes which are made to sell and clothes which are made to serve

¶ Many clothes are made to find an immediate sale without regard to ultimate service and subsequent purchases.

¶ Whereas Saks clothes are made always with an eye to perpetuating the patronage of the man who wears them.

¶ But you doubtless wonder what is the essential difference between an overcoat made primarily to sell and one made primarily to serve.

And this is the answer!

¶ The difference between a garment made to sell and one made to serve is not always apparent on the surface.

¶ It is very often a matter of time.

¶ You have got to wear a garment to find out whether its style is evaporative or permanent, transitory or tenacious.

¶ For style may be only show-case deep, or it may be tailored into the garment clear through, as it is in ours.

¶ A Saks overcoat will retain its shape permanently, except to fall more and more into the natural movements of your body.

In fact, a Saks overcoat will fit you perfectly today, and a little better tomorrow!

¶ And, in addition to the above, we have the biggest assortment of models and fabrics in overcoats at $17.50 to $28 in America today.

DEMANDS FREEDOM FOR MAIL WAGONS

Second Assistant Postmaster General Says Their Work Must Not Be Hindered.

ONE DEATH TO 768 MILES

McAdoo, McKay, and Many Others Tell Aldermen Speed Is Menace to Pedestrians.

There was a public hearing yesterday before a special committee of the Board of Aldermen on the resolution to amend the speed ordinance to restrict United States mail wagons from going at reckless speed through the city streets. Second Assistant Postmaster General Joseph Stewart appeared in behalf of the Post Office Department and argued that the present speed maintained by mail wagons was not excessive and any interference with the present schedule would result in delaying the delivery of the mails. The hearing was held in the Aldermanic Chamber with Alderman Ralph Folks presiding.

Mr. Stewart was the first to speak in opposition to the proposed amendment. He said that this was the first time the United States had been asked to appear before the Board of Aldermen of this city to defend its rights to a Federal function. Mail trucks, carrying the mails for the entire country, he said, would be placed on the same footing as all other vehicles under the proposed ordinance and removed from the special class in which they should be placed.

"I have noted with surprise," he said, "that in the criticisms of the mail truck service almost the entire burden of the proof has been placed on the mail carriers. That criticism against the mail trucks is unjust, uncalled for, and unwarranted by the facts.

"There is no discrimination made where chauffeurs have been to blame and where they have not been to blame. The correspondents who have access to the columns of the daily press have not said anything when it has been found that the chauffeurs have been guilty or have been discharged."

Mr. Stewart said he had been told that during the last year one accident for every 300 auto vehicles had occurred, and that one fatality had resulted for every eighteen mail trucks used. He did not believe such was the case, or the facts, but said there was one fatality for every 197 automobiles and auto trucks and one fatality for every twenty-four vehicles.

"These statistics,' he said, "do not go into the physical condition of the city and the number of miles made by the vehicles. The average mileage per fatality for mail trucks is 768. The ratio of accidents as to miles of travel between other trucks and mail wagons is one to five in favor of other vehicles.

"We believe that this amendment is an unjust discrimination against the business of the Federal Government. Its purpose and effect is to exclude the mail trucks of the United States from the exemptions accorded the vehicles of the City of New York. We have been asked why, if our automobiles do not exceed fifteen miles an hour, we wish to exempt them from the statute which would permit them to go more than that. It shifts the burden of proof from the contractor to the chauffeur and makes him prove that he was not going more than fifteen miles an hour. It places the business of carrying the United States mails in a nondescript category. It is unfair.

"The mail trucks seldom, if ever, reach fifteen miles an hour. Our schedules call for nine miles an hour and twelve miles as a maximum, and that includes stops. If we are stopped at every corner and must wait behind every street car, we will not be able to meet our schedule at eleven miles per hour."

Mr. Stewart said that he believed that the mail trucks ought not to go more than the limit proposed by the ordinance when passing school houses between the hours of 9 in the morning and 4 in the afternoon, and he said he would issue orders to the contractors to see that this rule was carried out.

"We are doing our best by the city of New York," he said. "Never has the Government transported your mails so well as to-day. This proposed ordinance will interfere with our service. Who is going to answer to the great banking and commercial interests of the city if these changes are made and if the schedules are shortened and delays result? The United States has the right to move the mails about your city without unnecessary interference. The streets are post roads of the United States Government, and they may be used by the United States Government to transport its mails. The facts show that up to the present time the contractors have not been culpable to the extent that we need come here and apologize for them."

Chairman Folks wanted to know if the service would be affected if more mail trucks were used. Mr. Stewart replied that it would lengthen the schedule.

"A more inopportune time could not have been selected to bring up this matter," he said, "because the volume of mail has been increased seventeen per cent. since last Christmas."

Alderman Folks said that the Board did not want to discriminate unjustly against the United States and he asked if the Government had any power over chauffeurs who operated mail trucks recklessly.

"Yes," said Mr. Stewart. "If the violations warrant it, I shall see that the chauffeurs are discharged. I have that power under the contract."

Henry Raleigh, President of the contracting company which furnishes the trucks, said that he had followed 100 mail trucks in a touring car, and that in only one case had he seen a chauffeur drive faster than fifteen miles an hour.

Chief Magistrate William McAdoo spoke in favor of the amendment to the ordinance. He said that in 95 per cent. of the cases brought by the police to the Magistrates' courts against the mail drivers a speed of from twenty to twenty-two miles an hour was alleged.

"The danger to life and limb in this borough is great," said Magistrate McAdoo. "No man or woman leaves his or her house in the morning without apprehension that he or she may encounter an accident on the streets. In all these cases the main thing is to protect the pedestrian. The pedestrian has the right of way, and to allow the mail auto trucks to be exempt to the traffic ordinances is dangerous."

First Deputy Police Commissioner Douglas I. McKay said that the only way to protect the public was to take the mail wagons from the exemption of the regular rules for driving. Dr. D. C. Potter, Director of the Board of Ambulance Service also requested that the ordinance be passed.

Frederick H. Elliott, President of the Travel Club; Henry M. Powell, representing the National Highways Protective Society and Lester F. Ittenhoffer, representing the Aldermanic Committee of the Citizens Union also spoke in behalf of regulating the mail trucks. Others who spoke in favor of the ordinance were Magistrate House, T. Bruce Cobb of 47 Wall Street, and William V. McManus, an accident investigator and for seven years an employe of the Post Office Department.

The committee decided to hold a meeting on Monday and frame a report to be turned over to the Board of Aldermen.

HEAR MISS BELLE GREEN.

America Has Finest Libraries, Morgan Librarian Tells Woman's Forum

Miss Belle Da Costa Green, librarian of the Morgan library, gave a talk upon libraries and the collecting of books before the Woman's Forum, of which she is about to become a member, at the Waldorf-Astoria yesterday morning. She spoke of the women librarians of the city's public libraries, who, she said, received inadequate pay for the qualities, education, time and service required of them. She said that salary increases were being considered by the Board of Aldermen, having been passed by the Board of Estimate, and the Forum voted immediately to send a petition to the Aldermen asking them to decide favorably in the matter.

"I like to speak of the great private collections of books, for they are responsible for the great public collections like those of the British Museum, the Bibliotheque Nationale, the Vatican Library, and our own New York City Library. Private libraries are bequeathed to public institutions or are purchased."

She told of an old-time library being called the "home of the soul," and said that a German magazine had applied that name to Mr. Morgan's library.

"The forming of libraries is no new thing," she said. "There were famous libraries in olden times in the Far East, where every desert seemed to own a library."

At the present time, she said, America stood pre-eminent in the possession of fine libraries. She spoke of an Englishman who had criticised the catalogue of the New York Public Library.

"New York has the finest catalogue in the world," she said. "The British Museum has no catalogue, and neither has the Bibliotheque Nationale in Paris. So much is given people here that they expect everything. The trouble with people who are not satisfied with the catalogue is that their brains are not properly catalogued."

DIES ON BRIDGE TRAIN.

Pattern Maker Expires Clinging to a Strap in a Crowded Hour.

George E. Knowles, a pattern maker living at 1,263 Bedford Avenue, Brooklyn, died in the rush-hour crowd aboard an elevated train while it was crossing the Brooklyn Bridge at 5:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon. Mr. Knowles fought with others to get into the crowded cars, and finally got a chance to hang to a strap in a car near the centre of the train.

Half-way over the bridge he fell heavily against others holdings straps close to him. At the Sand Street station the train was stopped and Mr. Knowles was removed to the Emergency Hospital, where Dr. Cohen said he had died aboard the train from heart disease.

A diamond-studded locket worn by Mr. Knowles contained an inscription praising him highly on account of his service to the Pattern Makers' League, and indicating that the locket was a gift from the league in recognition of his services. Mr. Knowles had conducted his pattern-making business at 69 Beekman Street, Manhattan, for the last wenty years.

JOHN H. MARBLE DIES SUDDENLY

Interstate Commerce Commissioner Expires in Capital After Day's Illness.

STRICKEN AT HIS WORK

Acute Indigestion Overcomes Him in Philadelphia, but Attack Was Not Thought to be Serious.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—John H. Marble, a member of the Interstate Commerce Commission, died to-night following an attack of acute indigestion by which he was stricken yesterday in Philadelphia.

Mr. Marble's death came very suddenly, not even the members of his family being warned of the approaching end. Mr. Marble and their eighteen-year-old daughter, who had been almost constantly at the bedside since yesterday, were not in the room at the time, the family physician having just been called in.

When the Commissioner reached here last night from Philadelphia his condition was not so serious as when he left that city.

The physician was called, but there were no indications that the patient's condition was dangerous. Improvement continued until this evening, when Mr. Marble was attacked with nauseating spells. He died at 7:30 o'clock, a few moments after the doctor arrived.

Funeral arrangements had not been completed to-night, but the body probably will be taken to Mr. Marble's old home in San Francisco for interment.

Mr. Marble had been connected with the Interstate Commerce Commission for several years and was thoroughly trained in its intricate workings. He first came here in 1906 as confidential clerk to Franklin K. Lane, now Secretary of the Department of the Interior. Soon afterward he was made attorney in charge of the division of prosecutions. Later he was appointed Secretary of the commission, to succeed Edward A. Moseley. In this capacity he acted as legal adviser to the commission. He succeeded Mr. Lane when the latter entered President Wilson's Cabinet, and had been active in the commission's cases, particularly its criminal prosecutions. During the Lorimer investigation in the Senate he had a leave of absence to appear as counsel for the investigating committee.

Mr. Marble was 46 years of age. He was a linotype operator for a time, but later studied law. He practiced law and engaged in newspaper work on the Pacific Coast.

The Trustees of the university have had the plans under consideration nearly a year, and it is expected that the dean who is to be named will take charge of the school in April. The school itself will be opened in September, 1914.

SLAYS THREE OF POSSE.

Mexican, Wanted for Murder, Kills Police Chief and Deputies.

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, Nov. 21.—Chief of Police Grant of Bingham and Deputy Sheriffs Otto Whitbeck and Nephi Jensen were killed in a fight with Ralph Lopez, a Mexican, near Saratoga Springs, Utah, late to-day. Lopez is wanted in Bingham for the murder of a countryman named John Valdez early this morning near the Highland Boy Mine there.

Immediately after the murder Lopez, armed with a rifle, left the mining camp and fled to the hills, with a posse in pursuit, but the trail in the snow was soon lost. It was picked up again this afternoon and the fugitive was located hiding in a clump of bushes near Saratoga Springs.

Deputy Sheriff Whitebeck ordered him to surrender and was answered by a bullet, which killed him. Lopez then turned his gun on Chief Grant and he fell dead. Jensen, the third member of the posse, received a wound while trying to defend his comrade, from which he died. After teh shooting of the officers Lopez resumed his flight. Several automobile loads of police and Deputy Sheriffs are searching for the murderer.

STORE CLERKS HEAR UNION IS GROWING

Speakers at Second Outdoor Meeting Tell Girls of Need of Organization.

CIRCULARS DISTRIBUTED

Workers Must Unionize to Get Better Pay, Says Miss Dutcher—Urges Against Striking.

Many members had been enrolled in the new Retail Clerks' Union since the meeting last Monday, Miss Elizabeth Dutcher of 39 Pierrepont Street, Brooklyn, told a big throng of young women at a second meeting held last night in Eighteenth Street near Fifth Avenue. This meeting was for the benefit of employes of the Greenhut-Siegel Cooper Company, and the speakers delivered their appeals to the girls to organize from two automobiles.

With Miss Dutcher were Miss Mary R. Sanford, who, after many years' work in the Consumers' League, has come to the conclusion that the only help for shop girls is in their own unions; Miss Helen Schloss, one of the workers in the Lawrence and Paterson strikes; Ella Reeva Bloor and several other women and men.

Circulars of the union, which were distributed, told that the union demanded for its members fifty-four hours' work a week, with double pay for Sunday and evenings, a paid vacation of one week, and equal pay for equal work.

"How is a young woman to maintain her health and a pleasing appearance on $5 a week?" it asked.

Attached was an application blank for membership, to be signed and sent to 140 East Nineteenth Street. Miss Dutcher told the girls she did not wish them to strike and lose their positions, but to band together so that they could demand living wages.

"They say nothing can be done for the shop girls," said Miss Dutcher. "They have done everything for the factory girl, but there is just as good stuff in the girls of the stores, and we will not be satisfied until we get the same money for you that the girls in Oregon have—not less than $9.25 a week. You all know the story of the Triangle fire. They would raise wages temporarily and give benefits, and what came of it all? The big fire and locked doors. The only way you can get anything is by depending upon yourselves. A man in one of the Fifth Avenue shops said the other day that the only way that girls in the shops could get away from the present terrible conditions was by organizing.

"Some of the papers said after our last meeting that we are a lot of women who didn't know what we were talking about and only wanted to get our names in the papers. We know about shops. I have been meeting with shop girls for years. I hear a voice from the edge of the crowd saying sometimes: 'Lady, why don't you hire a hall?'

"If we should get Cooper Union tomorrow night and have President Wilson, Roosevelt, and Mrs. Pankhurst to speak to you, you wouldn't come. You would be afraid of the spotters and the plain clothes men and the men from the shops, and that you would lose your positions the next day. But no one can say anything if you stop to hear a lady talking from an automobile.

"I want you to make your trade the cleanest, healthiest, and best there is. One of you can't do anything, but when you all work together you can."

LARGE FACTORY BURNS.

Two Employes Injured, but Nearly 300 Escape.

Fire destroyed yesterday the milling, manufacturing, and drying departments of the Atlantic Macaroni Company in Vernon Avenue and Fourteenth Street, Long Island City, said to be the biggest plant of the kind in the United States. Many big factories are in the immediate vicinity, and four alarms were sent in.

Three hundred Italian men, women and girls are employed in the factory. They all escaped except Frank Pecorino, 30 years old, of 464 Vernon Avenue, and his brother, James Pecorino, 26 years old, of 462 Vernon Avenue. They were caught in the blaze and were badly burned. James McHugh, engineer in charge of the fire engine belonging to Engine Company 258, was struck in the head by a piece of machinery but remained at his post. On the way to the fire the automobile of one of the Deputy Fire Chiefs struck Miss Gertrude Rush, 18 years old, of 166 India Street, Greenpoint. The accident happened on Manhattan Avenue, Greenpoint, and the girl was placed in a wagon and taken to St. John's Hospital in Long Island City, where it was reported that her injuries were not serious.

The fire burned for more than two hours and the interior of the centre of the factory was gutted, but the offices and shipping department in the front of the building were saved.

USED ANOTHER'S NAME.

Fugitive from Magdalen Home Posed as Sunday School Teacher.

In the accounts printed on Thursday of the escape of two inmates from the Magdalen Home for Girls at Inwood, one of the young women was said to be May Brown, 24 years old, of 237 Bay Thirty-fifth Street, Brooklyn. A Miss May Brown lives at the Bay Thirty-fifth Street address, but she is not the young woman who escaped. Miss Brown of 237 Bay Thirty-fifth Street is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Matt Brown, and is employed by a coffee concern at Front Street and Old Slip, Manhattan. She is a graduate of a Brooklyn school and is a teacher in the Sunday School of St. John's Evangelical Church in Brooklyn. Miss Brown's parents are at a loss to know how her name became connected with the Inwood escape.

It was said yesterday afternoon by those in charge of the Magdalen Home that nothing was known regarding the identity of one of the young women who escaped other than that she said when she was admitted to the home that she was May Brown of Bay Thirty-fifth Street.

MISS NETHERSOLE WINS BIG VERDICT

Jury Awards Actress $32,217 for Breach of Contract.

WAS TO GET $1,000 WEEKLY

No Specific Contract Drawn, but Jury Accepts as Evidence the Cablegrams Exchanged.

Miss Olga Nethersole, the English actress who appeared in "Mary of Magdala" during 1910 under the management of the Shubert Theatrical Company and Liebler & Co., received a jury award of $32,217.32 yesterday in her suit for breach of contract. This was the full amount she sought.

She was brought to this country by the defendants, it was shown, under a contract whereby she was to receive $1,000 a week for two seasons of twenty-five weeks each in 1910 and 1911. After fulfilling this contract for the first year her managers failed to engage her for the second. The damages asked included an unpaid balance of her first year's salary and the second year's contract with interest.

There was no specific contract drawn, but Miss Nethersole's allegations were based on cablegrams and letters from the defendants, and Supreme Court Justice Pendleton instructed the jury that contracts could be established by such writings.

Lee Shubert testified he had kept Miss Nethersole employed during the first year, although the play in which she starred was a loss, because he felt under a moral obligation to do so, having brought her to this country. He defended his action in not engaging her during the second year by stating that Miss Nethersole had herself informed him that no contract existed between them.

Brashear's Long Trip for Dinner.

PITTSBURGH Nov. 21.—Dr. John A. Brashear, the noted astronomer and lens manufacturer, left Pittsburgh last night for Oakland, Cal., to keep a promise made twenty-four years ago to Dr. Charles Burckhalter, director of the Chabot Observatory. In 1889 Dr. Brashear was a member of a total eclipse expedition that visited the Pacific slope and, while he was a guest at a birthday party given by Dr. Burckhalter, promised that, if alive, he would eat his seventy-third birthday dinner with Dr. Burckhalter.

Male instructors will be furnished for boys and women teachers will instruct girls. Pupils with eruptions of the skin will not be permitted to use the pools.

THREATENS SUBWAY WORK.

Stephen M. Hoye May Bring Taxpayers' Suit Over Harlem Tunnels.

Stephen M. Hoye, a lawyer of 286 Fifth Avenue, has written to Mayor Kline, the members of the Board of Estimate and the Public Service Commission threatening to bring a taxpayers' suit to protect the interests of the taxpayers in connection with the construction of the Lexington Avenue tunnels under the East River. In this he charges that fraud, collusion, neglect of duty, deceit, waste and favoritism played a part in the preparation of the plans, and that $649,880 was advanced to the contractors before they had completed a single foot of the tunnel.

Chairman McCall of the Public Service Commission said last night that he had not received the letter. Its contents were outlined to him by a reporter and he replied:

"I don't know anything about it; I don't know what he is talking about. I have no further comment to make."

The contract for the Harlem River section of the new Lexington Avenue subway was let to the Arthur McMullen & Hoff Company. On Nov. 3 David D. McBean, an unsuccessful bidder, filed an affidavit in the Controller's office in which he alleged that he had suffered damages to the extent of $1,000,000 by the infringement of his patents on tunnel construction work. Moreover, he asserted that the work actually being done on the tunnels was not in accordance with the plans and specifications. He has filed a claim against the city for $1,000,000 and has also started suit against the contractors.

Whether Mr. McBean had anything to do with the contemplated taxpayers' action Mr. Hoye would not say. Two or three people were willing to start the action, he said, and it had been decided not to make their names public until the suit was actually begun in the Supreme Court.

Mr. Hoye charges among other things that the plans for the tunnel were surreptitiously prepared so as to give a favorite contractor an advantage over others, and to call for nearly double the quantity of material requisite properly to construct the tunnel. Thus, Mr. Hoye asserts, it was possible for the contractor to make his bid several hundred thousand dollars higher than it need have been.

Then Mr. Hoye makes his charges of fraudulent certification. He says:

Although the contractors did not have a single foot of the tunnel completed on Sept. 1, 1913, nevertheless the September estimates show that the contractors had been paid $427,050 previous to the September estimate, and have on the September estimate been paid a further sum of $222,830, which makes $649,880 that the city has advanced the contractors before they completed a single foot of the tunnel.

It was pointed out yesterday at the office of the Public Service Commission that in August the contractors floated out and sank in position under the Harlem one of the sections of the tunnel.

SAY MAXWELL BEGAN FIGHT ON CHURCHILL

Statement from Board of Education Members Attributes Butler's Attack to His Inspiration.

SAW HIS POWER WANING

President's Supporters Contradict Charges Made Against Head of the Board.

Developments in the controversy over the reappointment of President Thomas W. Churchill as a member of the Board of Education, made it clear yesterday that the fight over his candidacy had but just begun. Neighborhood associations, settlement workers, civic betterment societies, and clubs of all sorts were asked yesterday to express their views on the subject to Mayor Kline.

Members of the Board of Education who met yesterday to discuss the case as friends of President Churchill, said that if they were members of the board when the term of Supt. William H. Maxwell expired, they would vote to terminate his service in the school department.

In a statement given out by supporters of President Churchill it was charged that the present controversy was due to the fact that Mr. Maxwell saw his support in the Board of Education dwindling away from him, and so decided to try at this time to break the powers opposed to him in the Board of Education as organized by President Churchill.

This statement was given out yesterday as representing the opinion of a majority of the members of the Board of Education upon the question whether President Churchill should be reappointed:

As individuals, members of the School Board do not feel at liberty to reply to inquiries at this time, except for the reason that this attack may militate toward the deception of the Mayor at a time when it is important that he should have sufficient support from the public to justify him in disregarding the attack and its support in newspaper editorials. The facts forming the background to incidents with which the public is familiar, are these:

The present incident has been precipitated by the desire of the City Superintendent to hold his place, and is one of the periodical recrudescences of his bitter feelings when his acts are criticised. The City Superintendent has found himself recently with the support of only a hopeless minority of the board. This being so, he conceives that the board is wrong. His friend, Dr. Butler, believes that the City Superintendent is always right. The death of Mayor Gaynor opened the possibility of getting rid of some of those whom the Superintendent regards as enemies, and a campaign of education was begun by publishing in Dr. Butler's magazine, The Educational Review, an article, the matter for which was in substance furnished by the City Superintendent, while the editor added his view that the former is a "distinguished ornament of a great profession" and the President of the Board of Education a person of ephemeral consequence.

The statements in that article purporting to relate to facts are essentially false, and the spirit and conclusions are equally false. The next step in the campaign was to send marked copies of the article to men and organizations usually in accord with The Review, and to obtain largely on the strength of the statements in the article their signatures to a vague assertion that the board had deteriorated, with other general charges, wholly false but based upon the article, coupled with the request that the President of the board be not reappointed by the Mayor. Copies of The Review were furnished also to the press, with condensed articles in editorial form, for free use.

The chief editors of the two papers leading the attack are clubmates and personal friends of the City Superintendent. They, too, believe in him. He is socially a pleasant companion. It is easily asserted that the President of the board is using the appropriations in the interest of Tammany Hall. While this has no earthly foundation in fact, it is useful for the end in view, as it enlists the sympathy of the general public. These newspapers are practically closed to the President of the board. Having committed themselves editorially in emphatic language, they merely ridicule his request that they make inquiry into the facts.

This is the whole game, and it has been played with a masterly hand—the real cause and author keeping in the background, while his friends, Dr. Baker and the editors, vouch for everything. The article in The Review should be analyzed and authoritatively answered as to every assertion made. The result will confirm the falsity of each assertion. There is not a scintilla of truth in the statement that there has been any effort to break down the merit system. The "free speech" incident is grossly misstated. What occurred was that the Secretary of a private educational society invited various Superintendents, Supervisors, and heads of departments to attend a proposed conference at 2 in the afternoon at the United Charities Building—the purpose being to discuss the educational budget. The society referred to readily agreed with the President of the board that the time and place for the conference were ill-chosen, and the invitation was recalled. The President had, however, requested the City Superintendent not to attend and to notify the others not to attend. Any reasonable man would have agreed in the views expressed, but the City Superintendent saw fit to write an answer at great length, declaring his intention to attend and enlarging upon the right of free speech, sending copies to various persons. The board passed resolutions reciting the facts and laying down the principles which should apply, which the City Superintendent regarded as a reprimand. In the same manner the falsity of every statement may be shown.

One of the most amusing articles to those who know the facts was a leading editorial containing half a column of discussion of the proposition that the City Superintendent and Mr. Churchill disagreed as to the status of married women in the schools, which proceeded to laud the former and abuse the latter, the abuse consisting largely of the matter printed in The Review. As a matter of fact, the City Superintendent and Mr. Churchill and the majority of the board are in complete accord upon the particular topic chosen as a reason for this powerful article.

When the facts in this controversy have been duly presented with chapter and verse of the records to support them, the air will be cleared, and the attempt to crucify Churchill will be plainly apparent. In the meantime, the student body, the teaching and supervising staff, the parents of the children in the schools, and, indeed, every one who is really familiar with the school system and its administration stand aghast at what seems to them an extraordinary and outrageous conspiracy, a wholesale attempt temporarily successful, to deceive a number of excellent citizens, and the most audacious deception and abuse of the press which has occurred in a generation.

President Churchill appeared to be much incensed at the charge that he has been an aid to Tammany Hall as President of the Board. While he refused to discuss for publication other phases of the controversy out of deference to what he said were the wishes of the other members of the Board of Education, he talked freely to reporters about this one item in the charges.

"The only personal letter I ever wrote on School Board matters," he said, "was the first one after I took office. My secretary brought it to me marked 'personal' for my signature. I told him to take it back and rewrite it, as no letter would ever leave my desk marked 'personal' or that did not go fully into the department records. Now, every letter received and every letter answered is on file. Any person having any legitimate interest in the matter is at liberty to search the files through and through. I would invite a full investigation from any persons the Mayor might wish to designate. There were bigger things to be done in the Board of Education—things so big that it would have been a terrible thing to let politics intrude. And politics never did intrude in the present regime."

Members of neighborhood associations who called on President Churchill to get his version of the affair quoted him as having said that what he was getting in the nature of criticism was "gratuitous insults for gratuitous service."

At the City Hall it was said yesterday that Mayor Kline had not received the communication from the Board of Education which was drafted on Thursday as a reply to the letter sent to Mayor Kline by President Nicholas Murray Butler of Columbia University and twelve others. It was understood at the City Hall that the letter had been held back in order that it might be signed by all the members of the Board of Education who cared to indorse its statements.

The final report of the Committee on School Inquiry, copies of which were given out yesterday, contains many paragraphs in praise of the administration of President Churchill. The report is signed by John Purroy Mitchel, William A. Prendergast, and Cyrus C. Miller as the Committee on School Inquiry of the Board of Estimate. It holds that conditions prior to the appointment of Mr. Churchill were unsatisfactory, and contrasts them with improvements inaugurated recently. One point on which emphasis is put is the prevailing harmony and co-operation between teachers and members of the Board of Education.

CIRCULATION PUBLICITY.

Papers to Show Copies Subscribers Get Not Full Average Circulation.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—In response to inquiries from newspaper publishers, the Third Assistant Postmaster General, A. M. Dockery, has sent out information explaining in more detail the operation of certain features of the newspaper publicity requirement of the act of 1912. Mr. Dockery explains in particular that the statements newspapers are required to file with the department and to publish in their own columns twice a year must contain not the full average circulation of the past six months, but merely the average of copies distributed to regular paying subscribers.

The language of the act appears to be unmistakable on this point, but a good deal of confusion was occasioned by the supposition that that part of the circulation which was not handled by the mails would not have to be accounted for in the statement of the Post Office Department. As a matter of fact no distinction is made between mail and other methods of distribution, but the distinction is clearly drawn between the papers sold to casual purchasers and news agencies and those distributed to regular personal subscribers.

Mr. Dockery explained in a recent letter to Don C. Seitz, Chairman of the Committee on Second-class Postage of the American Newspaper Publishers Association, that, if a newspaper owner so desires, his statement may also include items of circulation not required by law.

On this point the Attorney General's opinion says:

"The distinction between circulation among paid subscribers and the casual or uncertain distribution to other purchasers has been recognized by the Post Office Department in its regulations (Ed. 1907, Sec. 469) where, after pointing out that the news agent's right to mail second-class publications at the pound rate of postage, under the provisions of the act of March 3, 1885, Chapter 342, extends only to actual subscribers thereto, and to other news agents for sale, the regulations state that:

"'Actual subscribers to second-class publications are persons who personally order the same for a period of at least three consecutive issues.

"'Subscribers, therefore, are clearly those who have by agreement undertaken to receive and pay for the publication for some specified period of time, as distinguished from casual purchasers who come under no obligation to take and pay for the publication in advance of its delivery. It is immaterial whether this subscription is for one or many copies. Subscriptions may be direct, or through an agent; but the delivery to agents for sale or distribution, unaccompanied by agreement to pay for any definite number, would not be included within the term 'subscribers.'"

In another letter to Mr. Seitz Mr. Dockery explains the intent of the act in the provision providing that all reading matter published in a newspaper or other periodical for which any valuable consideration has been paid, accepted, or promised shall be marked "advertisement."

The act applies to editorials, textual business a write-ups, descriptive news stories, &c., which have for their purpose the calling of public attention to the merits of something in which the undisclosed advertisers are interested.

A Letter from an Expert

Just a minute to speed my congratulations on the December Harper's. It reaches the high water mark in magazine editing and making.

What splendid companions you have brought to the winter fire: Henry van Dyke, Arnold Bennett, Thomas Hardy, W. D. Howells, Mary Wilkins Freeman, Georgia Wood Pangborn, Richard Le Gallienne, May Sinclair, Anna Alice Chapin, Edith Thomas, Elizabeth Jordan!

Best of all is the invitation to go back to Old Chester with Mrs. Deland. I'm planning a rare treat. In the back of my woodshed is a well-seasoned hickory log. In my apple bin are the "makings" of a platter of big red apples. The three of us are to get together with the December Harper's to render a new quartette entitled, Why Men Stay At Home!

Hastily,

Arnold Bennett's New Novel

Money in the house is an excellent thing—but sometimes dangerous. The sum of £965 in Bank of England notes was paid over on a certain evening to Mrs. Maldon, a widow, of the quiet town of Bursley. It worried her to have so much money in her keeping overnight. She was not alone in the house—but she was apprehensive! And what happened? To tell that would be to spoil the first instalment of this remarkable new serial in the Christmas number of

HARPER'S MAGAZINE.

However worldly and cynical we may have become, however much the real meaning of Christmas may have been forgotten, there is always in everyone some feeling of the true religious significance of the season. And because of this, everyone will rejoice in the opening feature of the Christmas HARPER'S.

Henry van Dyke's beautiful story of
The Boyhood of Christ

It is a story told with deep reverence and feeling, a story that will live and become a classic. And it is illustrated with exquisite paintings in full color by N. C Wyeth.

Another story which will bring rare delight, both because of itself and what it promises, is the

First of a New Series of Old Chester Tales
by Margaret Deland

But these features give scarcely more than an inkling of the rich contents of the Christmas HARPER'S. All the old friends whom Professor Wilson mentions in his letter are expecting you, all are ready for you. And all these and many more are represented at their best.

There are seven wonderful short stories in the number, and twenty-eight pages in color and tint.

It is the most interesting and the most beautiful magazine of the year.

M'CREERY & CO. CLOSE THE 23D ST. STORE

Business of the Corporation Will Be Concentrated in 34th St.

START TO MOVE STOCK

All of the Employes to Go Uptown —Action Due to Changed Conditions.

Announcement was made yesterday afternoon that James McCreery & Co. would close permanently their branch store at Twenty-third Street and Sixth Avenue last evening. It had been rumored for some time that the Twenty-third Street store would be discontinued and the McCreery business confined to the store in Thirty-fourth Street, but no confirmation or denial of the report could be obtained.

C. A. Gould, Vice-President of the McCreery corporation, said yesterday that it had been decided to concentrate the business in one place, and that the entire stock of the Twenty-third Street branch would be transferred immediately to the Thirty-fourth Street store.

The removal of the goods from the old establishment began immediately after it closed last night, and it was said that by the first of next week the entire stock would be in the uptown store. None of the employes will be dismissed. All will be employed at the uptown store in the future.

"With this step in view during the last year," said Mr. Gould yesterday, "the Thirty-fourth Street branch has been equipped to handle the greatly increased business. We have opened a Fifth Avenue entrance to the store, and also increased the elevator facilities by the addition of a number of cars.

"We had about 500 employes in our downtown store," continued Mr. Gould, "and not one of them will be discharged. We are moving the employes uptown with us, from the smallest cash girl to the highest-paid salesman, and we intend to keep them there. Incidentally much trouble will be averted during the coming holiday season, when we have been obliged in former years to take on many raw recruits to handle the rush of business.

"We shall be able this year to go through the season more smoothly than ever before. When the downtown employes are transferred to the Thirty-fourth Street establishment we shall have in all about 5,000 employes in the one store."

The growth of James McCreery & Co. for the last fifty-six years has been steady. The first store was established in 1857 at 471 Broadway. The firm moved to larger quarters at Broadway and Eleventh Street in 1863, and in 1895 the Twenty-third Street store was opened in what was then the centre of the retail shopping district in New York City. The Thirty-fourth Street store, to which the merchandise of the older store is now being moved, was opened in 1906. The firm in November, 1900, passed into the control of the Claffin interests. The new owners formed a corporation, with Louis Stewart as President, the stock being held by the Associated Merchants' Company, although the company has a direct corporation of its own.

Several of the salesmen employed up to yesterday in the Twenty-third Street store, went there from the store at Broadway and Eleventh Street, when it was first opened. Few of the employees were in a hurry to leave when 6 o'clock came last evening and it was time to leave. These employees preferred to talk together about the old days when the store was in the centre of the shopping whirl that has been transferred further uptown.

"TOUGHEST" BOY WANTED.

Good Thing in Store for Him if He Can Qualify.

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 21.—Juvenile and truant officers here were to-day asked by John Robbins, President of the National Fellowship Club of Chicago, for assistance in finding the "toughest" boy in the city. After he is discovered membership in the Last Chance Boys' Club will be offered to him, and, with eleven others, he will be taken to a ranch near Reno, Nev., where he will have an opportunity to become a good man.

Recently Upton Sinclair, Robert Hunter, Jack London, and John Robbins formed an organization having for its object the saving of a dozen of the worst boys in the country, and Mr. Robbins was chosen to select them. Already bad boys have been found at Racine, Wis.; Mishawaka, Ind.; East St. Louis, Ill.; Lima, Ohio, and St. Louis. No boys over 12 years old are considered.

MANITOBA FLIER PLUNGES INTO LAKE

Imperial Limited on Canadian Pacific Is Wrecked and Fireman Is Drowned.

ENGINE DIVES INTO WATER

Lives of Passengers Saved When Heavy Cars Cling to Rails on Steep Ledge.

WINNIPEG, Man., Nov. 21.—Fireman P. O'Connor was drowned and the passengers and others of the train crew narrowly escaped death early this morning when the first section of the Canadian Pacific Railroad's Imperial Limited, west bound from Montreal to Vancouver, was derailed near Coldwell, Ont., and the engine plunged into Lake Superior.

A rock, loosened by a storm that whipped across the lake, caused the wreck. Baggage cars, club, and dining cars and the heavily loaded Pullmans remained on the top of the grade. Otherwise the loss of life would have been heavy, for the wreck occurred at a spot where the track skirted a ledge 30 feet above the lake. The engineer saved his like by jumping as the locomotive careened over the ledge. None of the passengers was injured.

The wires were so damaged by the storm that many hours elapsed before full details of the wreck reached this place. Poles and wires were down for many miles east of White River, Ont.

MONTREAL, Nov. 21.—Canadian Pacific train No. 1, also known as "The Imperial Limited," is an all-passenger train which leaves Montreal at 10 o'clock nightly for Vancouver, B. C. The train carries an average of about ten cars each trip, mostly first and second-class, with one or two Pullman sleepers.

The wreck occurred at 2 o'clock near Coldwell, a small station about 175 miles east of Fort William. Officials at the railway offices learned during the day that no one was killed except the fireman, and that none of the passengers was injured.

SAYS CAR LINE IS UNSAFE.

Long Island Electric Must Be Rebuilt, Engineer Tells Commission.

Serious allegations against the safety of the rails and track of the Long Island Electric Railroad, which runs from Jamaica to Far Rockaway, especially along the Rockaway Turnpike, were made yesterday at a public hearing before the Public Service Commission. Clifton W. Wilder, an electrical engineer of the commission, asserted that there was real danger of the cars running off into the water and Commissioner Cram, who was presiding, expressed doubt of the possibility of permitting the company to continue operation with its present equipment.

The Long Island Electric Railroad is a street car line, partly owned by the Interborough and partly through a subsidiary by the Long Island Railroad Company. An inquiry was in progress as to the condition of its rails and roadbed, and Mr. Wilder produced, as he gave evidence, two sections of a steel rail from the Far Rockaway division of the line, which had snapped in two and derailed a car on Oct. 13.

Strenuous opposition was made on behalf of the line against the production of the steel exhibits in evidence, but they were admitted, and Mr. Wilder said:

"The rails on this section of the line are rotten. Their condition has been brought about by salt water corrosion. The exhibits are typical of dozens of other rails on this branch. At any time they may snap, and a car might be thrown into the bay. It will be impossible to repair the system. It must be rebuilt entirely."

The division along Rockaway Turnpike was in worse condition than any other part, said Mr. Wilder, and the entire line needs thorough overhauling.

"It is a serious question in my mind," said the Commissioner, "whether the railroad should be permitted to continue to operate this branch at all. To my mind it would be unsafe. The testimony shows a shocking state of affairs. The company must make the road good at once."

On the request of the company the hearing was adjourned until next Friday.

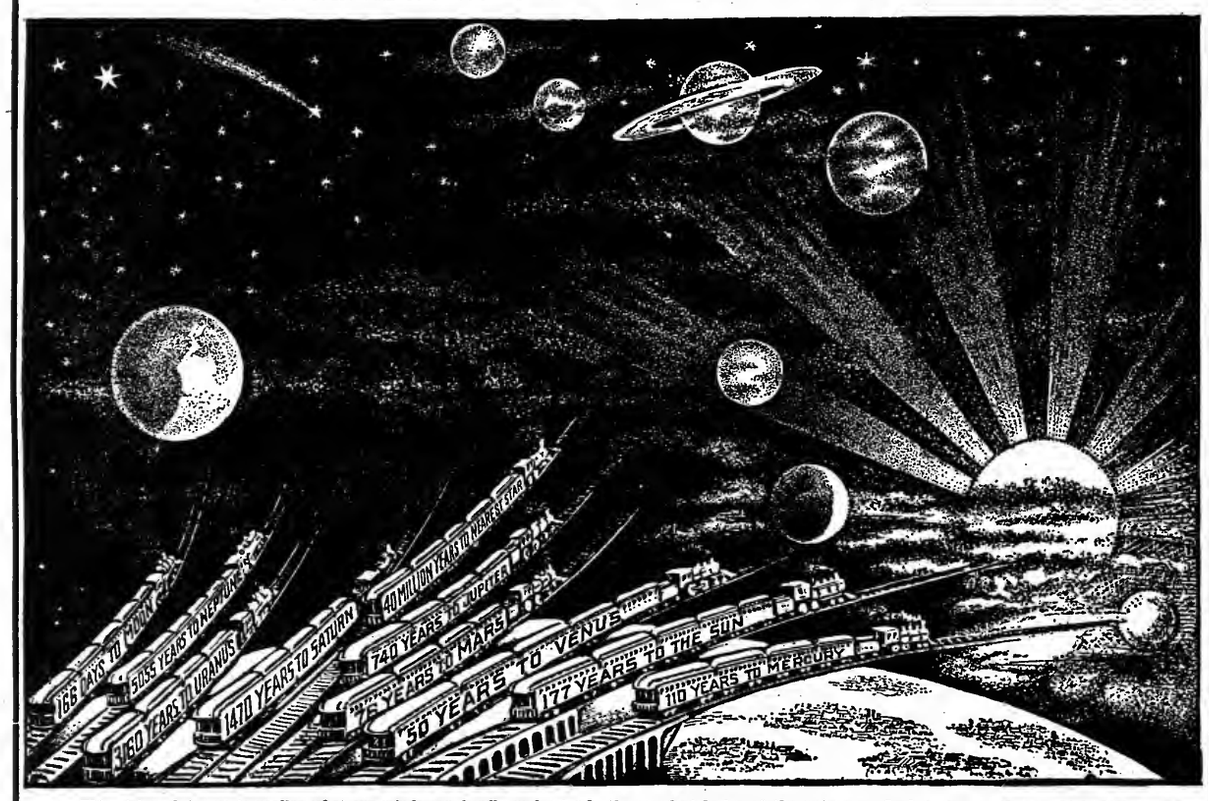
Thief Foiled by a Mirror.

HOLLIDAYSBURG, Penn., Nov. 21.—While District Attorney Marion D. Patterson of Blair County was being shaved in a barber shop here last night he saw by the reflection in the mirror a sneak thief rifling the cash register. Patterson pounced upon the man and overpowered him.

One of Ten Thousand Educational Pictures

WHICH THE BOOK OF KNOWLEDGE DESCRIBES

THE SPACE NO MAN CAN MEASURE! FLYING FORTY MILLION YEARS TO THE NEAREST STAR



This picture helps us to realize what our minds can hardly understand—the wonderful size of the universe. Such trains as these, which dash past us almost before we can see them, would take 177 years to travel from the earth to the sun, if there were a railway on which they could travel a mile a minute and never stop; and a train starting from the earth for the nearest star would not arrive for forty million years! The figures on these trains give the time it would take the trains, traveling all the time sixty miles an hour, to reach the planets.

One of the foremost educators in this country says:

"Suppose a boy of ten were to spend fifteen minutes a day reading these volumes . . . he would at thirteen know more about the earth and life on it than the wisest men knew a few generations ago."

F. C. Lewis,
Supt. Ethical Culture School, New York.

"An adult can read the book with almost as much relish as a child. . . . I cannot say more than this, that I subscribe heartily to President Finley's estimate in the introduction."

Godfrey M. Brinley, Master
St. Paul's School, Concord, N. H.

"I have observed THE BOOK OF KNOWLEDGE in use among the boys at school, and I have read it with deep interest and profit myself, and I am much impressed by its fascination for every one who owns it or who uses it."

Charles A. A. J. Miller,
Assistant Supt. Baltimore Public Schools.

The Book of Knowledge is a work intensely interesting and of incalculable worth to any child in any home. It is alike profitable in the boy's shop, the girl's room, the young man's den, and the family library. It is a fountain of information on all subjects about which the young and old may and do ask questions."

Miss Grace C. Strachan,
District Superintendent, Brooklyn.

"Tho' we have always had a number of books in the house, I have never seen the children take so marked and intelligent an interest in any other books. I have not the slightest doubt that they are of immeasurable value to children of all ages and of both sexes."

Hackley School,
Tarrytown, N. Y.

"We consider 'The Book of Knowledge' a distinct acquisition to our Library. It is the most popular set of books that we have and one which commends itself, without any effort on our part, to the constant attention of the boys. We are considering ordering another. Sincerely yours,

Walter B. Gage.

The New York Times says:

"The old saying has it that a bright child is a big interrogation mark; but everybody knows that the child gets comparatively few good and sufficient answers to the questions he asks. Think what it will mean to the children to put into their hands THE BOOK OF KNOWLEDGE, a work that will tell them what they wish to know."

The New Century's Greatest Gift

THE BOOK OF KNOWLEDGE is a wonderful new plan by which the world of knowledge is opened up to the mind of the child, and made almost equally fascinating to adult readers. It contains all the important knowledge of the world from the tiny atom to the starry universe—arranged and indexed so skillfully that the scientific facts and truths of Nature, History, Astronomy, Biography, Physics, Art, Literature and Our Own Life can be found quickly and with perfect ease. It is the only work of reference so arranged as to form delightful reading courses in the Great Departments of Knowledge.

All children are fascinated by pictures, in love with stories, filled with wonder over the marvels of the earth and sky and sea. You cannot make them happier than by giving them THE BOOK OF KNOWLEDGE for Christmas. It contains the greatest amount of pure delight, coupled with the real information so necessary to the inquiring mind of the growing child. It is the first book of reference ever made for children, where they can find everything they want to know quickly and easily. Each year without THE BOOK OF KNOWLEDGE is a distinct loss to the child's development, and one which can never quite be made up. CHORISTERS WILL FORM LABOR UNION

New Organization to be Under the Protection of the American Federation.

GIRLS TO MAKE DEMANDS

One is for Half Salary During Rehearsals—Stage Hands and Musicians to Give Support.

Following the lead of the actors in the Actors' Equity League, the chorus girls and men of the city will organize tomorrow afternoon. The new organization of the chorus people is to be put on a far stronger basis than the actors' association, however, for they will come under the protection of the American Federation of Labor and be formed into a union by that body.

The choristers will receive a charter from the A. F. L., and will have the support of the stage hands and musicians, two of the strongest unions in the country.

The plans, which have been quietly maturing for some time, are now completed. The organization will take in not only the men and women employed by the theatrical managers, but prominent in the organization will be the chorus members of the Metropolitan Opera House and the Century Opera Company.

The first thing to be insisted upon by the new union will be that all chorus people shall be paid half salaries during rehearsals of a play or opera. In this and all other demands the chorus will be backed up by the musicians and stage hands, which will give the union a strong hold upon the managers.

Several times the organizing of a union of the chorus people has been attempted, but until now the American Federation of Labor has not supported the measure. The present movement, however, is under the direction of P. F. Duffy, General Organiser of the Federation, and to-morrow's meeting will be held at the headquarters of the Women's Trade Union League, 43 East Twenty-second Street. The meeting will be called at 5 o'clock.

Officers of the Federation have been working among the chorus girls for some time stirring up interest in the movement and assuring them that many prominent women would lend their support to the movement. At first it was intended to take in only the chorus girls, but several days ago it was decided to include the chorus men.

It is said that the matter was first called to the attention of Samuel Gompers several weeks ago by a chorus girl in a Broadway production, who complained that the chorus had been compelled to rehearse for fourteen weeks without a cent of pay for that length of time. Long hours at rehearsals is one of the chief complaints of the opera chorus men and women.

Another complaint will be that a large number of girls were employed for a big ballet and after rehearsing half a dozen weeks got only two weeks' work.

Grievances of this sort will be investigated, and the Federation of Labor will put its legal force at work to collect what it considers due the chorus.

DRAMA SOCIETY TO BE 1,000.

Will Buy 20,000 Seats a Season for Ten Good Plays.

At a meeting of the Drama Society yesterday afternoon at the Hudson Theatre it was announced that the organization, which now purchases a thousand orchestra seats for each of ten plays bulletined as "good plays" by the society in New York, would increase its membership from 500 to 1,000, and in this manner buy 20,000 tickets during a season for the ten selected plays instead of 10,000. Each member of the society buys two tickets to each show.

In addition the Drama Society will increase its associate membership, which has until now been open only to school teachers. The general public will be permitted to become associate members, and as such buy balcony and gallery seats for the ten bulletined plays at reduced prices.

Under the new plan the Drama Society will supply a good play with a large audience. It believes, and the theatrical managers believe likewise, that the best advertisement a show can get is the praise of satisfied theatregoers who talk about the play to their friends, so that the enlarging of the society is expected to reap great rewards for the box offices of the good shows.

Prominent at yesterday's meeting were Mrs. August Belmont, Mrs. Philip Lydig, Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt, Mrs. Egerton L. Winthrop, John Corbin, and other well-known men and women.

John Corbin, Secretary of the Drama Society, outlined the plans for increasing the membership of the organization. By purchasing the cheaper seats as well as the orchestra seats, he said, the society would furnish an intelligent audience for every part of the theatre.

"The society will grow to such importance," said Mr. Corbin, "that eventually it will be able to demand the production of any play which it may want and to assure the manager who produces it a fair hearing before a paying crowd."

W. G. Fay, a leader in the movement for a better theatre in Ireland and a member of the "General John Regan" company, now playing here, told of the organization of stage societies in England and Ireland, and Canon James Owen Hannay of St. Patrick's Cathedral, Dublin, author of "General John Regan" and a number of novels, addressed the society on the position in which he found himself as a clergyman and playwright at the same time.

"I hope," said Canon Hannay, "that a considerable number of the clergy get into closer personal touch with actors; that they get on the one hand to realize the fact that actors and actresses are not necessarily disreputable, or necessarily or often immoral; that there is a bohemianism about their life, and that this is a bohemianism entirely virtuous and right, and that on the other hand the actors and actresses get into closer personal touch with the clergy and come to regard us less as a kind of horrid or etherialized Mrs. Grundy, and that at all events we have at least potentialities of friendship in us."

WHY PUNISH THIS RUNAWAY?

Father Feels Lad Found Through N. Y. Times "Made Good."

The father of the runaway boy, Harry Butts, who was found the other day through a story published in THE TIMES, in explaining why he did not punish the youngster as some parents would have done, said for one thing that the mother was so overjoyed at her son's return that she would not agree to such a thing, and for another that the lad had done so well for himself that he feared punishment might send him from home again.

When the boy quit the public school in which he was a pupil, he walked to the Weehawken Ferry. He had just 8 cents in his pocket. After paying for a ride across to New Jersey and buying an apple, he arrived in that strange land with 3 cents.

While pondering over his situation, he became hungry, and so he invested in another apple. This gone, and a further survey of the countryside resulting in hunger, he spent the rest of his cash in rolls.

Starting out from Weehawken on the road to fame and fortune, he was overtaken by an automobile. He asked for a ride. The driver assented and took him several miles and then put him down. A second car came along whose driver was amenable to persuasion, and by this means the youngster got as far as Paterson.

It was now growing dark, but he left Paterson behind, and when a man came along in a wagon the boy asked him for a ride and was taken in. On the drive he told part of his story, and the owner of the wagon took him to his own home in Montclair. There were three children in the family, and the runaway boy said his prayers with them and went to bed with them. The next morning he tramped all the way to Newark, found a job, went to work, and, having no other place to sleep, tramped back to Montclair that night, not having eaten anything since breakfast. This plan he pursued the whole of the first week. With his first week's salary, $3.50, he paid $2 for his board, invested $1 in fresh underwear and collars, and then, having 50 cents left, inquired the way to a savings bank.

"What good would punishment do a boy who can look out for himself like that?" inquired the proud father.

AUTOIST HELD FOR DEATH.

Coroner Makes Charge of Homicide When Girl is Killed.

Catherine Quinn, 6 years old, of 4004 Third Avenue, the Bronx, was crossing the street in front of her home at 8:30 o'clock last night and ran in front of an automobile owned and driven by Marino Condito of 2156 Bathgate Avenue. Condito had two men and a woman in the car, and they made their escape when a great crowd collected about the machine. The little girl was taken into a drug store. She died shortly after an ambulance arrived from the Fordham Hospital.

Condito was arraigned before Coroner Jerome Healy and held on the charge of homicide, without bail. He was locked up in the Tremont Police Station. The Coroner said that he felt justified in taking such action in view of the many automobile accidents which had occurred recently.

The chauffeur said he was going slow and had blown his horn. He was taking his passengers, he said, to a dance at 170th Street and Third Avenue. He told the Coroner that they were Charles Kearn, Joseph Murphy, and Miss Margaret Haran, all of 621 East 181st Street.

Kipling

has written a new short story in his old vein—the first in years. A story of action, intense, dramatic, smashing. Can you imagine the twist of circumstances which would find President Wilson, Supreme Court Judge Hughes, William Randolph Hearst, and John D. Rockefeller alone on a secret mission of state and involved in the accidental murder of two Japanese spies? Here is a trying situation fraught with the awful possibilities of war. What would be the English equivalent is the plot of Kipling's new story, "The Edge of the Evening." How Kipling's heroes save the day and keep peace between two great Nations is a sensational climax to the most notable short story published in an American magazine in a month of moons. Published complete. Read it to-night. (All news-stands.)

HUNDRED BEST BOOKS OF THE YEAR

The Committee from the Department of English, Columbia University, comprising Prof. John Erskine, Dr. H. R. Steeves, and Dr. Carl Van Doren, has completed its list of The Hundred Best Books of the year. It contains a remarkable view of the important achievements in literature since the 1st of January, and will be published Sunday, Nov. 30, as the leading feature in the Holiday Number of The New York Times Book Review, which will appear as a supplement to the regular edition of The Times. The list will have an introductory article by Prof. Erskine, which will be followed by comprehensive reviews of each of the books chosen.

Another important feature will be a discussion of four Vital Questions of the Day—Eugenics, Socialism, Feminism, and Psychism. Leading authorities on each of these subjects have been asked to review books selected by themselves from the year's publications on these special themes. Thus, Dr. C. B. Davenport, Director of the Station for Experimental Evolution of the Carnegie Institute, will review a book on Eugenics. Ellen Glasgow, the famous novelist, will review a book on Feminism. Algernon Lee, President of the Rand School of Social Science, will review a book on Socialism. Henry M. Alden, Editor of Harper's Magazine, will review a book discussing the possibility of life after death.

There will be additional contributions from well-known authors of the day, such as Anne Warwick, Kate Langley Bosher, Coningsby Dawson, Jules Guerin and many others who will write on various entertaining and instructive features of the literature of the day.

Of particular importance to the buyers of Christmas books will be the carefully annotated list of the season's gift books. This list has been prepared for the special purpose of answering the question, "What is the most suitable book for a Christmas gift?" and will furnish an admirable guide to the holiday buyer.

This Special Holiday Number of The New York Times Book Review will have an actual net paid sale of over 200,000 copies. It will contain 64 pages and will be illustrated throughout.

HYSLOP TELLS OF SPIRITUAL HEALING

Thinks Cures of Physical Ailments Through Discarnate Influence May Be Possible.

HIS CHILD'S LIFE SAVED

Physicians Gave Up Hope, Investigator Writes—Successful Treatment by Laying On of Hands.

Dr. James H. Hyslop, head of the American Society for Psychical Research, contributes to the current issue of the Journal of the Society a long article on spiritual healing. In discussing the subject, he assumes that the existence of spirits has been proved. He elaborates his theory of the manner in which discarnate spirits may act to effect cures of physical ailments, and gives a number of instances indicating possible "treatment" by spirits, as he believes, the patients including two of his children, as well as himself.

The investigator declares that inasmuch as there is a possibility that discarnate influence may favorably affect the ailing human body, the aid of this influence should be sought as a therapeutic adjunct.

"All these cases show the possibility of discarnate influence on the human organism," Dr. Hyslop writes. "In some forms they show the power to affect the sensory organism so as to produce apparitions, voices, sensations of touch, taste, and smell, and then on the muscles in the form of automatic writing and automatic speech. Diseases are diagnosed and prescriptions given. Why, then, may they not be able to produce other effects just as directly? Why might they not produce the same effects as consciousness among the living is assumed or proved to do in 'suggestion' and various other ways?"

Action on the Human Organism.

Here is Dr. Hyslop's comparison of the manner in which the state of mind in the living often affects the physiological functions, with his idea of the possible manner in which discarnate spirits may act on the human organism:

"Now, we know the state of mind in the living will often affect the various physiological functions seriously for good or ill. Great excitement will affect the nature of the acids or alkalis in the stomach. It likewise affects the action of the heart. Grief will influence the action of the stomach against healthy digestion. Then there are the unconscious reactions of the mind or soul upon various harmful conditions of the body. It quickly creates an antitoxin against some poison admitted to the system, if it have the normal and healthy conditions favorable to this.

"The system is so elastic in this respect that it will create the necessary digestive agents for different kinds of foods, now furnishing alkalis, and now furnishing acids for the process. These are systems of reflexes to meet almost any condition that might prove harmful but for this ability of adjustment. The action is not volitional or purposive in any sense that the conscious mind does this. Even in emotion, fear, hope, grief, anger, or other excitement it is not the consciousness as a purposive agent that does the work, but the influence is that of a reflex or unconscious action manifested on the occasion of that mental state rather than directly by it. This is the way 'suggestion' acts.

"Now, suppose that a living soul has become unable to produce the antitoxins by its own initiative. Suppose that disease has destroyed the power of adjustment so as to create the necessary acids or alkalis or other agent necessary to counteract poisons. Now, if a discarnate soul should be able to get into the body or near enough to it to supply that activity it might restore the individual to his normal condition.

"It is only a question of exercising the chemical functions which the living soul does in its normal state. It is always representated by communicators that they occupy the living organism of the entranced medium, and we have seen that they may restore organic functions to the proper equilibrium and normal activity. Why may not that be done on a large scale?"

Cites His Daughter's Case.

Dr. Hyslop gives as an illustration "of what is possible," the case of his daughter stricken with typhoid.

"My daughter," he writes, "was taken with typhoid fever, and long before the crisis came the three physicians gave her up and stated that medicine could do nothing. She was comatose twenty-four hours after the attack betrayed the first noticeable symptoms. There was nothing to be done but to await the end.

"One physician, who agreed with me as to the worth of an experiment in the situation, stood by me in it. Medicines were abandoned, and I resorted to holding the child's hands for hours at a time, day and night, and this was supplemented by the doctor's doing the same, holding his hand on her body, parts more particularly affected by the lesions of the disease.

"She was in a comatose condition for three weeks. It was at times a semi-delirious state, as she would answer occasionally to a question or a statement as a somnambulic person might do, but was completely amnesic regarding everything that occurred during the three weeks.

"Now, twice in this period she became clairvoyant. Once the younger daughter was not in the house, but over at the house of the physician. The patient knew nothing of this, and not even I knew the fact. In her delirious condition the patient exclaimed 'there comes Beatrice!' and in less than a minute Beatrice rang the doorbell. On another occasion, the patient exclaimed that she saw the doctor coming, naming him. Hardly had she uttered his name when the doorbell rang and he was admitted. He had no regular time for calling, but dropped in as opportunity offered.

"I am quite aware that the incidents do not furnish proof of the hypothesis. They are not numerous or complex enough to do this. All that I am contending for is that they coincide with better evidence of the intervention of the discarnate, and definitely articulate with facts in other cases where there can be no doubt of the psychic significance of them. It is an illustration, not a proof of the claim, and can be regarded as evidence only as a part of a collective whole which does prove it.

"It is especially calculated to illustrate the main point discussed, and that is, the process of supplying antitoxins. In this conception of the phenomena we are suggesting something quite in harmony with all that medical men assume in the organic functions of the organism as affected by mental activity or other functions not regarded as purely mechanical.

"Natural cures assume nothing more and disregard drugs quite as much as this assumption of discarnate intervention."

Doubting Doctor Convinced.

It seems that Dr. B., the physician who stood by Dr. Hyslop during his daughter's illness, had been a materialist and ridiculed psychic phenomena and spiritistic influence. But a dispassionate study of the facts, according to Dr. Hyslop, led him to believe the theory of spirits to be true.

"Soon he began himself to show psychic powers," the narrative continues, "in connection with his medical work. The first traces of it were the peculiarly quick cures that occurred in some cases without the use of medicines and merely from his presence in the room, actually before he had time to decide on the remedy. For instance, people came to him with severe headaches or pains, and while questioning them for diagnosis their headaches or pains suddenly disappeared and did not return.

"This led him to try, after the suggestion of the 'mental healer,' the contact of his hands. This was an improvement, and patients soon remarked peculiar sensations from this contact, and by observing the effect of it in numerous cases he came to trust it. In his experiments he found that patients did not remark the sensation unless he himself willed the treatment, so to speak."

Dr. Hyslop then tells in detail his personal experience with Dr. B. The investigator had suffered for thirty years from chronic bronchitis and chronic inflammation of the right eustachian tube, the tube between the throat and ear, with impairment of hearing in the right ear. He kept a diary during the time he was under Dr. B.'s care. The sole method of treatment consisted of the laying on of hands. This caused, strangely enough, severe pain along the course of the tube. Here are the results, as recorded by Dr. Hyslop:

"The improvement has been marked. The bronchial trouble waned considerably. The throat irritation and coughing, due to bronchial trouble, diminished and there is apparently much less difficulty with the bronchial region. The eustachian tube has greatly reduced its condition and some improvement in the hearing was noticed once.

"It [the experiment] showed that methods of a supernormal sort, no matter what you regard them, did take effect under circumstances which physicians would not suspect capable of producing such things."

Burned by Exploding Alcohol.

Special to The New York Times.

STAMFORD, Conn., Nov. 21.—Albert Brash, employed by the Rev. Dr. G. N. Pentecost of Tokeneke, is in the Stamford Hospital badly burned. Brash entered the kitchen of the Pentecost home this morning and struck a match. A can of alcohol had been left standing on the kitchen table. The fumes caught fire, and an explosion followed, scattering the burning fluid over Brush.

TO EXTEND STUDENT CAMPS

Gen. Wood Tells Plans for Instructing Youths in Army Life.

Major Gen. Leonard Wood, Chief of Staff of the United States Army, has issued a bulletin giving the programme for the organization next Summer of student camps like those held last Summer at Gettysburg, Penn., and at Monterey, Cal., under the supervision of officers appointed by the War Department. In formulating plans for this undertaking Gen. Wood will have the assistance of this Advisory Committee of university and college Presidents: President John G. Hibben, Princeton University, Chairman; President Abbott Lawrence Lowell, Harvard University; President Arthur T. Hadley, Yale University; President George H. Denny, University of Alabama; President Henry B. Hutchins, University of Michigan; Brig. Gen. Edward W. Nichols, Superintendent Virginia Military Institute; John H. Finley, President of the College of the City of New York; President Benjamin Ide Wheeler, University of California; President Henry Sturgis Drinker, Lehigh University, Secretary.

The War Department is considering sites for the camps next Summer with an eye to the healthfulness of the surroundings and facilities for social intercourse, bathing, swimming, and other recreations. One site has been determined on at Burlington, Vt. In his bulletin Gen. Wood calls attention to the value of these student camps in increasing the business efficiency of the students who participate through habits of discipline, obedience, self-control, order, command, and the study of organization and administration as applied to first-class modern armies.

The camps, he says, are an invaluable national asset in providing means of increasing the present inadequate personnel of the trained military reserves of the country from a class of educated men from which, in case of national emergency, a large part of the volunteer officers must be drawn.

Only university or college students and students in the graduating class at high schools or preparatory schools, or recent university graduates, or men who have received a satisfactory certificate of attendance at a previous student camp from the War Department are eligible for enrollment at the camps. They must be citizens of the United States or must have announced their intention to become citizens.

The camps will continue five weeks from early in July to the middle of August at a cost of $17.50 a man for board and from $5 to $10 for uniform and clothing. The Government will furnish tents, cots, blankets, infantry equipment, and hospital and medical care. Troops of the regular army will be in attendance to co-operate in instructing the students and selected officers will lecture on tactics, with field demonstrations. The students will pay their own transportation to and from camp.

SLEUTHS REFUSED A BRIBE.

Court Compliments Detectives Who Refused Thieves' Offer.

Four city detectives were complimented yesterday by Judge Mulqueen in General Sessions when it was shown by the testimony that they had refused a bribe of $500 to release five men whom they had arrested for bribery. The detectives were Lemon, Fein, Fischel, and Steinkamp. According to Harry Goldstein, one of the men arrested, who turned informer, he, Samuel Gineberg, Max Goldberg, Isidor Kleinberg, and David Potter, broke into a clothing store at 11 East Fourteenth Street on Election Day and stole $1,500 worth of goods.

Goldstein corroborated the detectives' story that Potter and the others when captured had offered to sell the goods for $500 and turn over the whole sum to the officials.

A Bountiful Thanksgiving

Thanksgiving day was first observed by the Israelites after they made their escape from Egypt and reached the promised land which "Flowed with milk and honey." In this country the day was made an established custom by the pioneers of American liberty. One of those pioneers was Roger Williams, founder of Rhode Island, who also built a church and a brewery in Providence in the seventeenth century. This month 90,000,000 Americans will celebrate the day by feasting, drinking and giving thanks for the fruits of a land which has become the greatest and richest of all nations upon the earth. That is something to be thankful for, indeed. Nearly ten million of these good Americans live within a short radius of the Jacob Ruppert Brewery, where stands the finest Brewhouse in the world. There will be found the beer that satisfies most of these people the year round, and from there will flow the beer that will satisfy these same people on Thanksgiving, November 27th, 1913, the day designated by the President of the United States. For sale by all dealers.

In the present volume Mr. Winans reproduces illustrations of many familiar masterpieces of animal sculpture, showing that many of them, although superficially effective, are marred by serious faults of conception and execution.

WILSON CALLS OFF NEW YEAR RECEPTION

President Abandons Annual White House Ceremony to Go On a Vacation.

HE MAY NOT REVIVE IT

Other Presidents Have Suffered Great Discomfort from the Day's Handshaking.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—It was announced from the White House to-day that the customary New Year reception would be abandoned this year and that President Wilson would take a vacation during the holidays.

Only twice in the hundred years of White House history has this annual custom been abandoned in time of peace. The last time was during the Administration of President McKinley, when, owing to the death of his mother in December, there was no reception on Jan. 1. Before that, in President Cleveland's Administration the reception was called off on New Year's morning because of the death of the daughter of the Secretary of State, Thomas F. Bayard.

The New Year reception is participated in by the entire Diplomatic Corps, Supreme Court, both houses of Congress, all the high officials of the National Government, and all army, navy, and marine officers in or near Washington. It also is the occasion on which thousands of American citizens from the private walks of life stand in line for hours for the chance of entering the White House and shaking hands with the President.

There are many indications that the reception will not be revived during the present Administration. For many years officials at the White House have protested mildly against the traditional ceremony which they felt involved certain discomfort to the President and his family, besides considerable responsibility for the Secret Service men responsible for controlling the enormous crowds.

Many Presidents have suffered great pain as a result of having their hands wrung so often in one day. President Roosevelt is said to have shaken the hands of 8,000 people one New Year's Day, and even his powerful physique felt the strain. Other Presidents have had to have their arms wrapped in bandages and rubbed with ointment for several days following the public reception.

These are not the only reasons, however, that are thought to influence President Wilson in abandoning the reception. Just before he took office he let it be known that he was opposed to the inaugural ball. Then a reception was suggested, and he opposed that. It was said at the time that if the managers of the inauguration insisted on a ball he would attend, but the members of his family would not accompany him. It is believed that the decision regarding the New Year's reception is a logical sequel of his attitude toward the ball.

The Secretary of State and Mrs. Bryan will give the annual breakfast to the Diplomatic Corps regardless of the change of plan at the White House. This attention from the Secretary of State to the diplomats has come to be only a little less important than the White House reception.

According to the announcement made from the White House, President Wilson feels he need of a complete rest which he can take more conveniently at Christmas than at any other time. He is contemplating a short out-of-town trip, and does not wish to be obliged to return to Washington before the reassembling of Congress early in the new year. The authoritative announcement on the subject is as follows:

> The usual New Year reception of the President will not be held Jan. 1, 1914. The departure from custom on this occasion is due to the fact that the President will not be in Washington at that time. Owing to the long session of Congress, the President has had no vacation since his inauguration. As the approaching session of Congress will be the long session, the only opportunity for the President to secure a rest will be during the usual holiday recess of Congress.

It is possible that President and Mrs. Wilson may pass New Year's day in the Canal Zone, as the Secretary of War has urged the President to make Panama the objective point of his vacation trip. The President and Mrs. Wilson are, however, reported as not being anxious to make the Panama trip at this time, because they expect to attend the formal celebration in 1915.

CURRENCY DEBATE MONDAY.

Speeches Will Absorb Several Weeks Before Bill Can Be Amended.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—The Democratic Steering Committee of the Senate discussed to-day the programme for pressing forward consideration of the Currency bill. It was practically decided that a party caucus at this juncture would serve merely to delay matters. The party line has already been drawn clearly enough by the President and his supporters, and the leaders feel that the three bills embodying the various views on currency legislation can be left to the handling of the Senate without danger of imperiling the present legislative programme.

As a result of this decision the formal debate on the currency will open on Monday in the Senate with an introductory address by Senator Owen of Oklahoma, Chairman of the Committee on Banking and Currency. These set speeches are expected to take up several weeks before the detailed consideration of the bill for amendment can be begun. Next week the Senate will be in session Monday, Wednesday, and possibly Friday, though adjournment may be taken over Thanksgiving from Wednesday until Monday morning at 11 o'clock.

The suggestion of the Senate leaders that the Senate meet on Monday morning one hour before the opening of the regular session indicates the President's determination that the regular session shall merge with that which begins on Dec. 1. Then will come six days of delay while the Seamen's bill is considered under an old agreement by unanimous consent. After that a bill for the construction of a railroad in Alaska has precedence in the Senate, but it is hoped that it can be got out of the way so as to give the Currency bill a clear road.

The announcement from the White House to-day that the President expects to take a holiday over New Year's Day encourages members of Congress to think that there will be no objection to the customary Christmas vacation. This will make it well into January before the heavy work in connection with the Currency bill can be taken up.

As an additional club to force both State and National banks into the proposed regional system, the Democratic half of the Banking and Currency Committee has adopted an amendment that no Government fund of any sort, including postal savings bank deposits, shall be deposited with any institution that has not taken out stock in a regional reserve bank.

RESTS IN PRIMARY TRIAL.

Prosecution Closes Case Against Senator Carroll and His Supporters.

The prosecution in the trial of State Senator Daniel J. Carroll, Democratic leader of the Fourteenth Assembly District, Brooklyn; Lawyer Luke O'Reilly, and three others, before Justice Kelby in the Supreme Court, in that borough, on charges of conspiracy and intimidation of election officials at the primaries in March, 1912, closed its case abruptly yesterday.

When the prosecution rested, Robert H. Elder, counsel for the defendants, moved for the dismissal of the indictments on the ground that the District Attorney had failed to prove a case. Justice Kelby denied this motion.

Mr. Elder in opening his address for the defense described Carroll as a "rough and ready" fellow because he was brought up in that kind of a district. He told the jury that the primary election was not a rough one when the character of the neighborhood was considered. He said that Carroll and O'Reilly would take the witness stand and give the jury a full account of what happened at the polling place.

The last witness for the prosecution yesterday was John J. McKusker of 148 North Sixth Street. He was a poll clerk at the North Sixth Street polling place. While he was testifying the poll book, with a large ink blot on the cover, was exhibited. The witness said that the men who pulled Michael Rosenthal, a McKeon inspector, from a table and threw him out of the polling place, upset the inkstand on his desk and spilled ink on his book. He told of the alleged attack of O'Reilly on Brady, Chairman of the election officials, after the ballots arrived late at the polling place. He said:

"When Brady refused to sign for the ballots Mr. O'Reilly grabbed him by the throat and threw him across the room up against one of the booths."

Policeman Martin Short of the Bedford Avenue Station was the first witness called for the defense. Short was on reserve duty on the night of the primaries. He admitted there was a dispute over signing the receipt for the ballots, but he said he saw no disorder in the polling place.

Rebate Checks for Strap Hangers.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—"Strap-hangers" in street cars in the District of Columbia are praising Senator Norris, who introduced a bill in the Senate to-day providing that any one entering a car and not being able to find a seat should receive a rebate check. Two of the checks, in the terms of the bill, would be legal tender for one fare.

M'COMBS SEES END OF ROOSEVELT PARTY

Thinks Next Fight Will Be On Old Party Lines, with the Progressives Out.

WON'T LEAD TAMMANY FIGHT

His Position as National Committee Chairman Prevents—Says Wilson Is Liked Abroad.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—William F. McCombs, President Wilson's campaign manager last Summer and now Chairman of the Democratic National Committee, is not going to take any official part in the reorganization of New York City Democracy, and he will not be Ambassador to France. These facts became known to-day following a prolonged conference that Mr. McCombs had with the President, at which national politics and the outlook for the party were freely discussed.

Mr. McCombs and his bride, who was Miss Dorothy Williams of Washington, were the President's guests at luncheon, where he met again Miss Jessie Wilson and her fiancé, Francis B. Sayre of New York.

When he left the White House Mr. McCombs was reticent on the subject of New York politics and the move there to induce him to take the leadership of a reformed Tammany Hall. But there is full ground for saying that party reasons of high importance will decide him against such a course even if the movement reaches the point of a general demand for him at the Fourteenth Street wigwam. These reasons are partly that Mr. McCombs's position as National Chairman prevents him from engaging in factional disputes within the party.

"What have you decided about the Ambassadorship to France?" Mr. McCombs was asked.

"That was settled long ago," he replied. "The honor of representing the American Government at Paris I consider a great one, but I feel that I owe it to myself to devote myself to business. I shall return to the practice of law, from which I have largely withdrawn for two years, ever since Mr. Wilson's name was first prominently mentioned for the Presidency."

"What else did you discuss with the President?" he was asked.

"I had the immense pleasure of letting him know he was esteemed not only at home, but in the countries of Europe as well. Everywhere I went I heard commendation of Mr. Wilson and his Administration."

Mr. McCombs says the fortunes of the Democratic Party are brightening every day. The contest next Summer and two years later will, in his opinion, be between the Democrats and the Republicans. The Roosevelt Progressives, he feels, have spent themselves. Besides, he feels that the progressivism of the Democratic Party has pre-empted Col. Roosevelt's chosen field.

The campaign next Summer was discussed in a visit Mr. Coombs paid at the Capitol to Chairman Doremus of the Congressional Campaign Committee. Mr. McCombs promised the national committee's full co-operation. Mr. McCombs later discussed the situation at length with Postmaster General Burleson, Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo, and Attorney General McReynolds.

SEEK REPUBLICAN HARMONY

"Get Together" Meeting Arranged by Brooklyn Leaders.

Notices will be sent out to-day for a Republican "get-together" meeting to be held at the Brooklyn headquarters of the party, 192 Montague Street, on next Monday evening. All the Republican Assemblymen-elect from New York City are to be invited to meet with the Assembly District leaders of Kings County and other Republicans of prominence.

It was said last night that the discussion at the meeting would have to do chiefly with a plan of action to be pursued by the party's representatives in the State Legislature in the coming session. Efforts will be made to unite the legislators on a course to be followed and other matters affecting the party's future in the city and State will be discussed. All will be urged to stick together as Republicans.

The call for the meeting will be sent out from the Brooklyn organization. Among those who are expected to be present are Samuel S. Koenig and Ogden Mills of Manhattan, Jacob A. Livingston, executive Chairman of Kings County, and Congressman William M. Calder of Brooklyn.

MOOSE CHEST NOT EMPTY.

Progressives Still Have Cash from the Last Campaign.

ALBANY, Nov. 21.—Four persons gave the bulk of the money for the Progressive war chest in the recent campaign, according to the statement filed to-day. They were H. S. Wilkinson, $2,000; George W. Perkins, $1,000; Frank A. Munsey, $1,000, and Mrs. Willard Straight, $1,000. Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., and George Emlen Roosevelt contributed $100 each.

The contributions amounted to $8,151 and the expenditures $6,393.24. Thus $1,757.76 was left for the next fray.

GLYNN WORRIES TAMMANY.

Wigwam Wonders What His Advisory Committee Portends.

Gov. Martin H. Glynn, who proposed in his speech at the Chamber of Commerce dinner on Thursday night that public men should take an active interest in the affairs of the State, said yesterday that he had heard from three well-known men who had offered their services. Who the men were or just what proposals they made the Governor would not tell. He said, though, that the men were prominent, and that when he had heard from the requisite number of citizens he would make their names public.

"I am very sanguine of the success of the idea," said the Governor. "Already three men—business men of prominence—have volunteered to serve, and I am sure I will have no trouble in getting the twenty-five. I have accepted the men who have offered their services, but I do not think I am at liberty at present to give their names. My plan is to enlist the biggest men in business that I can find, and I shall not deviate from that standard.

"This does not mean that I am trying to initiate a commission form of government. It is simply that I intend to give the business men a say. You see, political parties do not work the kind of reforms needed to give a business administration. Methods change, but men do not. When there is a change of administration you always find a lot of men in office who have a following clamoring for their retention on a wide variety of grounds. For every man in office there are always twenty persons at least who are interested in keeping him there; his relatives, his political associates, the people he does business with.

"This makes it hard to put in operation a straight-out business administration, and I think the plan for this advisory commission of business men will be able to solve the problem. I want this commission to look after all State departments, and if they do that and give the work the same care and attention that they give their own business you will see a splendid reorganization in this State."

Tammany was somewhat disturbed yesterday over the Governor's programme. To the organization it seemed that the Governor was seeking a method of distributing State patronage without consulting Charles F. Murphy or the other organization leaders, and they were all wondering what it meant. The Governor has not taken any of the Tammany officials into his confidence, and they are afraid that he is lining himself up with President Wilson in the nation and John Purroy Mitchel in the city. The Governor is planning to have the present Legislature put through a Simon Pure Direct Primary bill, even going so far as to do away with the State convention. If he proposes to leave Tammany out in the cold in the matter of State patronage, the Tammany officials say, the Legislature may not be so willing to put through the Glynn reforms. Several Tammany leaders even went so far as to predict that the Sulzer-Murphy fight might be reenacted all over again when the Legislature meets in December.

The New Munsey Magazine

A radical overturning of old theories in magazine making. A complete book-length novel takes the place of the serial story. A $1.50 book and a standard illustrated magazine all in one. No longer any "Continued in Our Next" in Munsey's Magazine. Everything complete in each issue.

I HAVE made this sweeping change in Munsey's Magazine, cutting out all serial stories, for the reason that magazines built on old lines have lost their grip on the public. The day for the serialization of novels in monthly periodicals is gone, and gone forever.

The public is no longer willing to wait from month to month for fragments of a novel, the whole story dragging through six or eight or ten months. And the novel is the great pulling force in periodical publications. Without it, magazine circulation as a whole, that is, normal, spontaneous circulation, not bargain-counter circulation, would drop perhaps eighty-five per cent.

Weekly publications, Sunday supplements of the daily press and the dailies themselves have usurped the place of the monthly in the presentation of serial stories.

But the monthly magazine has its place. It can do what the dailies and weeklies cannot do. It can publish a complete book-length novel in a single issue, and this "puts it all over" the serialized novel, however ideally presented.

This new move of Munsey's Magazine opens up a new field of wider usefulness and wider popularity for magazines. It gives them a definite work to do and solves the problem of furnishing new books to the public at a price well within the reach of all.

In initiating this broad policy in magazine making, Munsey's Magazine has given the public something new and something big. The complete novel in Munsey's for December (Christmas issue) is

by

George Barr McCutcheon

It is as good a novel as McCutcheon has ever written, and McCutcheon stands with the very first in popularity among the novel writers of the present time. A gauge of his popularity is found in the fact that in book form, at $1.50 a copy, his novels sell up into the hundreds of thousands.

In Munsey's Magazine "Black is White" will cost you 15c; in book form it will cost you $1.50, and in Munsey's Magazine you will get it first—get it before it has ever appeared elsewhere.

The complete novels in Munsey's Magazine are not mere novelettes, but full-length book novels. Make no mistake about this. Of course, the publication of a book-length novel complete in one issue of a magazine means a mammoth magazine in reading pages. Munsey's Magazine is a mammoth magazine in reading pages—228 pages this month.

Magazines running along on old lines give, on an average, say three serialized novels a year. Munsey's Magazine will now give twelve complete novels, which means $18.00 worth of books a year.

Quite apart from the complete McCutcheon novel in the December Munsey, it is a very splendid Christmas magazine, rich in illustrations and generous in short stories, articles, and such miscellany as goes to make complete a standard illustrated magazine. Get the December number of Munsey's Magazine and see the kind of a magazine it is. Seeing for yourself means something

APPELLATE DECISION UPHOLDS TAXI LAW

Lower Rates and Public Stands Win When Companies' Injunction Is Dismissed.

COURT DIVIDED ON ISSUES

Dissenting Opinions Support Hotels' Contentions and Call Cabs Quasi-Public Service Utilities.

The Appellate Division dismissed yesterday the temporary injunctions against the city ordinance, passed to go into effect on Aug. 1, lowering the rates of taxicab fares, and abolishing private cab stands before hotels and clubs. The effect of the court's action is to put the ordinance into immediate operation, and to bar from the streets public vehicles not licensed under the terms of the new ordinance. Company vehicles so licensed will be compelled to take their turn with independent taxicabs on the former private stands which they occupied exclusively.

The decision of the court was quickly obeyed and on the principal hotel stands unlicensed company taxicabs were withdrawn late in the afternoon. At the Waldorf yellow taxicabs stood in the Astor Court alley, on private property, and were brought around to the Thirty-fourth Street entrance, on calls given by patrons on the inside. Up to a late hour there was no disorder.

At other hotels company starters were on duty, and sent telephone messages to nearby garages to call company cabs for patrons. Representatives of the Mayor's Bureau of Licenses, under Deputy Chief Brennan, circulated about the theatre district and hotels last night to make sure that all cabs on the public stands bore the license shield.

Deputy Chief John J. Drennan of the Mayor's Bureau of Licenses said yesterday at his office, 248 West Forty-ninth Street, that he had received instructions from his chief, James G. Wallace, Jr., and Assistant Corporation Counsel Terence Farley, to see to it that no vehicles not licensed under the new ordinance were soliciting business on the streets last night. He said he would have a squad of men out to-day placing public cab-stand signs before the hotels which have up to this time resisted having them posted.

Henry Bennett Leary of 55 Broadway, attorney for the Yellow Taxicab Company, said yesterday that since the motion for an injunction pending the decision of the company's fight against the ordinance was only incidental to its main fight on the ordinance, there would be no appeal to the Court of Appeals as a matter of right, and that in order to take such an appeal, the permission of the Appellate Division would have to be obtained first. He said no decision had been made on the question of seeking this permission.

Soon after the decision unfavorable to the companies and the hotel interests allied to them had been announced, Mr. Leary came before the court to argue his appeal from an injunction which restrained the companies from bringing their suits against the city to immediate trial. Assistant Corporation Counsel Charles J. Nehrbas appeared in opposition. The city's objections to an immediate trial is based on two grounds: first, that there is nothing in the cases which merits their being preferred over hundreds of other cases, and secondly, that the proper preparation of the city's case cannot be made until it has had an opportunity to copy all the books, records and documents of the opposing companies on which their contentions that the rates of the new ordinance are confiscatory are based. These records took some fifty clerks years to compile in the ordinary run of business and their copying and analysis will require time. From what was said yesterday by counsel in the case, it was apparent that a speedy trial and a decision in their favor is the main hope of the companies.

Opinions on Rate Question.

On the two principal questions at issue in the main litigation the Appellate Division went against the hotels and taxicab companies yesterday in decisions on the question of continuing the injunctions during litigation. On the rate question Presiding Justice Ingraham and Justice Hotchkiss took the position that the rates prescribed by the ordinance did not have to be reasonable and that the companies' allegations on this question were immaterial. They said that the Legislature had the unquestioned right to deny the use of the highways to any kind of vehicle and the right to delegate that power to the Board of Aldermen. Since they might prevent taxicabs from using the streets at all, they had the right to make any condition for their operation, and declared further that no one was under any compulsion to operate a taxicab. Hence they reasoned those who could not operate at a profit might quit. With two other Justices, Dowling and Clarke, who held simply that a trial was necessary to establish whether or not the rates were confiscatory and that there was no prima facie showing of their unreasonableness, Presiding Justice Ingraham and Justice Hotchkiss made up a majority of the court in denying an injunction pendente lite on the rate question.

Justice Scott dissented from the divided majority. He was satisfied that the companies had made a prima facie showing that the rates were too low for the companies to operate at a profit and pronounced them quasi-public service corporations, entitled to injunctive relief if compelled to run their cabs at a losing rate of fare. Justice Scott also dismissed the affidavits of various independent taxicab operators, who swore they had been able to make money under the new rates as highly inconclusive.

The court was divided three to two on the question of the right of the city to establish public hack stands before hotels without the consent of the owners. Justices Dowling, Clarke and Hotchkiss rested on the decision of Justice Seabury in the court below and held that it could not be decided in advance of a trial that a public hack stand before any particular hotel was a nuisance. Presiding Justice Ingraham and Justice Scott agreed that a hack stand could not legally be put before a hotel without the owner's permission.

On the rate question, Justice Ingraham said:

> The Legislature intended to vest the Board of Aldermen with entire power to regulate the use of the streets of the City of New York, to regulate the nature of the vehicles that use the streets, and to prescribe the conditions upon which they shall be allowed within the city limits; and with the unrestricted power to regulate the rates of fare to be charged by public conveyances using the streets. If any particular kind of vehicle in use in the city cannot be profitably operated at the rate of fare prescribed in the exercise of this power, the ordinance prescribing the rate of fare to be charged is not, I think, for that reason to be declared unreasonable or a violation of any provision of the Constitution or laws of the State. No one is bound to operate any particular kind of a vehicle or motor vehicle, and if the rate of fare fixed by the Board of Aldermen is not sufficient to allow motor vehicles to be operated in the streets of New York profitably, then the owners can cease from such operation. Nor does the fact that these motor vehicles had been operating in the streets under a license and at rates of fare that were profitable prevent the Board of Aldermen, in the exercise of the power vested in it by the Legislature, from reducing the rates of fare. If vehicles were devised of such size and weight and propelled by power in such a way as to destroy the streets or prevent the use of streets by others, it seems to me that the Board of Aldermen would be justified in prohibiting the use of the vehicles of that class. If the Legislature had the power to prohibit the use of any specified class of vehicles in the public streets, it had the power to delegate to the legislative body of the city the right to exercise that power. The Court of Appeals has lately determined that the Legislature has that power

Dissenting Opinion on Hotel Rights

In dismissing the injunction as against the establishing of public hack stands before the Waldorf-Astoria and other hotels, Justices Dowling, Clarke and Hotchkiss rested on the opinion of Justice Seabury in the court below. Both Presiding Justice Ingraham and Justice Scott wrote dissenting opinions. Justice Scott held:

> Under the former ordinance the hotel proprietor was able to exercise supervision and discipline over the cab stand in front of his hotel; he could see to it that only proper cabs stood there, and that only respectable drivers were employed, and that the existence of the cab stand did not interfere with the carrying on the business of the hotel, while under the present ordinance the cab stand will be opened to any licensed hack whose driver will choose to come there, and the proprietor of the hotel will be able to exercise no control or supervision whatever over either the cabs or their drivers. It is easy to see how a proprietor who was willing to have a special hack stand in front of his hotel, might well object to have a public hack stand established there. It may be safely assumed that at least in front of the larger hotels, the cab stands will be kept permanently filled up with waiting cabs, a new one moving up to take the place of each that leaves the stand. The practical effect of the ordinance will, therefore, be to keep waiting in front of each hotel, without the consent and against the will of the proprietor, a permanent line of hacks waiting and soliciting customers. In my opinion this would constitute an invasion of the abutter's property rights, which the law will not tolerate.

Presiding Justice Ingraham also held that a hotel proprietor had a property right in the street abutting on his premises, and added that an ordinance which attempted to take away this right without compensation was illegal and void.

BAILEY WILL CONTEST.

Commission Issued for Examination of Buffalo Bill and J. M. Burke.

Special to The New York Times.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Nov. 21.—The contest over the will of Ruth Louisa Bailey, who inherited $5,000,000 from the estate of her husband, James A. Bailey, the circus man, took a new turn to-day when Justice Tompkins in the Supreme Court at White Plains issued a commission for the examination of certain showmen in the West. The commission is directed to George B. Drake of Denver, who will examine Col. Cody (Buffalo Bill) and John M. Burke, another showman in that city, as to certain facts relative to Mr. and Mrs. Bailey's friendship for some of the relatives who were cut off without a cent by Mrs. Bailey's will.

The will is being contested by Annabelle Hutchinson, a sister of Mrs. Bailey, and the case will not be tried until the January term of the Supreme Court at White Plains.

DIVORCES H. A. THOMSEN.

Wife of Former Brooklyn Man Gets Decree on Desertion Plea.

Special to The New York Times.

MIDDLETOWN, Conn., Nov. 21.—In the Superior Court here to-day Mrs. Adele Thomsen obtained a divorce from Henry A. Thomsen, son of Hugo A. Thomsen, a commission merchant at 90 Wall Street, New York City. Mrs. Thomsen said her husband left home in Brooklyn in 1908, saying he was going West for his health. Six months later she found he had not left New York City.

Mrs. Thomsen, who was Miss Adele Bleichner, has been living with her parents at Westbrook. With the decree of divorce she obtained the custody of her seven-year-old daughter. Alimony of $50,000 was demanded, but as proof was lacking as to the defendant's financial status, no award was made.

THE VALLEY OF THE MOON

By JACK LONDON,
Author of "Burning Daylight," "Martin Eden," "The Sea Wolf," etc.

One of Many Opinions.

"This new novel of Mr. London's is, first of all, new evidence of the range of his talent and of his assured mastery of his craft.

"We have him here for a while again as the insurgent against social and economic injustice.

"But if he breathes revolt and revolution for a while, he points to a more peaceful end and an easier way out for the submerged.

"For those of them, at least, in whom poverty has not killed the energy to be up and doing.

"Through it all there is woven as winning, as genuine an idyl of young love, of mutual trust and helpfulness, of but a single, united aim in life as one can desire.

"The book is American to the core. It is picturesque and wholesome, romantic and yet practical, breathing, best of all, the atmosphere of the open that heals and brings contentment and the renewed will to live."—New York Tribune.

Theodore Roosevelt: An Autobiography

The Book of the Year
Colonel Roosevelt's Own Story of His Life

This exceptional book, written in Colonel Roosevelt's characteristically vigorous and easily flowing colloquial style, is one that will make a strong and satisfying appeal to every class of readers,—

Not only as the official life story of Colonel Roosevelt's remarkable career, but as one of the great literary events of the year.

For many years no other single personality of the present day has attracted such general attention in national and world-wide policies, and no more vivid picture of contemporaneous history probably will ever be written than Colonel Roosevelt's own story of his life.

In its interpretation of Colonel Roosevelt's striking personality, this work is not only of national but of international importance.

From his boyhood days in New York, his adolescent youth at Harvard University, his young manhood days in the wild West, and through a diversified public career which led to the Presidency of the United States, Colonel Roosevelt was a learner as well as a born leader.

In this book he tells of the many things which he learned and how he learned them, relating them primarily with a view to the help they may give others.

To the lover of the strenuous life as well as to the student of contemporaneous history, to the young people of the country particularly, who all find a special attraction in personal narrative of active achievement, this autobiography will afford keen satisfaction and high inspiration.

The book is handsomely bound and is unusually attractive, with illustrations of portraits, fac-similes of various documents, pictures of buildings, localities, and other intresting and appropriate matter.

HORSE SHOW ATTRACTS SOCIETY---INTERCOLLEGIATE CROSS COUNTRY RACE HERE

FRANCE CAPTURES THE AMERICA CUP

Army Officers of Five Nations Compete Over Jumps in Teams of Three.

NEW HIGH-JUMPING RECORD

Skyscraper Clears 7 Feet 3 Inches Before Brilliant Throng at Garden Horse Show.

Saddle horses, roadsters, high-steppers, and the high jumpers were leading attractions at the National Horse Show in Madison Square Garden yesterday, with jumping by officers across the miniature water course in teams of three as special features. The attendance was the greatest of the week and taxed the capacity of the building.

It was what the show veterans termed "an old-time crowd" last night. To the committee it was a cause of regret that they permitted the decorators to hang the drop curtain depicting a Roman scene at the Fourth Avenue end of the building in such manner that seats and boxes that would have held from 1,000 to 1,500 were put out of commission. About a hundred men and women had solved the problem by raising the end of the drop curtain and peeping at the ring from under it. They had a fine viewpoint until one of the Garden policemen ordered them out of the seats.

With five nations competing for the America Cup, presented by C. K. G. Billings, the climax of the exhibition was reached with the most interesting and spectacular event on the programme. The contest was for jumping over the course by teams of three of the same nationality in uniform, each horse making two circuits of the arena.

France Best Over Jumps.

The trophy went to France, with England and Canada as the contenders. The French representatives were Sarah Gosse, ridden by Lieut. Marquis D'Orgix; Amazone, with Lieut. Baron de Meson in the saddle, and Othello, piloted by Lieut. de Lassardieres. Othello was the only horse of the winning trio which made a clean score. Sarah Gosse knocked down the gate with her hind feet and Amazone touched the top rail of the gate when almost clear of the obstacle. These mistakes cost France three points.

Great Britain won second place, with Dan Leno, Surprise and Harmony, ridden by Capt. R. M. Stewart Richardson, Major M. F. McTaggart and Col. P. A. Kenna, respectively. Both Dan Leno and Harmony were guilty of faults aggregating four points, each of the two horses striking the bar with their fore feet on the second round. The third prize went to the Dominion of Canada, with three military chargers ridden by Capt. J. W. Sifton, Major D. Douglas Young and Capt. Walker Bell.

A remarkable performance was witnessed in the high jumping class, the last on the programme, when Col. the Hon. Clifford Sifton brown gelding, Skyscraper, cleared the bar at 7 feet 3 inches, establishing a new Garden show record, the best previous jump being 7 feet 1 inch. In anticipation of seeing unusual feats of horsemanship, the big crowd remained in the building until the final leap by Skyscraper was made, and the spectators were rewarded for the additional delay. Never before in the history of the association has such wonderful jumping been seen, and the fact that another Canadian horse was victorious did not restrain the enthusiastic spectators from bestowing the full measure of applause on the horse and rider.

Although a number of European army horses entered the contest not one was able to compete against the timber toppers from the Dominion. The best American horse in the event was Caesar, ridden by Sidney J. Holloway, which jumped 6 feet 9 inches, and was placed forth to three Canadian entries. The Wasp and Confidence, from the Sifton Stables made cleaner records in the last trial than Caesar, and were placed second and third respectively. Skyscraper was in perfect jumping condition and in each trial approached the take-off with accurate stride, while the rider, Jack Hamilton timed his rise with judgment and precision.

The Canadian horse won the jumps at 7 feet, but the performance was apparently with little effort, and the rider was requested to try for a new record. He again timed his stride and take-off correctly and carried his mount over the bar, which had been raised three inches, in gallant fashion, all four feet of the horse clearing the top bar by several inches. The garden rang with cheers when the announcement of a new record was made.

Capt. Richardson, who rode Dan Leno, rode with but one working leg, the other still being in wraps from his recent accident in the ring. His plucky riding under such difficulties caught the crowd, which applauded him with vigor. The jumping was all clean cut and the most sportsmanlike spirit prevailed. The United States team, despite the handicap of the inferior mounts provided for them by the War Department, finished in fourth place and beat out the Belgians.

The contest for the single roadster championship was virtually a duel throughout between Thomas W. Murphy's brown stallion, J. Malcolm Forbes, and E. T. Stotesbury's bay mare, Ruby. Undoubtedly, in quiet manners and elegance of action, Ruby was nearest to the ideal type of the driving horse for pleasure, but the stallion was "too much horse" in conformation, speedy gait, and reputation to be set aside on the basis of type, and, therefore, was fully entitled to the title of champion bestowed on him by the judges.

$40,000 Offered for Stallion.

J. Malcomb Forbes is named in honor of the Boston banker and horseman, who paid the late Senator Leland Stanford $125,000 for Arion, 2.07½, then the champion 3-year-old. Mr. Forbes died the same year yesterday's winner was foaled. The horse made a record against time at Lexington two years ago of 2.08 and has already made a name in the stud as the sire of ten in the 2.30 list. The Russian Government is always on the lookout for fresh blood to improve the trotting Orlofis, and agents from that country offered Murphy $40,000 after J. Malcolm Forbes's success in the championship. Murphy would not say whether he thought the sale would be consummated, but admitted that he had notified the owner and breeder of the stallion, for whom he has been managing the stallion, James R. McGown, of Sterling, Ky., of the offer of the Russians.

Clever jumping and some farcical refusals were features of the broad water jump. The miniature river, at a width of 15 feet for the first trial, was widened a foot at a time to 18 feet for the final try. Twenty horses tried the jump, and several only popped over the hurdle into the water, giving their riders an involuntary bath. One nag, after jumping into the water, turned about and backed out to the dry tan bark. The winner was the French Government's gray gelding, Romeo, ridden by Lieut. Marquis d'Orgeix, with the chestnut gelding, Ramuncho, second, owned and ridden by Chevalier Edward de Selliers de Moranville of Belgium. Third, and a notable distinction in such a strong class, was the bay gelding, Commander, exhibited by Squadron C, N. G. N. Y., ridden by Private Dennis Stockton.

Moore Wins in Harness Classes.

In the heavy harness horse classes the highest honors were won by Judge Moore, but not without a vigorous opposition. To the closing time last night he had gained eleven first prizes in these classes. The relatively poor showing of Alfred G. Vanderbilt, with but two wins under the same conditions, who in other years has made a nip and tuck race of it with Judge Moore for supremacy, is due to the new horses he has been selecting not being fit to exhibit at this time, while those he has brought out have been up against the famous champions in the Moore string and as a consequence outclassed. By the next show Mr. Vanderbilt, unless all signs fail, will have his horses in the best of condition, and he will again have to be reckoned with in every heavy harness class, from the hackney ponies to the big pairs and teams.

Judge Moore's first blue of the day was in the class for single harness horses over 15.1 and not exceeding 15.3 hands. Fifteen of the eighteen entries were in the ring, all clinkers in every respect, but Judge Moore had the outstanding one in the bay hackney mare Bountiful. There was a long tryout for the minor places between a half dozen, the succeeding places being finally allotted to Miss Loula Long with Revelation, Miss Anna Vauclain with The Whip and George Chipchase, driving Judge Moore's Roderick Dhu. The once monarch of the show in single harness, Nala, now owned by Edward B. McLean, for the first time in his career "got the gate" in this class.

E. T. Stotesbury had strong competition in the class for roadster pairs, but won with Ruby and Lasca, with T. M. V. Hoffman, second, with Mahlon Wilkes and Teneriffe. The placing in the championship for roadster pairs was the same. Although beaten in the single roadster championship, Mr. Stotesbury's score is remarkable, for he has won four blue ribbons, a championship and a reserve ribbon, with but two horses at the show.

Women in the Ring.

Baronet and Satire, driven very capably by Miss Belle Beach, won the appointment class to ladies' phaetons for J. Sumner Draper, the Bostonian. In the class for ladies' saddle horses, 14.2 and not over 15.2 hands, manners to count 50 per cent., and to be ridden by ladies in side saddles, seventeen passed before the judges. Miss Cynthia Kearney won with her chestnut gelding Dixie, repeating the successes of the Summer shows, the others placed being Sefton Girl, Beau Sabreur and Walter H. Hanley's Early Morn.

The night class for saddle horses was the same as to height, but with no restriction as to the riders.

Thoroughbred horses, mares or geldings, suited to become hunters, and to be over seven years old or less than 15.3 hands in height, were an attractive morning class. There were seven entries for the prizes, the gift of F. Ambrose Clark of a $150 cup and $100 to the winner and $100 to the second, the third receiving a ribbon. Glen Riddle Farms sent in two grand looking candidates, respectively a five and four year old of 16.3 and 16 hands, and won both first and second. There was not a white hair on either of them. The winner was T. K., a brown gelding by Tousaint-Tal-vea, ridden by C. Utz. with Quiton, a chestnut gelding by Egerton-Quida, with W. P. Miles up, second. Immediately afterward the winners in all the classes were on the tanbark for the championship among horses suited to become hunters, T. K. winning again, and the English horse Grey Plover, Capt. Parker up, getting the reserve. Highball, the grand chestnut gelding owned by Edward B. McLean, made a fine showing, with Dick Donnelly in the saddle, and by the critics outside the ring was deemed a sure thing for at least the reserve ribbon.

Amateur Riders in Saddle.

Amateur riders were called for in the morning competition for the cup presented by Alfred B. Maclay for hunters that have been out to hounds with some recognized pack at least eight times this or last year, performances over the jump to count 75 and conformation 25 per cent. There were eleven entries, and the faces of the riders recalled a meet at Meadow Brook or Piping Rock. Gerald T. Hanley, the amateur aviator, furnished the winner in the brown gelding Lansdown, ridden by F. Ambrose Clark; J. Schuyler Cary was second on Foxy Foot, a chestnut gelding owned by Hamilton Farms, while third and fourth were L. W. Riddle, the Philadelphian, with Major Treat, and Sydney Holloway, riding Caesar, the brown gelding formerly called Dreadnought.

It came out yesterday that Lieut. Baron de Meslon, of the First Cuirassiers, who, as the senior of the three French cavalry officers representing their country at the Horse Show, has won admiration on all sides for his splendid horsemanship, has achieved considerable fame as a composer. One of the Baron's brother officers let slip the fact that the young officer is known in the musical world as "P. Nolmes," which is merely a transposition of the letters of his name. Among his compositions is "La Valse Grise," which has met with great success in Paris.

Some of the friends who have shared Baron de Meslon's secret have urged that he devote his time to music, but with him the army is a dominant and absorbing passion, and it is a family tradition that service in the army must be the paramount ambition of a French nobleman. When the subject of music is touched upon in conversation the Baron becomes shy and uncommunicative.

SOCIETY FILLS ALL THE BOXES.

Mrs. Monson Morris and Miss McCormack with Mrs. A. G. Vanderbilt

The largest crowd of the week was at the Horse Show last night, and the boxes were all occupied. Mrs. Alfred G. Vanderbilt had Mrs. Monson Morris and Miss McCormack with her in Box 13. At the afternoon session Mrs. Vanderbilt was in Box 62 for a time, with Mrs. Charles de Loosey Oelrichs.

The Misses Angelica and Mabel Gerry were at the afternoon exhibition. Miss Gerry wore a black velvet coat and skirt, a black sailor hat with a white aigrette and a sable scarf. Miss Mabel Gerry was in a black brocaded tailor costume, a huge scarf of black seal lined with tailless ermine, and a high black hat with plumes.

Mrs. C. B. Alexander was in a black tailored costume at the afternoon performance with a white waistcoat brocaded in black, and her daughter, Miss Harriet Alexander, wore a plain fitted brown tailored suit with a touch of green, and a small fawn-colored felt hat with wings to match on one side.

Mrs. Richard Morris was in a black tailored afternoon dress with a wide black girdle brocaded in large gold and silver flowers, and a black velvet hat with a lace brim, trimmed with an emerald green bird of paradise plume.

Mme. Bakhmeteff, wife of the Russian Ambassador, at the afternoon session wore a brique colored cloak with sables and a black velvet hat trimmed with aigrettes of the same color. She wore a superb emerald, mounted on a diamond and platinum necklace.

Mrs. Arthur M. Dodge was a visitor at the night performance. The Rev. Percy Stickney Grant was with a party. Miss Loula Long last night wore a stunning costume of ivory satin with a tunic of purple and gold chiffon, richly embroidered, and a gobelin blue cloak, with a big black velvet hat.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Franklin Adams and their debutante daughter, Miss Edith L. Adams, had a party of young people in a box last night. Mrs. Adams was in black velvet, and Miss Adams wore a girlish frock of white, with touches of black.

News for the Golfers.

The Metropolitan Golf Association will purchase its own trophy for its annual championship hereafter. At a meeting of the Executive Committee yesterday it was decided that this course will be pursued in view of the fact that it was desired not to establish a precedent whereby a club or individual might think it incumbent upon it or himself to replace such a trophy when it was won outright.

It will be recalled that Jerome D. Travers won the third and final leg on the Daniel Chauncey trophy this year at Fox Hills, and that a week or two before the tournament it was suggested in certain quarters that the trophy be made one for permanent competition. As a result, the Upper Montclair Country Club, previous to the tournament, offered to donate a trophy to replace the Chauncey plaque in the event that Travers should win it finally for his club. When the Upper Montclair Country Club came into possession of the trophy, through Travers's victory, it devolved upon the Metropolitan Golf Association to accept or reject the offer. The Metropolitan Golf Association yesterday decided not to accept this offer, because of the precedent it might establish, though it went on record as highly appreciating the sportsmanlike attitude of the club. John Reid, Jr., Findlay S. Douglas, and Howard F. Whitney were appointed a committee of three to purchase a new trophy, conditions for which will be decided upon at a later date.

Rapid progress is being made on the new building of the Scarsdale Golf and Country Club to replace the one recently destroyed by fire. The new structure allows much greater locker accommodations as well as more kitchen and piazza room.

COLLEGE MEN TO RUN FOR HONORS

Fourteen Teams Represented in Cross-Country Race at Van Cortlandt Park.

In anticipation of the intercollegiate championship cross-country race this afternoon at Van Cortlandt Park, there was a great influx of collegians here last night, each university nominated having brought the flower of its distance running strength in the endeavor to lift the hill and dale titles, both individual and team.

The Hotel Cumberland has provided quarters for more than a third of the prospective triers for the honors, where Dartmouth, Cornell, Syracuse, Brown and Penn State have their pennants shown in the foyer of the building. Harvard, under the mentorship of Alfred Shrubb, who aided in the winning of the event last year, when the Crimson captured the team title from Cornell, are quartered at the McAlpin, while the Massachusetts Institute of Technology lads are guests of the Technology Club. Yale and Princeton will arrive this morning.

Among close observers it is believed that the event will be the closest ever held among the colleges. There is no runner of the John Paul Jones type, but on the whole each of the teams is said to be well balanced. Harvard's best man is probably the Captain, R. St. B. Boyd, who will be supported by a strong field of runners. Cornell will show without their best man, Potter, but in Hoffmire and McCotrick the Ithacans say they will be heard from at the end.

Harry Hillman's best man from Dartmouth is F. R. Marcuse, while Coop is expected to hold up his end in the individual struggle for Brown. Hayes and Morrison are the stars for the Tigertown team, while Pennsylvania has a fine pair to draw to in McCurdy and Madeira. The teams will dress for the race in the Barnard School gymnasium, located on the hill overlooking the course. The race will be started at 3 P. M. sharp, and Harry Fisher of Columbia, the manager of the event, states that he has been promised a sufficient police patrol to control the crowd.

Princeton Expects to Win Run.

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 21.—The Tiger "harriers" leave for the intercollegiate cross country at Van Cortlandt Park, New York, to-morrow morning at 9:33 o'clock. Capt. Morrison and the majority of the team have been over the course and will not step on to it until the time of the race. The seven men who will make the trip in charge of the track managers are as follows: Captain, D. S. Morrison, 1915; S. K. Atha, 1915; W. S. Doty, 1915; M. J. Hayes, 1915; H. H. Barnett, 1916; A. Hunter, 1916, and L. L. Glover, 1916. They will lunch at the Martinique.

The team considers that it has a real chance for winning the meet in view of their victories this Fall, although they do not expect to carry off individual honors, and the only victory upon which they are counting would be by a very narrow margin.

Recreation Centre Games.

Competition in the all-around championships of the Evening Recreation Centre of the High School of Commerce began last night in the gymnasium of the school in West Sixty-fifth Street. The programme comprised eight events, and about 500 persons witnessed the contests. The feature was the one-half-mile race, which was won by A. Hirsh in the excellent time of 2:25 2-5. Hirsh held the lead practically from the start, but throughout was hard pushed by P. Wilkins. A final spurt near the finish line, however, gave Hirsh the honors by inches. H. Werner was the star performer among the juniors, capturing the 220 and 440 yards events. The summaries:

70-Yard Dash, Junior.—Won by F. Rohne; W. Rohne, second; W. Kyne, third. Time—0:10 1-5.

220-Yard Dash, Junior.—Won by H. Werner; E. Irwin, second; F. Rehbe, third. Time—0:30.

R. Erlandsen, a member of the Glencoe Athletic Club, finished first last night in the weekly road race of the Union Settlement Athletic Club, outrunning a field of fifteen starters, and crossing the line in 18:55, three seconds ahead of T. Maroney, a club mate, who was second. The race was held over a course which measured three and one-half miles, and all of the fifteen starters finished. Following is the order of finish of the first ten:

R. Erlandsen, Glencoe A. C.; T. Maroney, Glencoe A. C.; M. Collins, Union Settlement; D. Skibbe, Union Settlement; W. Burke, Union Settlement; F. Balle, Union Settlement; S. Richman, unattached; H. Cohen, Union Settlement; W. Tenka, Union Settlement; M. Hyman, Union Settlement.

The New York Athletic Club will stage an amateur boxing tournament which will consist of four classes, 112, 125, 135, and 150 pounds, in the gymnasium, on Thursday and Saturday evenings, Dec. 11 and 12. The prizes will be a diamond ring to each of the winners, while the beaten men in the semi-finals will each receive a gold filled watch. The beaten men in the semi-finals will each receive a silver New York A. C. die foh medal as a souvenir, and the organization tallying the greatest number of points will be awarded a beautiful point trophy. Entry blanks and further information can be had of Eugene J. Giannini, Physical Director, N. Y. A. C., and Amateur Athletic Union, 21 Warren Street, New York.

The Barnard School basket ball team defeated Poly Prep School of Brooklyn in a close and exciting game yesterday afternoon on the latter's court by the score of 21 to 18.

VARDON AND RAY HOME.

English Golfers Criticise Newspapers for Alleged Unfairness.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LIVERPOOL, Nov. 21.—Harry Vardon and Edward Ray, the English professional golfers who have been playing in the United States, arrived here to-day on the Celtic. They were eagerly sought by a host of reporters, but they proved very uncommunicative, and announced their intention of saying nothing about the tour. The players said they had had a very good time in America. When pressed to talk, Vardon replied:

"No, not now; some other time perhaps. To tell the truth, we have decided not to give anything away in the course of interviews. We had a sickening experience at the hands of the American papers. They put in our mouths a great many things we never said. They were irresponsible and inaccurate."

Both Vardon and Ray also hinted that they had a grievance against the English press, and have preserved a bundle of clippings to corroborate their views.

"That is why we have decided to say nothing," added Vardon. "I don't want to say anything at present about America, its golf courses, and its golfers, and I cannot say just what our plans are. All I need to tell you is that Ouimet, who won the American championship, was a fine player and deserved to win."

HOCKEY SCHEDULE OUT.

Wanderers and Crescents to Play First Game at Rink.

The Schedule Committee of the Amateur Hockey League completed its labors last night by drafting a schedule of games in the tournament for the championship, which met with the approval of the representatives of the various clubs engaged. The difficulty which confronted the schedule-makers was to avoid conflicting the playing and practice dates, many of the players objecting to playing games on the night following that of a hard practice. Several dates were changed at the request of Cornelius Fellowes of the Rink management to enable him to arrange a number of college and Canadian games on Saturday nights during the season.

The regular championship season will begin on Saturday, Jan. 5, with the Wanderers' Hockey Club and the Crescent A. C. as opponents. With but five clubs represented on the ice, only a double round robin will be necessary to complete the schedule, which is as follows:

First Round—Jan. 3, Crescent vs. Wanderers; 6, Irish-American vs. Hockey Club; 8, Crescent vs. St. Nicholas; 13, Hockey Club vs. Wanderers; 15, Irish-American vs. St. Nicholas; 20, Irish-American vs. Wanderers; 23, Hockey Club vs. Crescent; 27, St. Nicholas vs. Wanderers; 29, Crescent vs. Irish-American; Feb. 4, St. Nicholas vs. Hockey Club.

Second Round—Feb. 6, Crescent vs. Wanderers; 10, Irish-American vs. Hockey Club; 12, Crescent vs. St. Nicholas; 17, Hockey Club vs. Wanderers; 20, Irish-American vs. St. Nicholas; 24, Irish-American vs. Wanderers; 27, Hockey Club vs. Crescent; March 3, St. Nicholas vs. Wanderers; 5, Crescent vs. Irish-American; 11, St. Nicholas vs. Hockey Club.

Denver and Oakland Boy to Race.

Announcement is made by the Road Drivers' Association that a special feature of to-morrow's events on the Harlem River Speedway will be the postponed match race between Nathan Straus's Denver and James A. Murphy's Oakland Boy. This is the event that has been set back because of inclement weather, and is attracting a great amount of attention on the part of the horsemen of the metropolitan district. Another special has been arranged with Edgar Shoemaker's Flaget and Mr. Murphy's Coast Marie. In addition to the above, the usual brushes will be held, although the cup event season has closed.

Two evenly matched, hard-fighting football elevens are going to clash when Yale plays Harvard at Soldiers' Field this afternoon. The more smoothly developed, machine-like Crimson team will have to battle the rejuvenated aggressive Blue aggregation, which has apparently just found itself, and which really does not know the extent of its own power. Harvard's team is more highly finished and plays with more unity and co-ordination than Yale. The Cambridge eleven has a wider variety of play, and is almost perfectly schooled in the A B C's of the game. Yale believes that its newly discovered power will lead it to accomplish more than it had hoped for, with the enthusiastic aggressiveness and unrelenting driving "punch" which completely baffled the Princeton team last week.

This game is likely to be a terrific battle between two formidable lines. The Crimson line has been made over into a stronger combination since the Princeton game. Hardwick has been shifted to end, Capt. Storer will be back at tackle, and Hitchcock will be at guard. The regular centre, Trumbull, will be in his old position. In the backfield is Bradlee, the strongest secondary defensive player on the eleven.

There is also likely to be a change in the Yale line. "Red" Brann has been saved to play end in this game. Brann has been handicapped by injuries this season, but he has had little work lately and the Yale coaches look to this aggressive end rush to stop Eddie Mahan's spectacular runs. Capt. Ketcham, the Yale leader, will play guard, where he will have a splendid chance to give vent to his cazed-up aggressiveness with splendid effect. Abe Wilson, Yale's giant quarter back, is likely to be a star in the game, as he was in the Princeton battle. Perhaps not as quick a thinker or as resourceful as some quarter backs, Wilson is a remarkable performer, and is the equal of any of the backfield players in rushing back punts, an asset which should be very valuable in this game.

The lines of both teams have been so thoroughly drilled in defensive football that it is not likely that rushing football isn't going to cut much of a figure in the result. Yale will have a chance, because the defense should be strong enough to offset Harvard's line-breaking game, and the Harvard eleven will be thrown back on its kicking resources. It will probably be a kicking game from start to finish. And in a game of this sort the element of chance plays a prominent part. A block kick will mean much. Both elevens have eliminated to a great extent the weakness of fumbling, so that will not have such an important bearing on the result as the possibility of a blocked punt.

If either team gets anywhere within the 35 or 40 yard lines to-day the other team will be in serious danger. Harvard carries the greater talent in the drop-kicking line, for Charley Brickley is a more reliable man in field goals than either Guernsey or Pumpelly. Brickley, with half a chance, can win this game with his talented toe. On the other hand, if Yale gets down into Crimson territory, Guernsey or Pumpelly is likely to boot the ball over. Football experts look for a field goal to win the game, or perhaps another field goal to tie it.

Under the present rules, these elevens are not going to take any chances. They will play safe rather than rely on any fireworks with the forward pass. There will be no criss-cross plays, triple passes, or tricks such as the Indian team and Western elevens have developed this year. It will be hard, plunging football.

Harvard will rely on Eddie Mahan to run back punts and to do the kicking. As far as running back kicks go, Wilson and Ainsworth have shown that they are almost as proficient as Mahan and Brickley. In the punting Yale will probably have an advantage. Either Guernsey or Knowles can kick as well as Mahan. In fact, Guernsey is probably better than the Harvard punter. He gets away a high, far-carrying ball, giving the fleet Yale ends plenty of time to get down the field. In the Princeton game the Yale ends showed more skill in getting down under kicks than Harvard has shown this season. So in the punting game Yale seems to have a slight advantage.

Up to the present time Harvard, because of its fine record this season—not having been defeated or even tied—has been a slight favorite. Yale men have looked for odds, but it is likely that this afternoon the betting will be even. Harvard has more confidence in this eleven than in any team Haughton has coached in five years. It is the culmination of his system. He has had plenty of time to work it out and has had excellent material to work with. On the "Gold Coast" at Cambridge, the row of dormatories along Mount Auburn Street, the students have raised a pool of $5,000 with which to back the big Crimson team. Harvard has never defeated Yale in the stadium, and this is the year Harvard expects to make football history.

Nor has Harvard ever defeated a Yale eleven two years in succession. One thing is certain, this year's Yale team has shown more fighting aggressiveness than any team in years. It has been defeated once and tied three times, and yet the feeling will not die in New Haven that it has more power than has yet been shown. The Princeton game was severe on the Yale players. Some of them lost several pounds. The week has been spent in rest, trying to build up the physical strength of the eleven. Harvard has had two weeks to get over the Princeton battle, and last week's game with Brown was not a severe test for them. Harvard is likely to have the edge on physical condition, which will mean much.

It's going to be a football game from the blow of the whistle. Which ever team wins will have to extend itself to the limit of physical endeavor to do it. To a man up a tree it looks like a toss up. And unfortunately it may be one of those unsatisfactory no-score ties, which have been so frequent between the two teams in late years. Since 1875 Yale and Harvard have played thirty-three games. Harvard has won six times, Yale twenty-two, and five contests have been ties. The statistics of the elevens are as follows:

BOSTON HOTELS CROWDED.

Harvard Bettors Offering to to 7 That Crimson Team Will Win.

BOSTON, Nov. 21.—Not since the night when Boston made early colonial history with an innovation in the way of tea parties has this staid and dignified New England city shown the stress of excitement that prevails on the eve of the thirty-fourth game between the football elevens of Harvard and Yale universities. Judged from actions and conversation of the inhabitants and their guests, the gridiron battle of to-morrow is the one event worthy of serious consideration.

The question of weather conditions for the playing of the Crimson and Blue game is temporarily of far more importance than any ultimatum that Huerta may release in Mexico City. Incidentally the local weather man is just as diffident about disclosing his future intentions as is the President of the Republic below the Rio Grande. With more than 50,000 football enthusiasts awaiting his final selection of atmospheric conditions, he coyly admits that it may be warm and clear to-morrow afternoon or cold and rainy. Fortunately, however, his dubious forecast has failed to check in the slightest the scenes of gayety and excitement that are a feature of the Harvard-Yale game played in the Cambridge Stadium once every two years. Boston and the adjacent college city are seething to-night with those clever celebrators who take time by the forelock and thus forestall regrets and financial pangs that follow in the wake of the defeat.

Hotels and theatres report conditions that resemble the boom days of a Western mining town. Rooms at the leading hostelries have been unobtainable for several weeks, and hallways and lounging quarters are to-night blocked with cots whereby the boniface will care for the overflow. "Standing Room Only" signs decorate the lobbies of all the theatres and the Blue of Yale and the Crimson of Harvard adorn every other available point of vantage in and about the Hub.

Ticket speculators are receiving from $35 to $50 for a pair of the few seats in their possession, and every one of the 47,000 persons who expect to witness the game appears to be anxious to wager "just a trifle" on the outcome of the contest. Odds are 10 to 7 on Harvard, with a preponderance of Crimson currency in sight.

In the midst of all this hubbub the squads of rival gridiron gladiators are sequestered in the quiet quarters outside the excitement zone. The Yale team and substitutes are spending the night before the battle at Auburndale and an air of confidence pervades the temporary quarters of the Elis. This feeling was accentuated by the excellent practice of the Blue eleven in the Stadium early this afternoon, when the team showed great speed in signal drill, and Guernsey drop-kicked the ball over the goal bar repeatedly from difficult angles.

Harvard's Varsity and substitute players have hidden themselves within the domain of the Vesper Club on an island in the Merrimac River near Lowell. Aside from a little golf and a short signal line-up, it has been an uneventful twenty-four hours for them.

The coaches and trainers of both teams report their charges ready for the hard game that is expected by all close followers of the two elevens. Physically and mentally the players who will open the game in the Stadium are stated to be on edge for the play. The same cannot be said of the strategists who are playing the moves which may bring victory or defeat.

The opening line-ups appear to be the source of greatest trouble, especially for the Yale coaches. Some doubt exists as to whether Carter or Brann will be at right end for the Blue when the team first faces Harvard, and either Guernsey or Knowles may start the game at right half for the Elis.

No eleventh hour changes have been announced in the Harvard ranks, but a rumor prevailed in Yale circles that a shift in formation might be expected about 2 o'clock Saturday. This report probably arose from the statement that in case Hitchcock should leave the play Gilman would be shifted to his position and Cowen substituted at right tackle.

PRINCETON PICKS HARVARD.

Tiger Football Team's Vote on Winner To-day Against Yale 13 to 1.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 21.—Princeton's football warriors who fought Harvard and Yale this Fall when the latter were at the height of their training were tested out this afternoon as to their opinion on the game between Yale and Harvard to-morrow, and the composite prediction was a victory for Harvard by a 13 to 1 vote. The only dissenting voice was Capt. Baker, who said Yale would win, but he did not care to say why. Those who gave the Crimson a victory qualified it, however, with the prediction that it would be by a very close score. Eddie Trenkman was the only man to give them a material advantage and he predicted they would win with a margin of fifteen points.

"Brad" Streit expects Yale to crumble proportionately as much as the Tigers did at New Haven a week ago, because he considers it unlikely they will be able to keep on edge two weeks and play two big games. Ten of the men predicted that the game would be decided on field goals, and the limit was a margin of six points.

Coach "Heff" Herring said Harvard would win by either a six to three or six to nothing score. The general agreement was that the game would be a battle between the kickers, with Brickley holding a slight advantage that the two lines were unusually well matched and that the backfield would solve the question. In case of a "fluke" of any sort, the game might go to either one of the teams because the two elevens were so nearly on a par.

The men who played against Harvard and Yale, with the exception of three men who were detained in Princeton, left this afternoon for the big contest to be the guests of the Yale and Harvard teams at the game. Seats were furnished by the two elevens, most of them on the side lines and some in the bleachers. The Athletic Association bears the expense of the trip. Nearly a hundred Princeton undergraduates will see the game at Cambridge, and the play will be reported here in detail for those who do not make the trip.

Guernsey to Play Full Back.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Mass., Nov. 21.—Otis Guernsey of New York City was definitely selected this evening by the Yale coaches for full back against Harvard to-morrow, displacing the veteran Dave Dunn, whose knee was injured at the Princeton game last week. Decision was reserved until to-night, when Trainer Mack tried Dunn's knee and found it so lame that he recommended that Dunn be not allowed to start.

At the coaches' council the plan of using Carter again at right end was favored, although it was admitted that there is just a possibility that "Red" Brann may be selected at the last minute.

The final working up of the Yale players disclosed the fact that several are not yet up to the poundage they possessed before the Princeton game. Yale is displeased at the continued warm weather, and two complete sets of backs and several second-string rushline players will be used.

Harvard Line-Up Announced.

LOWELL, Mass., Nov. 21.—After a long secret conference to-night, the Harvard coaches gave out the following as the line-up for to-morrow's game:

O'Brien, left end; Storer, left tackle; Gilman, left guard; Trumbull, centre; Pennock, right guard; Hitchcock, right tackle; Hardwick, right end; Logan, quarter back; Bradlee, left half back; Brickley, right half back; Mahan, full back.

No comment was forthcoming, but it was stated that so far as present plans were concerned that was the way the men would be placed when the game started.

Yale Team in Fine Condition.

AUBURNDALE, Mass., Nov. 21.—The Yale team retired early to-night after a walk in the moonlight. Head Coach Jones said:

"Our line-up will be the same as that which faced Princeton, except that Guernsey will start at full back in place of Dunn. Every man who is expected to get into the game is in fine condition."

STEVENS AND RUTGERS.

Big Game of North Jersey Schools at Castle Point To-day.

Stevens and Rutgers, football rivals since 1874, will engage in their annual gridiron struggles at the Stevens field, Castle Point, Hoboken, this afternoon. This is the big game of the year for both institutions, and both elevens have been undergoing special instruction during the past week in preparation for this game.

Since the two institutions played their first game in 1873 they have engaged in forty-four contests, of which number Rutgers won twenty-four, Stevens won fifteen, and five ended in tie scores. Rutgers this season has one of the best elevens the college has ever turned out, as was demonstrated last week by its decisive victory over Trinity. Stevens is not lacking in confidence, however, as the Hoboken boys always show their best football when playing their old rivals. The teams are about evenly matched as regards weight.

Football Challenge for Clinton.

Special to The New York Times.

STAMFORD, Conn., Nov. 21.—The following telegram was sent to-day by the manager of the Stamford High School football, claimants of the championship of Connecticut, to the De Witt Clinton High School football manager:

"A number of representative Stamford men have offered a cup, to be designed by Gorham or Tiffany, to cost up to $250, as a prize to be awarded the victorious team in a match between the high school eleven holding the State championship of New York and the Stamford High School eleven. We understand that your school holds the championship this year, and I desire to arrange a game with you. Arrangements as to the time and place of game can be made later. Please notify me immediately if you would agree to play us.

"NELSON HALPIN, Manager."

To Form Civil Service A. A.

Representatives of the different departments of the city met yesterday in order to formulate plans for the organization of the Civil Service Athletic Association. One of the first things settled upon was that in connection with affiliation with the Amateur Athletic Union, and after a constitution and by-laws have been adopted, application will be made for membership in the Metropolitan Association of that body. The election of a Governing Board and the various officers will be held at the first session, the date of which will be announced shortly.

LEHIGH VALLEY'S BIG FOOTBALL GAME

Lafayette to Clash with Old Rival, Lehigh, on South Bethlehem Gridiron.

Special to The New York Times.

EASTON, Penn., Nov. 21.—When Lafayette and Lehigh football teams meet to-morrow afternoon on Taylor Field, at South Bethlehem, there will be a clash as important among the smaller colleges of the East as the Harvard-Yale game is among the larger institutions. It will be the forty-eighth gridiron duel between these time-honored rivals. Never in this long course of competition have the teams appeared to be more evenly matched. Differing by but two pounds in average weight, each team has a superior attack and erratic defense. The game will go to the team whose defense is working best.

Although Coach McCaa will venture no prediction as to the ultimate outcome, in his private opinion he is confident that Lafayette will win. The finishing touches to this giant struggle of the little college were put on this afternoon. The 'Varsity and the scrubs met on March Field and there for the last time went through all the plays to be used against Lehigh. There was a practice in receiving the kick-off, and the players who will do the kicking of various varieties practiced.

The student body is wildly enthusiastic. All week long there have been daily demonstrations. To-night there was a smoker, at which the building literally rocked with the vehemence of the cheers. The main speakers were James W. Fox, President of the Lafayette Athletic Association, and the Rev. Mr. Gesner of Easton. The team retired early and will leave for South Bethlehem, the special train starting at 1 o'clock to-morrow afternoon. They will proceed directly to the field and line up as follows: Furry, left end; Beyer, left tackle; Gulick, left guard; Luhr, centre; Kelly or Woodward, right guard; Wagenhurst, right tackle; Dick Diamond, right end; Jack Diamond, quarter back; Kennedy, left half back; Brown, right half back; Sheeren, full back.

Special to The New York Times.

SOUTH BETHLEHEM, Penn., Nov. 21.—The last practice is over, the finishing touches are put on and all is calm at Lehigh's football camp. With confidence ruling supreme, the eve of the big day on which Lehigh and Lafayette will battle for supremacy finds Lehigh in perfect physical condition, according to Resident Coach Keady and his staff of assistants. Only enough work was given the 'Varsity this afternoon, the scrubs having been dismissed for the season yesterday, to keep the men's sinews limbered up. For the first time, too, did the men have an inkling of who would start the game. They have been constantly kept on the anxious bench, but to-day Resident Coach Keady sprung a surprise by announcing that Captain Flick would start at right end in place of Sawtelle, the veteran. It was expected that Chenoweth, the 137-pound guard-at back, would start the game, and this proved true. But Cahall, the sure drop kicker, probably will alternate with Chenoweth during the game.

Fred Green, having regained his old-time form, will play left end, and the tackles will be Carleton, Eagles, McCarthy and Bailey. The sturdy guards, Grumback and Blance, will be found at their usual posts and Scruggs will occupy the centre position.

The pride of the Lehigh backfield, the "wrecking crew," Hoban and Keady, halt backs, and Crichton, full back, were never in better condition.

The hotels are to-night crowded almost to capacity by the advance guard of the 12,000 people who are expected to see the game. All are praying that the weather man will be good enough to hold off the impending rain until after the contest. Various functions were held in the dormitories, fraternities and in the homes of townspeople to-night, while considerably more than a side issue was the monster "smoker" held in the coliseum. Fully 1,500 people attended and enjoyed an athletic programme, with music interspersed, and then heard rattling good speeches by Coach Keady, his assistants, Pazzetti and Strauss, Professor Reiter and many old-time stars who have come back for the game.

The arrangements at the field for handling the greatest crowd that has ever attended a Lafayette and Lehigh contest are complete, and the gridiron is in good condition. Members of the State constabulary will aid the 70 policemen in handling the crowd.

Wesleyan Favorite Over Trinity.

Special to The New York Times.

MIDDLETOWN, Conn., Nov. 21.—Coach Hutchinson has developed three sets of Wesleyan ends for the game with Trinity to-morrow, two sets of players for each of the other line positions, and two sets of backs. Kenan, who is used so effectively as defensive tackle and offensive back, is in the game again, having recovered from the injury to his side. MacKenzie is helping Deetjen with the punting. Comparative scores give Wesleyan the advantage. Both have played Bowdoin, Wesleyan winning 13 to 7, and Trinity playing a scoreless tie. Wesleyan won from Rutgers, 20 to 9, while the New Brunswick team defeated Trinity 30 to 7. Trinity on the other hand made 5 more points against Amherst than Wesleyan did.

Big Game in the West.

CHICAGO, Nov. 21.—Two football squads practiced here to-day, Wisconsin's men going through a final drill for their contest with Chicago to-morrow, and Minnesota polishing off a few complicated plays to use against Illinois. Wisconsin coaches have devoted the week to strengthening their line. "Germany" Schultz, the former Michigan forward, has had active charge of the men in the attempts to frame a defense capable of stopping Pierce and Norgren. The substitution of Buck for Samp at tackle helped the badger forwards. Word comes from the midway that Quarter Back "Pete" Russell has been devoting extra time to practicing drop kicks for use in case Chicago is stopped by the Cardinal forwards.

HEAT WAVE AT CORNELL.

Football Players Avoid Arduous Work In High Temperature.

Special to The New York Times.

ITHACA, N. Y., Nov. 21.—Hot weather and late classes put a big crimp in Cornell football practice plans to-day, and as a result the men did very little work of an arduous nature. The coaches say that the heat wave has taken the life out of an already hard-worked eleven, and they have about come to the conclusion that the lightest sort of work will be best for the 'Varsity from now until the game on Franklin field next Thursday. The team now needs a rest and the players are waiting with great eagerness the coming trip to Atlantic City, which will start Monday night.

Instead of practice on the field the men went out for a long hike over the Ithaca hills late this afternoon. All but Barrett, Guyer and Mallory were in the party. Barrett was hurt again in yesterday's practice, it developed to-day. He slipped and fell heavily to the ground, injuring the same leg that was hurt in the Lafayette game. This latest accident probably means that Cornell's star quarter back will not dare take part in any more practice, and that he will enter the game against Pennsylvania in a poor physical condition.

Mallory, who was forced from yesterday's scrimmage with a bad blow on the head, showed up to-day with a bruised shoulder, and Guyer, the regular 'Varsity right tackle, came through with a twisted ankle which, however, will not keep him out of the Pennsylvania game. Barrett's punting is the biggest asset Cornell has, however, and the greatest uneasiness is caused by his continued absence from the line-up.

The Cornell team will watch the Cornell-Pennsylvania freshman game here to-morrow and practice will be abandoned for the day, the coaches said this evening. Vigorous walking exercises are on the programe for the next two days, and then the men will go to the seashore with the hard work practically over. Coach Sharpe says there will be no change in the line-up of the team, the centre position, about which there was some doubt, being decided in favor of Williams.

ARMY WORKS CAUTIOUSLY.

Cadets Take Slight Chances of Injuring Players in Practice.

Special to The New York Times.

WEST POINT, N. Y., Nov. 21.—On the eve of the football game scheduled for to-morrow with Springfield Training School, the Army men were given the lightest kind of work to-day. There was some semblance of a scrimmage, though, when the linemen were given a rather stiff defensive drill, but it was mostly of the "soft" variety. There was a lot of preliminary work with the fundamentals, which wound up with signal drill. During the latter some of the new inventions given the men yesterday were rehearsed, and the forward pass formations came in for considerable attention.

Hobbs, who is going to play to-morrow's game in Hodgson's place, was drilled specially in his kicking game, and showed up well. Hodgson's injury will preclude the possibility of his getting any more work this week. He was not seen on practice field, but Easton was ready to work to-day, but the coaches, not wanting to take any chances of injurics, feared to use him. He may get in for a while to-morrow. Benedict was used in the kicking game only. He, too, will be a doubtful starter to-morrow. Either O'Hare or Herrick, or Meacham will start against Springfield in Huston's guard position, but Meacham is likely the man. Benedict's place will go to Ford. The latter is fast developing into a smashing back field man, and his splendid punting of late makes him a valuable acquisition to the Army's kicking game, which has been weakened somewhat by Hodgson's absence.

Springfield is expected to show considerable strength to-morrow, and the Army will be satisfied to win by a low score. Coach Daly plans to give some of the hard-working second string men a chance to get in the game after the regulars have played sufficiently to keep them on edge.

Indians Off for Syracuse.

Special to The New York Times.

CARLISLE, Penn., Nov. 21.—The Carlisle Indian football team started on its final trip of the present season this morning, when it left for Cortland, N. Y., where the redskins will stay before to-morrow's game at Syracuse with Syracuse University. After the Syracuse game the Indians will go to some small town near Providence, R. I., not yet determined, where they will spend the days before Thanksgiving in light practice. They will play Brown at Providence on Thursday. The short drill this morning before leaving was enlivened by a unique form of limbering up exercise characteristic of Carlisle's great coach, who throughout the season invents amusing and appropriate oddities in physical training, which serve to relieve the tears of the harder drills. This morning Coach Warner ranged the whole squad along one end of the Indian gridiron, and had all of the players drop their bodies so that they rested on all rours, hands and toes. At a signal the redskins raced like quadrupeds down the field. The Indian youths had much fun out of the exercise, which had as its object limbering up and further development of ability to move rapidly and continuously while close to the ground.

Never in the history of football at the Carlisle Indian School haa the line-up remained so unchanged through the greater part of a football season. Surely never in the history of American football have eleven or twelve men stayed knit so closely through so many hard games without deterioration somewhere or serious injury.

SCHOOLBOYS SWIM FOR HONORS IN POOL

Commerce Team First in Four Events and Tie One with De Witt Clinton.

The High School of Commerce aquatic team yesterday defeated De Witt Clinton High School in a dual swimming meeting at the Sixtieth Street baths by the score of 34 to 19. Six events comprised the programme, in which the Commerce lads showed their superiority in four, and one—the fancy dive—resulted in a tie. Clinton's only victory came in the century swim, in which Davidow, its stellar performer, won.

Pettengill of Commerce and Cohn of Clinton fought tooth and nail in the 220-yard swim, with victory in sight for either boy at 200 yards. Pettengill, the ultimate winner, showed the strongest finish and won after a hard struggle by a margin of two yards.

In the plunge for distance Commerce easily had the better stayers, with the result that it furnished both first and second place winners. Loew covered 47 feet 3 inches and Sacks did 46 feet 3 inches. The summaries:

50-Yard Swim.—Won by Bazin, Commerce; Zilowitz, De Witt Clinton, second; Hamilton, Commerce, third. Time, 0:30.

100-Yard Swim.—Won by Davidow, De Witt Clinton; Smith, De Witt Clinton, second; Callahan, Commerce, third. Time, 1:05.

220-Yard Swim.—Won by Pettengill, Commerce; Cohn, De Witt Clinton, second; Wortman, Commerce, third. Time, 3:10 2-5.

16-Lap Relay.—Won by Commerce, team composed of Fulton, Merrick, Mauger, and Bazen; De Witt Clinton, team composed of Smith, Burton, Cohn, and Davidow, second. No time taken.

Plunge for Distance.—Won by Loew, Commerce, distance 47 feet 3 inches; Sacks, Commerce, distance 46 feet 9 inches, second; Gottschadt, De Witt Clinton, distance 41 feet, third.

Fancy Diving.—Liebner, De Witt Clinton, and Merrick, Commerce, tied for first place with four points; Colasuano, De Witt Clinton, third.

Columbia Has Star Plunger.

Columbia uncovered a promising distance plunger in the inter-class swimming meet which was held in the pool on Morningside Heights yesterday afternoon. The newcomer is A. A. Smith, a sophomore who reported for swimming only a fortnight ago, and yesterday was his first trial in competition. He surprised everybody, including the coaches, Dr. George Holm and Frank Kennedy, by plunging sixty-one feet, which is within the Columbia record. He had a handicap of one foot. The next best plunge was by R. L. Wensley, a member of the water polo team, who did fifty-three feet. Because of conflicts with classes, some of the events had to be set over until next week. The summaries:

50-Yard Dash.—Won by J. C. Lee, '15; C. E. Elchols, extension, second; C. A. Stern, '16, third. Time, 0:31 1-5.

Plunge for Distance.—Won by A. A. Smith, '16, (1 foot,) with a plunge of 61 feet; tie for second place between R. L. Wensley, '16, (8 feet,) and J. Chercand, '16, (15 feet,) with 53 feet and 48 feet, respectively. S. P. Goldberg, '17, (5 feet,) third, with 55 feet.

220-Yard Dash.—First semi-final won by H. Cleveland; second semi-final won by P. Agramonte.

Navy's Last Game at Home.

Special to The New York Times.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Nov. 21.—Friends of the Naval Academy team will have a final chance to-morrow to see in action the eleven that will start the game against the Army team in New York on Nov. 29. It is the intention of the coaches to begin the game against New York University with this arrangement, but it will be kept in only long enough for the players to get shaken together, and they will then give way to the scrubs and second-string men. There is no doubt here, however, of the ability of the team to roll up a large score against the New Yorkers, who have not succeeded in scoring against an opponent this season.

The line-up will be: Left end, Ingram; left tackle, Ralston; left guard, Howe; centre, Perry; right guard, Brown; right end, Capt. Gilchrist; quarter back, Nicholls; left half back, McReavy; right half back, Fedling; full back, Harrison.

The order governing the movements of the football party and the balance of the Midshipmen was issued to-day. The football party, under Lieut. Commander Roger Williams, will leave Annapolis on Thursday afternoon and depart from New York on the return trip on Saturday afternoon. A battalion of Midshipmen will go by the Pennsylvania Railroad and another by the B. & O. They will leave Annapolis at 6:20 and 6:30, respectively, arriving in New York about 1 o'clock in the afternoon of the game. The Midshipmen will be marched immediately to the Polo Grounds, and will start for Annapolis immediately after the conclusion of the game. This is a part of the routine that is not relished by the Midshipmen. They will take their meals on the train or ferryboat.

Penn Plays Its Best Football.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 21.—The final scrimmage practice of the season for the University of Pennsylvania football eleven was held on Franklin Field this afternoon, and the 'Varsity heralded the event by playing the best football of the week. Three touchdowns were scored against the scrubs, who disbanded for the season at the close of the afternoon's workout. All three touchdowns were made by Marshall, the little full back who is taking Minds's place. It is likely that he will start at this position in the Cornell game, as practically all hope of having Minds in condition for the last gridiron contest of his college career has been given up by the coaches. To-morrow the coaches will send the team through a short signal practice, and on Monday the 'Varsity squad, consisting of twenty-eight men, will go to the Whitemarsh Country Club, just outside of the city, where the men will remain until Thanksgiving Day.

BENSONHURST CLUB GROWS

Over 300 Members Taken Into Membership by Yachtsmen.

At the annual meeting of the Bensonhurst Yacht Club, held at the clubhouse, foot of Bay Parkway, Brooklyn, the following officers were elected for 1914: Commodore—George R. Le Sauvage; Vice Commodore—Richard W. Rummell; Rear Commodore—Bruce Stickles; Secretary—Francis Kaley; Treasurer—Clarence H. Clayton; Board of Directors (for two years)—George D. Vail, J. H. Walters, and H. A. Robbins. Nominating Committee—Fred C. Buys, H. V. Wagoner, William L. Kettner, John J. Van Belt, J. C. Emmitt, Edward T. Tallaferro.

During this year the club membership has increased from 65 to 403, and Commodore Le Sauvage, elected for his fifth successive term, prophesied that the 1914 season would be the greatest in the club's history. Visiting yachts from all parts of the world will be stationed in the Lower Bay next Summer during the international yacht races, and it is also expected that the club will be one of the prime movers in the promotion of a new class of yachts now under serious consideration by the Gravesend Bay Yachting Association.

The Treasurer's report showed the club in good financial condition, and the new fee issue for improvements to the clubhouse and surroundings was subscribed to by many of the members at the meeting.

Bernard J. Morse, Chairman of the Land Sports Committee, announced that a busy programme had been arranged for trap shooting, tennis, bowling, billiards, and pool. The club bowling team recently joined the Interclub Bowling League of Brooklyn. About 200 members attended the meeting.

Equal Shares in Post-Season Games.

CHICAGO, Nov. 21.—The National Baseball Commission has decided that hereafter all players eligible to participate in post-season contests under the control of the commission, whether world's or any other series, will receive equal shares of the money awarded to their teams. This information was made public here yesterday by John Evers, manager of the Chicago Cubs. According to Evers, this action was taken by the commission when complaint was filed by three pitchers—Jim Vaughn, Earl Moore, and Eddie Stack—over the division of the Cubs' money after the Cub-White Sox series here this Fall. These three pitchers received only half a share each. The commission, it was stated, voted to take action on the complaints, but decided that in the future all participating players will be given equal shares, whether they have been with their team a full season or not.

Spring Plans of the Phillies.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 21.—William F. Baker, President of the Philadelphia National League Baseball Club, announced to-day that the Phillies would train next year at Wilmington, N. C. The advance guard of the club will leave this city for practice Feb. 24, and the entire team will remain at Wilmington until March 23, with the players will start home. It is also the intention of the management to have the team play

GOV. GLYNN'S OPPORTUNITY.

Gov. GLYNN'S appeal to the members of the Chamber of Commerce to aid him in the reorganization of the Government of the State was received with hearty approval by those to whom it was addressed, and will undoubtedly be responded to in the same spirit in due time when the plans of the Governor have taken definite shape. Much can be accomplished by the adoption of real business methods; waste can be prevented; duplicate work and expenditure can be avoided; the Legislature can be furnished with full and exact information as to the departments for which appropriations are made. Probably, however, the most useful part of the work that could be done by such a commission as the Governor proposes would be to expose to the people of the State the confusion that so largely reigns in the State administration. If this exposure leads, as it may and should, to a change in the Constitution and the abolition of half a dozen elective offices or their change to appointive, something like responsibility can be enforced and true business principles as well as methods can be applied.

The task is not going to be simple or easy, and the gentlemen of the Chamber of Commerce, as well as the Governor, who enlist for its performance must be prepared to give to it a lot of hard work, to meet organized open and secret opposition to it, and to push it patiently and persistently in face of much opposition and of the agencies for defamation which the interested parties will command. Confusion is the rich soil in which "graft," more or less honest, grows, and irresponsibility is the fertilizer by which the baleful harvest is most readily promoted. It is confusion and irresponsibility that the Governor and those he may call in will have to attack and, if they can, destroy before they can hope to get a really efficient, clean, and decent administration. Something can be done by the reorganization of the various departments, but not a great deal. More, as we have intimated, can be done by a complete and authoritative setting forth of present miserable conditions with a clear statement of the obvious remedies.

Toward this the Governor can work with a good deal of effect in the immediate field open to him in the prosecutions now in the hands of Attorney General CARMODY, Mr. OSBORNE, and District Attorney WHITMAN. Here, obviously, is the chance for the most effective possible exposure of the evils that prevail in the State service. The task undertaken by these gentlemen is an intricate one, with many pitfalls and obstacles. The contractors and politicians who are in danger will make the most of these, and it is evident that they will be aided by the advice of the most capable, experienced, and influential counsel that the bar of the State can provide. It will require not only a strong common purpose pursued with entire good faith, but also the greatest care at every step.

The two elements in the situation which will be made use of to the utmost by those who are in peril are a possible conflict of jurisdiction arising from the fact that the offenses have been committed in various counties, and the risk of witnesses in one set of prosecutions securing immunity in the other. These elements could probably have been dealt with to greater advantage had one man been put in charge of the whole work. That not having been done, a peculiar obligation for impartial and close scrutiny of all that is undertaken will fall on the Governor. It is not easy to overestimate the difficulty and complexity of the task that the Governor has undertaken, for the result of which he will chiefly be responsible, and for the success of which he may justly receive the chief credit. It is the indispensable condition precedent to the accomplishment of the wider task in which he invites the business men of the State to join.

THE TILDEN DEMOCRATIC CLUB.

The letter to THE TIMES from Mr. RICHARD E. WELDON, printed elsewhere, sets forth the objects of the Samuel J. Tilden Democratic Club as a part of the movement to overthrow Tammany Hall. Mr. WELDON is an experienced leader; he has been a member of Tammany Hall, and he knows intimately the methods which it uses to inflict bad government upon a people overburdened with electoral machinery. He says wisely that Tammany Hall must not be fought "in its own way," for that is a bad way.

To fight Tammany in its own way would be to build up a machine like Tammany's. That requires the assiduous services of professional politicians. Such a machine must be self-supporting, and a large number of politicians must use it to get their bread and butter. Because of the professional character of its workers it would become, if successful, no better than Tammany.

But it would not be successful. Tammany already represents the acme of that kind of political development. Any other machine must seem amateurish as compared with the organization of the captains of tens and of fifties within the Wigwam. But if an amateur organization imbued with the earnest spirit of revolt and reform will dedicate itself to abolishing the multitude of elective offices on which Tammany lives and thrives, it will make the existence, or non-existence, of that body of plunderers a matter of supreme indifference.

This lesson should be learned by the various anti-Tammany associations that are now starting. It is well that many of them should be formed at this time. They should eventually get together and make common head against their foe.

THE TAXICAB ORDINANCE.

The Appellate Division of the Supreme Court has upheld the opinion of Justice SEABURY that the ordinance passed by the Aldermen last Spring regulating the fares of taxicabs in this city is constitutional. The case may now be carried to the State Court of Appeals, but if the taxicab owners and hotel keepers who have been opposing the enforcement of a law which was adopted in the interest of all the people are well-advised, they will accept the decision and save themselves needless expense. There is no doubt whatever that if any provisions of the law prove after trial to work injustice to the owners of the taxicabs, any needful amendment can be made without great trouble. There is no public disposition to treat the taxicab people unfairly. But Justice SEABURY'S long, careful, and admirably clear review of every detail of the law in his opinion upholding it, was convincing. The rates of fare prescribed are not unjust, and there is no doubt that the companies will have much more business when those rates are enforced.

New York has been waiting many years for a well-regulated cab system with a moderate schedule of charges. We do not look for the establishment here, especially on the narrow Island of Manhattan, of rates as low as those which prevail in London and Paris. But the fares we have been compelled to pay have been exorbitant, and the cab system has been accompanied by many extortions and discriminations in favor of certain cab owners which have been detrimental to the public interest. The new law places the whole business of public cabs and hacks on a sound and equitable basis. It provides for good service at fair rates, and the sooner it can be put in complete operation the better it will be for the people who hire cabs and those who own them.

The dissenting opinions of Justice SCOTT in regard to the taxicab fares, and of both that Justice and Presiding Justice INGRAHAM in regard to the right of hotels to have special taxicab privileges, are quite likely to be made the basis of a further appeal. A wiser course, however, as we have said, would be to accept the law as it stands and give it a fair trial. We are quite confident that both the cab owners and the hotel men would, in the end, find it satisfactory.

UNTAXING FOOD.

The Canadian Liberal reproduces a remark attributed to Premier BORDEN to the effect that he regretted the defeat of reciprocity with the United States. Other Canadian journals report that he will return from his visit of recuperation at the Virginia Hot Springs with an understanding as to a remedy for his disappointment. Nothing prevents but Canadian politics. On this side the border there is a difference of opinion whether or not our new tariff repealed our offer to Canada. If so, the offer might be renewed in the present state of opinion regarding the reduction of tariff taxation, especially on food. But how could the Canadian Premier hope to find party support in Canada? Not among his own followers, if an opinion may be formed from the expressions of the organs of his party. Says The Montreal Gazette: "Protection has enabled us to weather many a storm, and to impair it now when another storm seems to be blowing up all over the world would be to the last degree foolish."

But this is mere partisanship. All over the Dominion it is recognized that the Conservative arguments against reciprocity with the United States have been nullified by the results of the enactment of our half of the bargain without receipt of the consideration which was promised by Canada. The same journals which condemned reciprocity as treason to the empire now exult over the stimulus to trade across the border. That is the natural course of trade up and down the north and south valleys, and not across the mountain grades in the same direction. This allows plenty to temper scarcity over distances of a few miles as though there were no boundary, instead of compelling the East and West to interchange products over continental distances. We are getting from Canada cattle, milk, cream, sheep, hogs to such an extent that Canadian consumers have to buy in competition with us, and cost of living rises more for them than it falls for us, because they are few and we are many. This lights a fire behind the Premier. Canadians are demanding for themselves what we enjoy, and his position is as difficult as would be that of any politicians among us who should propose to re-enact the food taxes repealed by the tariff. Reciprocity now would carry Canada with a hurrah, whoever proposed it. But what is necessary is the enactment of the Canadian half of the bargain, and that cannot be done by the present Government without complete stultification. Even since they defeated reciprocity they have exulted that they gained access to our markets for nothing. Now it is seen that the price they are paying is too great a burden for their electorate to bear. Some Canadian journals explicitly declare "the Government should and probably will promptly adopt the Liberal platform" on the subject.

There are precedents for stealing the clothes of the Opposition, but it is doubtful whether they would apply in the present condition of Canadian politics. The Liberals would raise a terrible outcry over the theft of their platform, which it has become necessary to steal in broad daylight with watchmen on guard. The Premier is a welcome guest among us, and no one wishes any personal reverse for him. But politically he has not proved a friend of either country, nor of the Motherland, nor even of himself. He has a difficult task before him upon his return, and it may be hoped that he will have regained the strength to do himself justice.

NOT A QUESTION OF OIL.

The French newspaper which declares that the present Mexican situation is based entirely on a striving over oil interests is just a few days behind the times. Lord COWDRAY'S prompt and satisfactory denial of the rumors that he and his oil company had any sort of agreement with the Government of HUERTA was published some days ago.

The idea that HUERTA represents the Cientificos or any other Mexican group, or anything whatever except himself, has no sound foundation. All business interests in Mexico, oil, silver, fruit, and lumber, must suffer from the embargo placed on trade by the continued civil warfare.

But the Mexican trouble lies deeper than the bottom of any oil well in Vera Cruz or Tamaulipas, and it involves much more serious questions than those relating to property rights, questions which the sober-minded Mexican people must settle for themselves if they would uphold the standing of their country as a power to be reckoned with in the eyes of the world.

FARMERS' SELF-HELP.

At the recent conference at the City Club to consider the problem of reducing the cost of living a good deal was said about the work of providing ampler credit for farmers through State banks. That is a plan that has advantages accompanied by risks and drawbacks. The greatest of these is the tendency which has been developed in some countries to weaken the sense of responsibility on the part of the farmers through dependence on State aid.

Mr. LEONARD G. ROBINSON, head of the organization which administers the Baron de Hirsch Fund, gave an outline of the system of co-operative credit unions among farmers which that organization has brought into existence. There are seventeen of these in three States, and they show a safe profit on their investment, a steady increase of loans, and no losses from borrowers. It is practically the same system that has borne such excellent fruit in Ireland under the original guidance of Sir HORACE PLUNKETT. The basis of it is that the members of the Associations have an immediate and continued interest in the soundness of the loans, in their devotion to ends likely really to be useful and profitable, and in their prompt payment when due in order that the principal can be employed for like ends for the benefit of new borrowers. It is the principle of mutual help checked by direct individual interest and free from the insidious tendency of outside aid, especially that of the State.

UNSEASONABLE WEATHER.

We feel safe in bidding adieu to the protracted Indian Summer. A good thing in its way is this customary spell of mild weather with hazy atmosphere, but the almanac time for Indian Summer, or St. Martin's Summer, as the French call it, is about St. Martin's Day, Nov. 11, and this Autumn it has been entirely too summery and too protracted and not at all conducive to good health. But we are quite confident that, having outstayed its welcome, it is about to depart, and that a spell of wet weather will be followed by clearer skies and temperatures better suited to Thanksgiving. Snow at Thanksgiving is quite seasonable, as the late November feast is really a Winter holiday, and although we can get along comfortably in this city with very little snow, a small fall would be welcome and reassuring. We had a perniciously warm October in these parts, though, if memory serves, we endured it without grumbling, and Summer heat in November is serviceable chiefly to the rapid propagation of malevolent microbes, so that unless we can have a quick supply of crisp, cool, and invigorating weather, we shall all be feeling "grippy."

So good-bye, Indian Summer, if you must go, and better luck to you and your victims another year. Time has been when songs have been sung in your favor, but this year you happened along too early and stayed too late.

CONTROL OF MAIL WAGONS.

That peculiar disease known as officialism or institutionalism afflicts Mr. JOSEPH STEWART, Second Assistant Postmaster General, as indicated by his argument before the Aldermen yesterday that pedestrians have no rights which drivers of motor cars bearing the United States mails need respect.

One of the speeding trucks had just run over and killed a child. That was the seventh person killed by automobile mail wagons since Sept. 1; three more had been injured. Twelve have been killed and twelve injured by these vehicles since the first of the year. By a foolish exemption in the ordinance, the mail wagon drivers are not required to obey the traffic rules drawn to guard the lives of the public. Mr. STEWART'S only argument against repealing the exemption is that the mail schedules, as at present arranged, would be broken into if the postal drivers were required to be careful.

Change the schedules. There is nothing sacred about them. They need not be balanced for an instant against human lives. If Mr. STEWART still feels that the trains should be met according to the present schedules why not increase the number of trucks and start them out earlier? His opposition is stupid, as it is reckless, and in this case it will serve, we think, merely to make him the object of merited indignation.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

It Demands, They Say, the Impossible.

About the merits of the bill relating to the rights and employment of seamen which has passed the Senate and is now before the House Committee of Merchant Marine and Fisheries, opinions differ widely. Vehemently in favor of it are the representatives of the Seamen's Union, and presumably all the members of that body.

They say that it will put an end to conditions that are more like slavery than those to be found in any other industry, since any other workingman can quit his job when he pleases, and suffer for breaking such contracts as he may have made only to the extent of his attachable property, and not at all if he hasn't any. The sailor, on the contrary, can now be seized and put back on the ship he deserts, and made to work there by the methods well known to "bucko" mates.

Shipowners, on the other hand, who are engaged in international traffic insist that the conduct of their business in American ports will be made unduly difficult if the bill passes, and apprehensions are especially keen among the owners of vessels which, while never making long voyages, yet are "seagoing" for a part of their short journeys. The provision that troubles them is not that relating to desertions, but one ordering them to carry enough lifeboats to hold everybody on board, crew as well as passengers, in case of need, and to employ at least two experienced seamen for every lifeboat.

Companies like that which runs its steamers between this city and Sandy Hook declare that to enforce such requirements against them would not be merely a useless hardship—it would force them to abandon the line. The Asbury Park, they say, would have to carry 120 lifeboats and 240 sailors, the Sandy Hook 115 lifeboats and 230 sailors, and the Monmouth 105 lifeboats and 210 sailors. This, as regards the lifeboats, they insist is a physical impossibility, and as regards the sailors a wild absurdity, and they would stop the service rather than to attempt meeting requirements so onerous.

The pending measure is fathered by Senator LA FOLLETTE, but he confesses that all he knows about navigation is what has been told him by ANDREW FURUSETH of the Seamen's Union, an able and energetic man who has been fighting for years to better the lot of sailors. That sufficiently explains the quality of the bill.

Magnificent, But Is It Business?

Very and variously interesting is the tale of the women over in Flushing who, convinced that the prices charged by the retail coal dealers were too high, banded together under the leadership of Mrs. BRYSON BOURROUGHS, whose vocation is the making of statues, and proceeded to eliminate the middlemen whom they considered extortionate. This they accomplished by ordering for themselves from Pennsylvania a whole bargeload of such coal as they wanted, docking it in Flushing, and then having it distributed in quantities to suit each of the women engaged in the transaction.

According to the report made by the Secretary of their organization, though the local dealers put in their way such obstacles as ingenuity and ill-will could devise, the cost of the coal after it had reached the destined cellars was only $6 a ton. As the ruling price in Flushing is now $7.25, the enterprising ladies count the saving on each ton at $1.25, and congratulate themselves on having cut down the cost of living to that extent.

So they have, doubtless, and their method is one capable of great extension in many ways. That the $1.25 per ton was clear saving, however, is open to question.

As so often happens in such cases, the bookkeeping out of which this pleasing figure appears omits several important factors which real and continuous business is compelled to consider. The account rendered, it can confidently be assumed, ignored the fact that somebody had done a lot of work and assumed a lot of pecuniary responsibility and risk, and for this had received no remuneration except the satisfaction that follows successful achievement.

That is something, of course, but it is not "business," and it does not support a family or increase bank balances. It will do for once, or even for several times, but if the Flushing women are to continue their co-operative buying, they will have to pay for services rendered. In other words, the middleman—or middlewoman—will reappear, and the economy effected will be large or small, according to their agent's efficiency and the extent of the limitations that can be placed on his or her desires.

Theoretically, the scheme is good. More than that, it works well on a large scale in several foreign countries, and it has not always, though usually, proved a failure here. Against it is the disinclination of Americans to take trouble in the making of their purchases and in their general inclination to pay people well for taking it for them.

Uniform Protection Demanded.

For making a noise like a real reformer, one can safely commend JAMES H. WALLIS of Idaho, who is a State and Federal Inspector of Foods and Drugs when he is at home, and has come East as the President of an association with an almost endless name and the large purpose of protecting the public from those poisoners, adulterators, and humbuggers who are engaged in the business of providing said public with something to eat when it is hungry and something to take when it is ill.

Mr. WALLIS says, and he has proved, out in Idaho, that not a little in this commendable way can be done with the law as it is, provided the doer really tries and serves general interests without a too tender regard for those that are private. But Mr. WALLIS is not content with the law as it is. He wants it standardized for the several States and made to accord with the Federal law—after the latter has been considerably improved. He is especially desirous that the deceptive "guarantee" which now ornaments so many packages of food and drugs be made significant instead of meaningless.

These are excellent suggestions. It is, of course, absurd that articles banned in interstate commerce should be freely salable when they do not pass State lines, and the only reason that the absurdity exists is that dishonest or ignorant manufacturers of foods and drugs still have enough influence in many parts of the country to prevent the taking against them of effective measures.

PHILIPPINE INDEPENDENCE.

Teacher Warns That Natives Are Not Ready for It.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

THE TIMES sounded a very timely warning in its editorial comment recently on the present policy of the Administration toward the Filipinos. As one who has lived in the Philippines for almost ten years, and who as teacher came in intimate contact with all classes of Filipinos, I would hate to see the splendid work of thousands of Americans who have served their country well there brought to nought for political purposes.

Take Dr. Heiser, for example, who probably by this time has been relieved of his position as Director of Health. His success in the islands in improving health conditions is not challenged. But aside from his success what is the personal character of the man whom it is sought to oust? Let one illustration suffice; many more could be cited. As Mr. Worcester correctly says, "Dr. Heiser segregated the lepers." To the average reader this may sound commendable; but I know, and hundreds of Americans know, that Dr. Heiser on his leper collecting trips—when he could not get Filipinos for love or money to carry their own people to the waiting boat—took them up in his arms, their poor bodies covered with running sores, and carried them to the boat, and then often fell swooning on deck overcome with nausea. But such services count for nothing, when a political appointment must be made.

Give the Filipinos independence, but only after the majority of the seven million Filipino Christians have learned to prefer order to disorder, industry to laziness, peace to war, and when it has been ingrained into their character that in a democracy the majority rules and that the minority cannot resort to force of arms to settle its rights or grievances.

Eight hundred American teachers for the past fifteen years have tried to teach these lessons to Filipinos. The old people cannot understand these principles; to them a strong army is the proper assurance of peace. The younger folks now in school have only partly learned these lessons. Their children probably will learn completely—if American guidance is continued—that rule in a democracy rests on the will of the people and not on the sword. When this is accomplished, give the Filipinos independence. T. M.

Discoverer of Elk Lake.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I regret to notice in THE TIMES an announcement of the death of the Rev. Joseph A. Gilfillan, (not "Gilfillas.") who in 1881 (not 1880) made a trip to Elk Lake, the source of the Mississippi. His visit is only memorable because he held the first religious service at the source of the great river.

The fact is thoroughly established that the first white man to discover and describe Elk Lake was Julius Chambers, who reached it on June 9, 1872, when a very young man. He was the first man since the Frenchman Nicollet (1836) to visit the Itasca region. He made a thorough circumnavigation of Itasca, which Schoolcraft (1832) had declared to be the "true head," and had named by eliminating a syllable from each of the Latin nouns "ver-i-tas ca-put," and at the eastern side of the southwestern arm of Itasca found a small stream flowing into the lake. Following it over fallen trees for a quarter of a mile, he came to the lake now known as Elk, a pretty body of water, nearly a mile across.

Overcoat Thieves in Library.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I went to warn other people by the very unpleasant experience I have just had in the reading room of the main Public Library at Forty-second Street. I left my hat, overcoat, and umbrella together on a table while I went to one of the wall cases to look at a dictionary, being gone from my seat about ten minutes. When I came back only my hat and umbrella remained. The thing was done so adroitly that a man sitting just across the table noticed nothing, although my hat and some papers must have been moved to get the coat away.

The only remedy it appears would have been to have checked everything at the door. I was told that several overcoats disappear from the reading room every week in spite of the library's detectives.

Natural History Museum Dark.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Relative to the poor light in the Museum of Natural History, a few weeks ago I was trying to study the bird groups. At the side of each case was a key to the group with a full description of it, but it was nearly as dark as it could be and absolutely impossible to read the chart. I was in the same condition as your other correspondent, inasmuch as I had neglected to provide myself with a pocket electric lamp. The suggestion is a good one, but my suggestion would be for the Museum to spend less on paleontological expeditions and a little more for electric current.

FEWER LYNCHINGS.

Dr. Washington Analyzes Typical Cases of Mob Law.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

At the end of six months of the present year there had been 24 cases of lynchings. At the end of ten months (Nov. 1) there had been 45 lynchings, a reduction of 4, as compared with the same period for 1912. Within the past four months, July, August, September, and October, since I last called attention to the subject, there have been 21 lynchings, making a total, as I have said, of 45 lynchings for ten months. Of this number only 7 individuals, or 1.5 per cent., were charged with rape.

It is worth while, I think, to note a few typical cases for which human life was taken by a mob:

July 10—A negro near Blountsville, Fla., charged with being lawless and assisting a criminal to escape.

July 27—A negro at Dunbar, Ga., supposed to be a burglar, charged with shooting proprietor of a store.

Also in July, two colored farmers were lynched near Germantown, Ky. No motive was assigned for the lynching. The Commercial Appeal, the leading white newspaper of Tennessee, in commenting upon the lynching, said: "Two apparently inoffensive negroes, good farm hands, real wealth producers, were assassinated." The Commercial Appeal further stated: "As far as any one knows, they were quiet, orderly country people."

Aug. 18—The Sheriff at Spartanburg, S. C., in spite of the fact that dynamite was used, prevented a mob from lynching a negro accused of assaulting a white woman; he was tried later before a white jury and found not guilty.

Aug. 23—A half-witted negro near Birmingham, Ala., for frightening women and children.

Aug. 25—A negro accused of murder at Greeoville, Ga. A few days later another negro was arrested and confessed. An innocent man had been lynched.

Aug. 27—A negro at Jennings, La., for striking an Italian merchant who had swept dirt on the negro's shoes as he was passing the store.

Sept. 20—A negro at Louisville, Miss., because he frightened a white woman in her home by his strange actions.

Sept. 21—At Franklin, Texas, a negro for killing two white men and wounding a third.

Sept. 25—At Marks, Miss., a negro accused of attempted rape. The opinion of the mob was divided on his guilt or innocence; a mass meeting held later condemned the lynching.

Sept. 26—A negro at Litchfield, Ky., accused of rape.

Oct. 22—At Monroe, La., a negro for making insulting remarks to a white woman.

In ten months, as stated above, 45 persons have been put to death by mob law. A reduction of the number of lynchings by four, though small, means something in the way of a higher civilization. BOOKER T. WASHINGTON.

SHOW WEBSTER COLLECTION

Japanese and Chinese Art Objects at the Anderson Galleries.

The John H. Webster collection of Japanese and Chinese objects of art in crystal, jade, porcelain, bronze, etc., is placed on public view to-day at the Anderson Galleries, prior to its sale by auction on the afternoons and evenings of Dec. 4 and 5 and the afternoon of Dec. 6.

The jades and lacquers form the most important divisions of the collection, from the standpoint of connoisseurship. The catalogue quotes the Chinese, saying: "The magic powers of heaven and earth are ever combining to form perfect results. So the pure essences of hill and water become solidified into precious jade," and we are reminded that the Chinese considered it the worthiest material in which to carve the sacred symbols. It was never ornamented except with carving, and the remarkable examples in the present collection indicate the extent to which the Chinese artists were willing to spend skill and labor in fretting the beautiful smooth surface.

There is a white jade vase in a shape characteristic of ancient bronzes, supported by a Chinese sage on one side and a stork on the other, and decorated with bands of sharply finished carving. There is an incense burner hexagonal in shape, each side carved with a Chinese poem about the delicacy of the senses, and there is an ink rest with decoration of conventional dragon and peonies pierced in double carving, with individual carving on either side, and there are many other pieces of a value corresponding to the difficulty of the task undertaken by the artist, but in sheer beauty they are far surpassed by the lovely plain bowl resting on a base of lotus petals, and by the circular plaque of even color and texture from the Heber Bishop collection.

Among the porcelains the finest examples are the single color pieces. One case in particular presents a dignified appearance with vases of harmonious color and form, severely simple in line and rich in tone. The most brilliant note of color in this case is given by a ginger jar of the Yung Ching period, with a brilliant peacock blue glaze of extraordinary depth of tone, surmounted by cover of carved black wood. This magnificent vase is flanked on the right by a splendid specimen of the so-called "stone ware" of the Ming period in deep purplish blue that has the value of black, and on the left by a Yung Ching vase of an equally deep violet, each coming from the Charles A. Dana collection.

The finest of the white paste porcelains is an imperial oviform vase in a rice grain pattern incised on the purest quality of cream white glaze of the Kang Hsi period, as beautiful in form as in execution, one of the most perfect products of the potter's art.

When one comes under the spell of these specimens, so restrained in style and austere in form, of colors that ring in harmony like the chiming of deep-toned bells, it is impossible to turn easily to the objects of curiosity and humor, such as the beautifully modeled Kang Wu figure debased by the addition of whiskers of real hair, and other strange aberrations of taste to which this race at once so childlike and so logical has ever been a prey.

Equally when one comes to the elaborately carved rock crystals the Western mind is repelled by the torturing of this purest of materials. Even the finest carvings seem out of place, although in such pieces as the pilgrim bottles carved in low relief, executed with marvelous skill, the beauty of the workmanship is an almost adequate excuse for its existence. Some of the rose quartz vases are unusually happy in design, the patterns adapting themselves to the forms without interrupting the larger outlines and planes. It is by such selection as much as by the rarity and technical excellence of his objects that a collector is finally judged. The proportion of things that communicate aesthetic pleasure in his collection is what causes it to make a lasting impression on the mind of the observer.

MET IN ITS OWN WAY

Tammany Cannot Be Destroyed by New Organizations.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The position of the Samuel J. Tilden Democratic Club in the campaign against Tammany Hall seems to be slightly misunderstood. Ours is a local organization. We are trying to make it strong so that when called upon as part of a general movement we can supply effective support. For information only at this time we are conferring with other independent Democratic organizations to learn their views, plans, and purposes so that we may be prepared to cooperate with them intelligently and effectively at the proper time.

The movement against Tammany Hall is enthusiastic and determined. Under wise leadership it will ultimately accomplish its purpose. We understand the task that is before us. Some visionaries believe Tammany Hall was destroyed as the result of the recent election. They regard the most serious setback in its history as meaning utter destruction. In this they are mistaken.

But it should be remembered that we have now an official primary ballot. The days of the old "cannon" ballot have passed. The district organizations of Tammany Hall are weaker now than has been the case in a great many years. They haven't an average of twenty-five intelligent, effective workers in the Tammany Hall district organizations. I challenge a denial of this statement. While it would be very unwise to underrate the task of overthrowing Tammany Hall, it would be a greater mistake to overrate its strength.

It has been said that Tammany Hall must be fought "in its own way." That won't do. "Its own way" is a bad way. We don't want any more of Murphy or of his kind. No advance will have been made if Murphy is removed and the system continued. A better class of district leaders must be elected. We want no more of the humiliating truckling, with hat in hand, to the power of a leader that has characterized the relations of district leaders with Murphy.

The public is demanding a real direct primary law, and is insisting that consideration be given to the principles represented by the short ballot and the Massachusetts form of ballot. Has anybody heard of an expression of opinion from Tammany Hall district leaders or from their organizations on these subjects? Of course not. These are governmental principles embodying progress and reform. Tammany Hall never even considers such matters because of any intrinsic merit they may possess. If they find a place of favor in public opinion Tammany Hall might support one or both in emasculated form, as in the case of direct primaries, but never if the interests of the "organization" are adversely affected. The short ballot is sound in principle. Our members, so far as it has been discussed, seem to favor it heartily. It and other reforms will be the subject of free and independent discussion at our meetings. We have differences of opinion, of course, but there is opportunity always for candid, untrammeled expression of opinion at all times, and our meetings are not restricted to a routine of purely perfunctory "organization" business such as characterizes Tammany Hall district meetings.

The independent movement with which we are identified has force and vitality behind it. It has the might of right. It lacks organization as yet. That will come in good time and soon. Excellent men have been mentioned as available material from which the leader of this movement will be drawn. From their ranks will be selected one who will be honest, courageous, efficient, and resourceful. We will adopt the policy of President Wilson as applied in New Jersey to corrupt political conditions, and by plain, forceful literature and candid, direct speech bring the people to the support of our honest principles. We will give Tammany Hall a chance to show how it stands with the people in a real fight.

TO DEBATE HETCH HETCHY.

Ex-Mayor Phelan Offers to Hire a Hall and Meet Mr. Johnson and Mr. McFarland.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I have read in THE TIMES comments on the application of the City of San Francisco to Congress for the use of one-half of 1 per cent. of the Yosemite National Park, (fifty miles remote fro mthe Yosemite Valley, in the Valley of Hetch Hetchy,) contributed by President McFarland of the American Civic Federation, Robert Underwood Johnson, and others.

The Congressional bill has received the unanimous approval of both the House Committee and the Senate Committee, after patient and exhaustive hearings, and will be voted on Dec. 6 next by the Senate of the United States.

In view of the fact that a great many sincere people desire to be informed on the merits of the controversy, I desire, on the part of San Francisco, to invite the gentlemen named to a friendly debate in some public hall in the City of New York, the expenses of which I will gladly defray, at any convenient time next week. This is due not only to the people concerned but to the journalists of the country who, I claim, have been, by an extensive propaganda, grossly misinformed.

SERVANT'S REFERENCES.

Housewives Should Co-operate to Make Them of Real Value.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It is most fervently to be hoped that Marion Harland's letter on the subject of "Reckless Housewives" will be taken to heart by American women. A couple of weeks ago I spent two mornings in an employment office trying to accomplish work that should have occupied but a few hours. Why? Because I was so old-fashioned as to demand a written reference for the servant I was to engage.

In spite of the assurances of the proprietor that he "knew all about the girl," and that "ladies did not give references any more," I stuck to my point and dismissed applicant after applicant whose faces changed at the mention of their reference. There is too much truth in the statement that ladies do not give references any more. Why don't they? Simply because too many employers are willing to risk the character of a servant rather than to insist on seeing a reference or of looking it up after reading it.

Thirty, or even fewer, years ago, no housewife was content with less than a personal interview with the former employer of a servant! Now a hurried word at the telephone with a stranger, of whose own character and mode of living we know nothing, suffices. Will women ever learn to take concerted action in matters that would result in so much mutal benefit? EDITH HARMAN BROWN.

WOMEN PASS MEN IN Y.M.C.A. CAMPAIGN

Mrs. Gould's Team Announces Gifts of $52,744 Toward the $4,000,000 Building Fund.

TOTAL NOW IS $2,949,983

Vice Mayor of Tokio Says Activity of Women Workers in Seeking Contributions is an Example for Japan.

Mrs. E. R. L. Gould, Captain of Team 21 of the Women's Committee, won over all the other Captains, both men and women, yesterday, when she announced gifts of $52,744 at the noonday luncheon given in the headquarters, at 25 Broad Street, of the Young Men's and Young Women's Christian Associations' campaign to obtain a $4,000,000 building fund by Nov. 24. A contribution of $50,000 from J. P. Morgan & Co., through her team, accounted for Mrs. Gould's success. Miss Dorothy Perkins, leader of Team 25, announced the second largest collection, with $13,200, $10,000 of which was the gift of Stevena C. Clark. For the first time in the campaign the Executive Committee, headed by George W. Perkins, as Chairman, took the booby prize, with contributions of only $100.

Following the record day of the campaign, when nearly $200,000 was announced, the workers were stimulated still further yesterday by gifts of $100,603, which makes the total to date $2,949,983. There was great enthusiasm when Mrs. William Fellowes Morgan and Mrs. Francis Louis Slade announced at the close of the luncheon that they could obtain $100,000 provided the $3,000,000 mark was passed at noon today, and that $3,400,000 was obtained by noon on Monday.

The guests of honor at the luncheon yesterday were Miss Grace H. Dodge, the Hon. Daikchetro Tagawa, a member of the Japanese Parliament and Vice Mayor of Tokio. Next to Mr. Tagawa sat the Rev. E. A. Chori, pastor of the Japanese Reformed Church of this city, who interpreted the Vice Mayor's speech.

Mr. Tagawa said that he was amazed by the tremendous undertaking of the Christian Associations, first, because of the large sum of money involved; second, because of the limited time which had been set for obtaining it, and third, because of the part the women were playing in the campaign and the wonderful power they had demonstrated.

Mr. Perkins read this letter from Julius Rosenwald of Chicago, who has contributed $50,000 to the fund:

Hearty congratulations on the magnificent campaign you are conducting. Surely the unselfish service of yourself and your fellow workers will result in your finally reaching the goal. My primary interest in the campaign, as is evidenced by my contribution, lies in the hope that funds will be provided for a Y. M. C. A. building for colored men and a Y. W. C. A. building for colored women. I believe the colored as well as the white people of New York will seize this rare opportunity to be helpful to one another and thus united make the campaign a success.

As a result of the advertising in yesterday's newspapers, a number of gifts were received by mail, the first of which was $50 from A. J. Cannon of 27 Willia mStreet.

Benjamin Duke, the tobacco mah, contributed yesterday $2,500 for the Nurses' Club, while the Phelps Stokes Fund added $2,500 more to the previous gifts for the colored women's Y. W. C. A. Besides the gifts already mentioned, the other gifts of $1,000 or over were:

Robert Scoville	$2,500
Cheney Brothers	1,000
Anonymous	1,000
Herman Stiefelen	1,000
Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Marling	1,000
Anonymous	1,000
William Nelson Cromwell	1,581
Anonymous	1,000
Daniel Guggenheim	1,000
Anonymous	1,000
Mrs. William H. Moore	1,000

The official list of contributions by committees and teams yesterday was:

The Kingsley Committee	576	$8,228
The Clark Committee	97	10,252
The Kunz Committee	44	1,019
The Women's Committee	416	75,531

REV. JOHN N. SAYRE WILSON WEDDING AID

Bridegroom's Brother to Assist the Rev. Sylvester W. Beach in White House Ceremony.

GETS MARRIAGE LICENSE

White House Usher Gives Miss Wilson's Age as 26 Years, and Thomas B. Sayre's as 28.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—An addition to the bridal party to attend Miss Jessie Wilson and Francis B. Sayre will be the Rev. John Nevin Sayre, brother of the bridegroom, who arrived from Germany yesterday to attend the wedding. The Rev. Mr. Sayre, who is a clergyman of the Episcopal Church, will assist in the marriage ceremony at which the officiating clergyman is the Rev. Sylvester W. Beach, the President's former pastor from Princeton.

To-day's additions to the hundreds of presents received by Miss Wilson include a large piece of silver plate of exquisite work from the Siamese Minister and a set of antique silver lamps from Miss Alice Nevin, the aunt of the bridegroom.

No word has been received at the White House of the silver tea service said to be on its way from the Women Voters of California. If this has been sent, as reported, it will probably arrive at the White House to-morrow when it will be the fifth complete service already bestowed on this bride who claims interest only in the simple life. In addition to the valuable gifts received from Congress, the diplomatic corps and members of the Cabinet and others of an official character, Miss Wilson has received from personal friends several beautifully bound sets of books, an edition de luxe of Stevenson, several sets of standard authors, and a set of old English prints, being much prized gifts.

She has also received a dozen clocks, from a small and handsomely chased silver traveling clock to a tall eight-day grandfather's clock of old mahogany, several antique mahogany tables, a Colonial mirror, mahogany framed, mounted by the brass eagle that makes these mirrors the most valuable of their class; a teakwood chest, silver vegetable dishes, forks and spoons of infinite variety, in addition to ten dozen pieces of flat silver, being a few of the articles intended for the furnishing of the bride's new home in Williamstown.

While less numerous than the gifts received by Miss Alice Roosevelt, the value of which mounted high into the thousands of dollars, Miss Jessie Wilson will have no cold higher than any other Washington bride since the wedding of Miss Helen Hay, whose marriage to Payne Whitney of New York took place when the bride's father was Secretary of State. The wealth of that bridegroom's family, with the personal popularity of the bride, made that wedding the most memorable in the story of presents the capital has ever known.

Irving H. Hoover, head usher at the White House, this afternoon obtained a marriage license for Miss Jessie Wilson and Francis B. Sayre. He gave Miss Wilson's age as 26 years and that of Mr. Sayre as 28. So quietly did Hoover go about his business at the marriage license clerk's office that none of the clerks knew what was transpiring.

After the license was obtained for the marriage Mr. Hoover got a permit for the Rev. Dr. Sylvester W. Beach of Princeton, N. J., to perform the ceremony.

Neither Miss Wilson or Mr. Sayre accompanied Mr. Hoover, as the local law does not require personal attendance.

MISS HOWARD INTRODUCED.

Mrs. Legg Howard Gives Reception and Theatre Party for Daughter.

Mrs. Legg Howard gave a reception yesterday afternoon at her residence, 449 Park Avenue, to introduce her daughter, Miss Dorothy Legg Howard. Mrs. Howard, in black with cream lace and Miss Howard, in white satin with tulle overdress trimmed in brown fur, were assisted in receiving by the Misses Eleanor Laird Hastines and Fanny de Groot Hastings, Joy Williams, Elvine Richard, Laura Parsons, and by Miss Marjorie Whitney of Albany and Miss Rachel Wilson of Cleveland.

Later Mrs. Howard took those receiving and a number of young men to a play, which was followed by a supper at Mrs. Howard's home. The young men asked to the play and supper were Francis Storer, Herbert Greenbeck, Jr., Charles W. Howard, Hegeman Foster, Theodore Crane, William Ryle, Herbert Neal, James S. Adams, Alfred Dick, Jr., and Phillips Gren.

Miss Howard is the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Legg of Mapleburst, Tarrytown. Several other entertainments will be given later for her.

LEVY—BAER.

The engagement is announced of Miss Gertrude M. Levy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Emanuel Levy of 223 Bainbridge Street, Brooklyn, to Leopold Baer. The wedding will take place on Dec. 24.

WALLACH—FOREMAN.

Mrs. Emanuel Wallach announces the engagement of her daughter, Miss Adelaide Wallach, to Edwin H. Foreman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry W. Foreman of this city. They will be at home Sunday, Dec. 14, from 4 to 7, at 165 West Eighty-seventh Street

Play for Thomas Davidson School.

There will be a special performance of Richter's play, "Too Late," at Lobel's Royal Theatre next Tuesday night for the benefit of the Thomas Davidson School of 307 Henry Street. Friends of the school are taking this means to raise funds for its support so that its fifty volunteer teachers may continue their instruction to the working men and women who make up the student body.

ALEXANDER BLOCH PLAYS.

Young Violinist Possesses Sincere Musical Feeling.

Alexander Bloch, a young violinist, made his first recital appearance here last night at Aeolian Hall before one of the largest audiences a new performer has drawn there this season.

The principal numbers of his programme were a Haendel Sonata in E major, the Vitali Chaconne, and Vieuxtemps's Ballade and Polonaise. Following each of the two first mentioned there were groups of smaller compositions of more recent date. But there was nothing in the ultra-modern spirit. As well as with his programme making, the young performer showed in his style of playing that his sympathies ran in the classical direction.

He is a quiet player, without noticeable affectations, either physical or artistic, and exhibits the possession of sincere musical feeling. His tone is of good quality, and he uses it with some variety of effect, though it was marred occasionally by slight uncertainty of intonation.

"LOHENGRIN" AT THE OPERA

Mme. Ober Arouses Enthusiasm at Debut—Admirable Performance.

Helarich Der Vogler.....Carl Braun
Lohengrin .....Jacques Urlus
Elsa von Brabant.....Olive Fremstad
Friedrich von Telramund.....Herman Weil
Ortrud .....Margarete Ober
Rer Heerrufer des Konig.....Carl Schlegel
Conductor, Alfred Hertz.

The first performance of "Lohengrin" this season at the Metropolitan Opera House, which was given last evening, had many exceedingly fine qualities, and was, in fact, a welcome augury of what the season may bring forth in respect of fine performances, beautifully prepared—such an augury as was also observed on the first two nights. It was a performance notable for the admirable co-operation and balance of almost all its factors of principal singers, chorus, and orchestra; for the dramatic life that coursed through it and for much excellent chorus singing; for smooth, rich, and resonant orchestral playing.

One of its most interesting features was the first appearance of a new mezzo-soprano—for her voice is not of the character or quality to be called a contralto—Mme. Margarete Ober, w o was the Ortrud. She very soon made t evident that she is a singer of uncommon excellence and of unusual dramat c gifts. She is young; her voice has the freshness and strength of youth, and she poured it forth lavishly last evening. She has the power of coloring it with vividness and intensity. It is, in fac., a voice of remarkable dramatic quality, a true and immediate reflex of her own quality as an actress, in which her gif s and accomplishments are exceptional. Her Ortrud was an impersonation of hateful malevolence in conception, skillfully expressed with manifold and significant detail of gesture, pose and facial expression. She has the impetuosity of youth, and there were times when her vehemence affected the quality of her tone; but her singing for the most par was deserving of commendat on, and when it is somewhat moderated will b deserving of more. Her invocation to the heathen gods in the first scene of the second act was a passage of surpassing power and eloquence and called forth a burst of applause from an audience that does not habitually so interrupt the progress of a Wagnerian opera. It seemed clear that Mme. Ober is to be an addition to the company of whom interesting things are to be expected during the season.

Another new singer appearing last evening was Mr. Carl Schlegel, as the Herald, who made a favorable impression. He is an artist who has been heard here in concert at least once with approval. But the members of the cast had appeared in previous representations of "Lohengrin" at the Metropolitan, but never to better advantage. Mme. Fremstad's Elsa was at its loveliest in appearance and in its compelling sympathy. Mr. Weil's Telramund was tragically impressive and better sung than some of his last season's performances. There have been more ideal interpretations than Mr. Urbus gave of Lohengrin; his vocal style was somewhat strenuous, somewhat exaggerated, and lacking the poise that is particularly appropriate for the Grail Knight; but his interpretation is that of a skilful and appreciative actor. There have been few more impressive representatives of King Henry in recent years than Mr. Braun, and few who have sung the music with greater nobility and beauty of voice.

The audience was aroused to unusual enthusiasm by the performance, and was lavish in its applause at the end of the acts.

ACT "THE SILENT WOMAN."

Columbia Boys Give Jonson's Farce with Elizabethan Setting.

Brinckerhoff Theatre, in Barnard College, took on a true Elizabethan aspect last night at the performance of Ben Jonson's farce, "The Silent Woman," by the Philolexian Literary Society of Columbia. Everything that the students could do under the direction of Prof. Algernon D. Tassin to make the Brinckerhoff Theatre like an old Elizabethan playhouse was done, the chief object being the elimination of all modern scenery and the presentation of a perfectly bare stage.

All the parts were taken by men, with C. B. Murphy, '14, as Epicoene, the Silent Woman. The performance was warmly applauded.

The cast was as follows:

Morose.....S. M. Janney, '14
Sir Dauphine Euginic.....J. T. Quinlan, '16
Ned Clerimont.....J. K. McCormick, '15 L.
Treuwit.....I. T. Freedman, '16
Sir Alexander Daw.....N. Fairchild, '15
Sir Amorous La Toole.....A. A. Coates, Pg.
Tom Otter.....C. A. Osterhoim, '15
Cutbeard.....D. Campbell, '15
Mute.....N. Stillman, '15
Parson in distress.....C. D. Caldwell, '16 L.
Epicene.....C. B. Murphy, '14
Lady Haughty.....R. O. Du Bois, '15
Lady Centaure.....F. G. Dunham, '15
Mistress Davis.....J. A. Murphy, '14
Mistress Otter.....R. B. Perry, '16

There will be performances of "The Silent Woman" this afternoon and evening.

Mr. Forbes-Robertson's "Shylock," introduced here for the first time last night, is a wolfish creature who in his general attitude toward the Christians realizes exactly what one expects from the physical presentment. That, indeed, is admirable; a sallow, sunken, liverish visage, its leanness and gauntness emphasized in a frame of greyish straggling hair and beard. In movement and gesture he is a Shylock seemingly able to hold his own with any man, and in intent and action a vindictive, avaricious monster, not by any means the best of his race, if not, indeed, the very worst; in short, the sort of Shylock who does not for a moment suggest the romance or sentiment that the centuries and commentaries have built about the character. One gets from it absolutely no sense of extenuating qualities of mind or heart or devotedness to religion or to race.

There is, of course, plenty of license for this kind of a Shylock, though it is scarcely the one which has made a permanent impress upon the stage, such, for instance, as that of Irving in the rôle, which, though it may have been as much or more Irving than Shakespeare, had a far broader impressiveness. Nor the Shylock of Edwin Booth, which in its nobler aspects reflected the wail of the oppressed and the human desire to make the most of an advantage long delayed.

All of which, if the Macklin Jew "that Shakespeare drew" was really the Shylock the poet intended, did not really belong to the figure at all.

These things apart, however, Mr. Forbes-Robertson's Shylock must be judged as an entity in itself. Is his a compelling figure of the Jew; is it completely illusory; is it an acting symbol which for the time being sets the man himself aside and substitutes the character?

To all these questions the answer must be negative.

It is a Shylock that has its good moments, the best, perhaps, in that scene with Salarino and Solanio, in which the Jew lets his passionate anger run riot, and in that subsequent passage in which Tubal brings him news of the loss of Antonio's argosies. And the vindictive note is admirably voiced in the trial scene, while the ultimate collapse is very well suggested. But rarely, if ever, is there anything like the inspirational quality or complete identification with the figure which eliminates the personality of the actor and brings a positive imaginative illusion of the chief figure in the play. In other words, the natural organism of the actor and the nature of the rôle do not so act and react upon one another as to create what might be chemically termed a complete precipitate.

Miss Elliott's Portia is a winning and gracious figure, touched with admirable gentleness and charm, and though, like Mr. Forbes-Robertson, she seems a trifle uncertain of her lines, (which always makes false readings,) she suggested infinite possibilities in the part once she has absorbed it more completely. The "quality of mercy" speech was read exquisitely.

S. A. Cookson was a very ingratiating Bassanio, Percy Rhodes an excellent Antonio, and Alex Scott Gatty an exceptionally effective Gratiano. The others served.

The version used departs little from that in ordinary use, but the advantage of dropping the curtain to indicate a lapse of time between the departure of the revelers and Shylock's return from supper with the Christians is open to question.

It is only fair to add that the audience last night was large and enthusiastic, and that the Belmont scenes, thanks largely to Miss Elliott's charm, were considerably more enjoyable than is often the case.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

THE NEW YORK SYMPHONY.

Beethoven's Pastoral Symphony Played—Mme. Matzenauer Soloist.

An excellent performance of Beethoven's "Pastoral" symphony was the principal orchestral offering at the concert of the New York Symphony Orchestra yesterday afternoon in Aeolian Hall. There were both delicacy and power in the playing, and the incidental solos of the wood wind players were charmingly given and with unusual finish. An orchestral arrangement of Grieg's funeral march in memory of Richard Nordraak, made by Johann Halvorsen, was marked on the programme as presented for the first time in New York. Nordraak is known to readers of Grieg's biography as one who had large influence in turning him toward Scandinavian nationalism in music. He died as a young man, and there is evidence in this march of the depth of Grieg's feelings, though it is hardly one of his important works. The last orchestral number was Strauss's "Till Eulenspiegel," played by the orchestra in its concert last Sunday. When this programme is repeated to-morrow its place will be taken by Dvorak's "Scherzo Capriccioso."

Mme. Mathilde Matzenauer was the soloist, a singer who in a season established her position as one of the most valuable of dramatic contraltos at the Metropolitan Opera House. Her rich and voluminous voice resounded superbly in Aeolian Hall with abundant color and with only a few of her highest tones somewhat problematical as to quality. She sang an air from Halévy's opera "La Juive," an air which loses something of its significance when taken away from the dramatic surroundings where it belongs, and shows on the concert stage something more of its Meyerbeerian emptiness purely as music. Mme. Matzenauer sang it, however, with great conviction and an intense dramatic accent. She appeared again on the programme and contributed Berlioz's song "Le Spectre de la Rose," a song originally with piano accompaniment, and one of the set called "Les Nuits d'Eté."

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Trading Still Drags—Some Gains Shown, but General Price Level Falls Off.

Prices hardened a little in some parts of the Stock Exchange list yesterday but the general level of quotations again showed a small net loss for the day. Even the very moderate increase in activity which occurred the previous day was not maintained, the transactions falling to the smallest level of the week which means that they were the smallest since July 15 last. Perhaps the most conspicuous incident of the trading was a decline of more than two points in New Haven, which carried it to within a small fraction of last week's low price. With the maturing note issue provided for the stockholders are relieved of any concern over immediate financial requirements and the decline therefore was probably related to the prevailing belief in a further reduction in the road's dividend and to the inferences drawn from the progress of the negotiations between the railroad and the Attorney General in respect to the undoing of some of the mergers by which the present New Haven system was built up. Much of the trouble which has come to the New Haven has been encountered as a result of the New Haven's acquisition of other properties, and if some of the road's past steps can be retraced it will probably prove to be far from an unmixed evil.

One of the larger movements of the day which were directly connected with news developments was a decline of over a point in General Electric. That was in most quarters attributed to reports of a threatened strike at the principal of the company's plants, but more substantial reason for the decline may have been supplied by the information that the Company has recently laid off a considerable number of men. This is another specific illustration of the way things are working in some important industries, but a perusal of the weekly trade reviews reveals the fact that contraction in manufacturing is by no means uniform. It is marked in the steel and copper trades, but in many other lines it seems that a large number of small orders for immediate delivery are keeping mills working close to capacity.

There were some interesting developments in the money market. One phase of the situation was illustrated by a reduction made yesterday in the rate for standing call loans by one of the largest lenders of Stock Exchange money. Another phase was presented in the withdrawal of $2,500,000 gold for shipment to Canada, and in the transfer through the Sub-Treasury of $500,000 to San Francisco. These shipments will have the effect of offsetting to a substantial extent the gain in cash which the banks are believed to have made early in the week. The usual Friday estimates indicated, however, that even after taking count of these exports of gold to Canada a net gain in cash was likely to be shown in to-day's bank statement. Some of the Canadian banks have been large sellers of sterling exchange in this market, and the proceeds of these bills directly or indirectly are being sent to the Dominion in the shape of gold exports. Canada recently drew $2,000,000 gold from London and has taken at least $4,500,000 from New York, making a total of $6,500,000 which Canada has taken in recent weeks. A little over half of the gold which we have lost to that quarter was covered by the engagements which we ourselves made in London.

MONEY AND EXCHANGE.

Money on call loaned on Stock Exchange collateral at 2¾@3 per cent., with the last loan at 2¾ per cent. The renewal rate was 2¾ per cent.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Mexican Conference Monday.

President E. N. Brown of the National Railways of Mexico is expected at the New York headquarters to-day, and on Monday it is likely that a conference will be held with the bankers who have participated in financing the National Railways in the past. The question of paying the Dec. 1 and Jan. 1 interest charges, and the means thereof, will be threshed out after hearing from President Brown on the business and political outlook.

B. & O. in October.

A decrease in the Baltimore & Ohio's net earnings for the month of October wiped out the last of the gain accumulated in the three preceding months, so that for the first third of the year the company has a loss as compared with the corresponding period of last year. A recession in general business is indicated for the first time in a decrease of $70,000 in the net gross revenues. A small reduction was accomplished in the maintenance of way, but there was an increase of $196,000 in equipment costs and another of $432,000 in transportation expenses. It is in the latter item that increases in wages are reported. The net operating revenue, on substantially the same amount of business as was done in October of last year, was $682,000 less. The difference in the cost of operating the Baltimore & Ohio is more strikingly shown in the four months' figures; the road earned $36,817,000, an increase of $1,711,000, at an added cost of $1,800,000, so that the net for the period shows a decrease of $87,000.

The Railway Case.

The Eastern roads' application for an advance of approximately 5 per cent. in their freight rates will come up for a hearing in Washington next Monday, when Daniel Willard, chairman of the railway executives' committee, will lay before the Interstate Commerce Commission a great amount of data based largely upon the results obtained in the past three years, or since the submission of the former application. Bankers and others directly interested in the success of the carriers' efforts expect Mr. Brandeis, for the shippers, to make a strong point of the disclosures of the financing practices of the New Haven and the Frisco, as brought out in the inquiries conducted by a representative of the commission. They also expect him to lay great stress upon the alleged iniquitous practice of interlocking directorates, by which he asserts that railroads pay unfairly high prices for steel and other materials supplied by companies whose policies are directed by much the same men who control the railroads. On the other hand, a fellow director with Mr. Willard pointed out yesterday, the railroads should not have great difficulty in proving that while practices complained of may have been potent factors in bringing about the misfortunes of some roads, other companies which have exercised the greatest economy and been honestly managed are but little less in need of an advance in rates if they are to be able to go on with the improvements which the service demands.

No Coupons with Drugs.

In quarters close to the management of the United Cigar Stores Company considerable wrath was displayed yesterday when a rumor was repeated that coupons would be given with purchases of drugs when the Riker-Hegeman stores are taken over, as they are with tobacco products. Not only was the story denied with emphasis, but the opportunity was taken to assert that, under the new order, practically no change will be made in the prevailing method of handling the drug business. The controlling interests intend to bring about greater economies in the sales end when the two companies become affiliated than are possible now, and attention will be devoted to increasing the joint business at a faster rate than the corporations operating separately, could do. It has been officially said that tobacco selling methods will not be applied to drugs. There is small question that the distribution of premiums has stimulated the sale of cigars. The sponsors of the Cigar Stores Company apparently believe that the same result would not be obtained if medicine was a leading article of merchandise.

Waiting for an Oil Stock Dividend.

The market for Standard Oil subsidiary shares has received its chief incentive for strength in recent weeks from the steady output of extra dividends, but the possibilities surrounding Standard Oil of New York evidently supplied a sentimental influence of importance on the whole list. An initial dividend on the increased capital of $75,000,000 was longed for on the Curb in October, and the fact that it did not come only added zest to the hopes of brokers and investors. Now it is confidently predicted that it will appear before the end of the year, perhaps within a few days. The company has been conservative since the dissolution of the Oil Trust in the way of cash retnrns to shareholders. Last June a stock divident of 400 per cent. was declared when the capital was increased, but in the last two years only $6 a share in each year was paid out. No income account has been published. Examinations of last year's balance sheet, however, gave the impression that net earnings were in the neighborhood of $15,000,000, the equivalent of 20 per cent. on outstanding stock. Generous applications of income to extension of the marketing end of the business is believed to have materially increased the concern's earning power, and it is estimated that this year's net will be equal to at least 25 per cent. on the capital. Numerous guesses as to the probable annual basis of dividends, when the time comes, have been made up to 16 per cent. without bringing any official sanction of any of them.

Northern Pacific Starts Late.

Before Northern Pacific appeared on the stock ticker yesterday the broker with shares to sell had ample time to learn what the general market was doing. The first transaction in the stock was not recorded until 2.45 o'clock and showed a gain of ⅝ over the closing price of the preceding session. A second hundred share lot came out just before the market closed at the same price as the other, 106½.

Illinois Central Lien Plan Delayed.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Ill., Nov. 21.—A meeting of the stockholders of the Illinois Central Railroad held to-day to consider the issuing of a $120,000,000 refunding mortgage and to secure authorization for the same adjourned till Dec. 12 because the Directors' resolutions covering the proposal were still before New York bankers. No strong opposition to the mortgage plan is expected.

Oil Prices Put Up in Ohio.

FINDLAY, Ohio, Nov. 21.—The Ohio Oil Company this morning advanced five grades of oil 5 cents per barrel, thus establishing a record price for each. The new quotations are: Illinois and Princeton, $1.45; North Lima, $1.49; South Lima and Indiana, $1.44.

OUTSIDE SECURITIES

Trading Falls Off in the Curb Market and Price Movements Continue Irregular.

Trading in the outside security market fell to small proportions yesterday, and except in the case of some of the oil issues the movement of prices was very narrow. Standard Oil of New Jersey had the broadest range of any of the listed issues, but wider markets prevailed on other important oil shares. Some of these reacted sharply, but their declines were offset by advances in others of the same class. Riker-Hegeman new stock was less active, the transactions falling off to about a total of 1,500 shares, the latter changing hands in small lots at 7 and 7⅛.

NEW COTTON TYPES SET FOR EXCHANGES

Managers Accept the Department of Agriculture's Standards with Additions

BUT ADVOCATE A CHANGE

International Types Should Be Adopted, Says Committee—Outside Credits Forbidden.

The Managers of the Cotton Exchange approved yesterday changes in type standards recommended by a special committe, which will be considered by the members at a meeting on Dec. 2. The recommendations of the committee on this subject were:

The New York Cotton Exchange should adopt the standard types of the grades (and half grades) of white cotton promulgated by the Department of Agriculture in 1909 as the types to be used by the exchange for the classification of Gulf and Texas cotton, adding thereto one lower grade.

That types of upland white cotton equivalent in grade should be prepared by the exchange—with the approval of the Government, if possible—to be used for the classification of upland cotton; and that a strong and determined effort should be made to secure the co-operation of the Department of Agriculture and of Congress in having such upland types added to and made the Government standard types for upland cotton, and adding thereto one lower grade.

That corresponding types of tinged cotton—upland, Texas, and Gulf—from the grade of strict low middling up to strict good middling, and a type of middling, stained cotton, should be prepared for use in the classification of these grades of cotton, if possible, with the approval and cooperation of the Department of Agriculture, as in the case of types of upland with white cotton.

That the Government standard types be adopted, with the additions herein stated, to take effect from and after April 1, 1915.

That the existing intermediary or quarter grades be reorganized in the classification of cotton and that a value approximately half way between the adjacent half grades be given them.

The committee, while advocating the adoption of the Government Standard Types, is, nevertheless, of the opinion that it would be better for the New York Stock Exchange, and for the cotton trade generally, if the Standard Types, known as the International Standard Types, could be substituted for the present Government Standard Types; and the committee further recommends that the interim be employed by the New York Cotton Exchange for the purpose of making all possible representations to the authorities in Washington, with a view of having these International Types adopted as the Government Standard Types for use in interstate and foreign commerce. In the event such efforts and representations shall be effective, the Exchange should then rescind its action in adopting the present Government Standard Types, and adopt those which may be approved by the Government authorities on or before April 1, 1915. But in the event the Government shall not have taken such action before April 1, 1914, then the present Government Standard Types promulgated in 1909, with the additions herein set forth, shall be the Standard Types for all trading on the New York Cotton Exchange.

Several amendments to the by-laws were also approved, including one prohibiting the extension of credit for speculative purposes. This provides:

"The extension of credits to any person, firm, corporation, or association of persons—other than members of the New York Cotton Exchange and those actively engaged in the cotton trade—is declared to be an act detrimental to the best interests of the Exchange, and is hereby prohibited. Any member violating this rule shall be subject to suspension or expulsion under Section 92 (a) of the by-laws.

"The words 'actively engaged' are to be construed to apply to those persons who make the cotton trade their chief occupation and devote to it the greater part of their business activities."

OPPOSES TROLLEY GRANT.

E. C. Blum Says New Franchise Would Injure Brooklyn Institutions.

Edwin C. Blum of Abraham & Straus has written to the Board of Estimate as a Trustee of the Brooklyn Institute of Arts and Sciences to protest against the grant to the Three Cent Railroad of a franchise to use Ashland Place for its trolley tracks. He protests against it as unnecessary for the company and a great mistake for the borough.

"Brooklyn," Mr. Blum says in part, "is to-day the city of impossible approaches; the borough of abortive bridge entrances and exits. A committee of public-spirited citizens has been working on a plan to relieve the situation for years, and when it appears that some headway has been made this added error is threatened."

Then Mr. Blum quotes the remark of ex-President Taft at the Hamilton Club on Wednesday night, when he said that he would be inclined to come to Brooklyn more often if it were possible to know how to get in and how to get out again, and then goes on to speak of the enormity of crowding up Brooklyn's one great forum, the Academy of Music, with houses.

"We realize," says Mr. Blum, "that our city cannot afford to spend the money it would take to make a park of these buildings, but why take the little space already belonging to the city and put trolley tracks on it?"

Such tracks in Ashland Place, Mr. Blum maintains, would make opera well-nigh impossible, would mar the performances at the Institute, and would detract from the beauty of the Academy.

TO EXTEND STEINWAY TUBE.

Construction Contract for Queens Awarded to Dignon Concern.

The construction contract for the Queens extension of the Steinway Tunnel to the Queensboro Bridge Plaza was granted yesterday by the Public Service Commission to the lowest bidder, the Degnon Contracting Company, at $557,856. The next lowest bidder was the Holbrook, Cabot & Rollins Corporation with a bid of $558,281. This section will run across the Long Island Railroad yards and along Ely Avenue and Davis Street.

Bids were opened yesterday for section 2 of the New Utrecht Avenue, Brooklyn, line. This will be a three-track elevated road, and the section under consideration begins at Tenth Avenue and Thirty-ninth Street and runs along Tenth Avenue, New Utrecht Avenue, Eighty-sixth Street and Stillwell Avenue to a little north of Avenue X.

The lowest bidder according to the unofficial figures was Post McCord, Incorporated, with a bid of $1,672,000, and the two next were the Cooper & Evans Company, $1,802,000, and the Oscar Daniels Company, $1,734,000. Altogether there were eleven bidders.

Weekly Failure Report.

Bradstreet's reports 340 business failures in the United States during the week, against 305 for the previous week and 269, 293, 212, and 217 for the corresponding weeks of 1912 to 1909. The Middle States had 115, New England 34, Southern 74, Western 62, Northwestern 24, and Far Western 31. Canada had 42, against 49 for the preceding week. About 84 per cent. of the total number of concerns failing had capital of $5,000 or less and 10 per cent. had from $5,000 to $20,000 capital.

CAN'T RETIRE CIRCULATION.

Banks' Liberty to Do So Prescribed by Treasury Order.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—The Treasury Department has adopted the rule as a matter of general policy of refusing to allow any national bank to retire its circulation in order to release and withdraw the Government bonds put up as security for such circulation, when the purpose is to obtain Government bonds for use as security for deposits of Government money as loans to the banks for crop moving and similar uses.

This policy, it is understood, precipitated the report that the Government had refused to allow several national banks, including one at Salem, Mass., to retire circulation and withdraw bonds. When this matter was brought to the attention of Treasury officials to-day they asserted that the Government had not tried to block any national bank in the retirement of its circulation except in connection with the isolated cases of certain banks that wished to retire their circulation in order to obtain bonds to be put up as security for the recent deposit of about $40,000,000 of Government funds in national banks in the South and West in connection with the movement of the crops.

Under the national banking laws the national banks have the right, it was explained to-day, to retire their bond-secured circulation. It was asserted by Treasury officials that the department had not interfered with such retirement of national bank circulation, but that the policy had been adopted of not increasing the balance of public moneys in a national bank if such a course would result in reducing circulations. In some cases banks that wanted allotments of public funds proposed to retire their national bank circulation and release the bonds which had been deposited as security for the banks' circulation. The bonds would then be redeposited with the Government as security for public deposits.

Such an arrangement would have given the bank an increase of public money but would have reduced the country's total of circulation and might produce a crisis on the eve of currency legislation. It would also have thwarted the very purpose the Secretary of the Treasury is understood to have had in mind when he decided to offer to deposit Government funds with national banks in Southern and Western States to facilitate the movement of the crops. The department required banks desiring the crop moving deposits to furnish at least ten per cent. of the security in Government bonds and the other ninety per cent. of the security in deposits of the State or municipal bonds in conjunction with prime commercial paper.

FAILS WITH HOLLINS FIRM.

Keystone Materials Company Follows Brokers Into Bankruptcy.

A petition in bankruptcy was filed yesterday against the Keystone Materials Company, dealers in building and raw materials, with offices at 116-120 West Thirty-second Street, and a factory at Richmond Hill, Long Island. The company was organized in 1912 with a capital of $4,500,000, and H. B. Hollins, the Wall Street banker and broker whose firm, H. B. Hollins & Co., failed last week owing $5,000,000, was a Director. Briton N. Busch, also of H. B. Hollins & Co., was another Director.

The names of other prominent men were associated with the Keystone company. According to the 1913 issue of Co-Partnership and Corporation Directory, the officers and Directors were: William Guggenheim, President; Charles E. Locke, Secretary; Walter Kutzleb, Treasurer, and Herman E. Brown, Briton N. Busch, T. Coleman du Pont, James E. Gibson, Sidney Grant, William Guggenheim, H. B. Hollins, Walter Kutzleb, Charles F. Locke, W. J. N. Lofland, Vivian Spencer, Warren Thorpe, and Walter B. Trowbridge, Directors.

Mr. Guggenheim said last night that he had been President in a nominal capacity for a few weeks after the company was organized and that he had resigned the office and had nothing at all to do with the company since last May. It was said that several of the Directors had had no active participation in the company's affairs.

William D. Brush, a lawyer with offices at 2 Rector Street, appeared before Judge Hough in the Federal District Court yesterday as attorney for the creditors filing the petition. It was alleged in court that while insolvent the company admitted on Nov. 13—the day H. B. Hollins & Co. closed its doors—an inability to pay its debts and had made preferential payments. It was said that the normal assets of the company were $56,000 and the liabilities, while not given specifically, were reported to be more than $20,000.

Judge Hough appointed Marvyn Scudder receiver with a bond of $10,000 and gave him authority to continue the business of the company for ten days. Nineteen of the forty creditors of the company requested Mr. Scudder's appointment. The Keystone Materials Company was incorporated in Delaware in June, 1912, with a capital stock of $4,500,000, but it was not rated in Bradstreet's. It was formed to take over and operate concerns engaged in the manufacture of building materials and those owning raw materials. Its factory at Richmond Hill has been shut down for some time.

DISCUSS NEW HAVEN PLANS.

Directors Take Up Reorganization —No Dividend Action Yet.

BOSTON, Nov. 21.—Reorganization of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company to meet the requirements of the anti-trust law was discussed by the Directors of the road at their monthly meeting to-day.

Committees of the board, which have been investigating the system's trolley interests in Western Massachusetts, its steamship holdings, and the relations between the New Haven and the Boston & Albany, told of their progress, but made no final report.

Chairman Elliott said that no demand had been made upon the New Haven by Attorney General McReynolds to hasten its reorganization. He said he had assured the Attorney General that an investigation would be made to see what could be done to solve the problem and that the committees of Directors had been hard at work to this end.

"The Directors are in full accord on the policy to be pursued, in so far as the investigations of the committees have shown," said Mr. Elliott.

It had been thought that an announcement regarding the dividend rate of the New Haven for the next quarter would be made after to-day's meeting, but the Chairman said the matter was not discussed. Mr. Elliott said the dividend would be acted upon some time in December.

SUES SENATOR STEPHENSON

Sackett, Ex-Senate Clerk, Asks $49,000 for Work Done.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—Senator Isaac Stephenson of Wisconsin was sued for $49,000 in the District Court here to-day by Rodney Sackett, a former executive clerk of the Senate, who alleged that Mr. Stephenson employed him to settle claims arising from his campaign of 1908.

Sackett also alleges that he rendered important aid in the defense of Senator Stephenson when the Senate investigated his right to a seat in that body in 1911. He says he was constantly in touch with the Senator's witnesses, "refreshing their memories" and giving other aid of value.

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE.

A good proportion of the total business in Wall Street was handled on the Consolidated Stock Exchange, where 21,850 shares changed hands. There were transactions in several stocks no sales of which were reported elsewhere in the financial district. These were: Rock Island preferred, Western Union, Interborough-Metropolitan, Republic Iron and Steel, Corn Products, and Wisconsin Central. There was considerable irregularity about the course of prices so far as the general list was concerned. The market softened early, rallied, and then eased from the best.

AT A STATED TERM OF THE DISTRICT Court of the United States, held in and for the Southern District of New York, at the Post Office Building, Borough of Manhattan, City of New York, on the 3rd day of November, 1913.

And it is

Further ordered that this order be published in The New York Times once a week for two successive weeks, said publication to commence not later than the 24th day of November, 1913, and that a copy of this order be mailed to the said alleged bankrupt at his last known place of business, 125th Street and Canal Place, in the Borough of Bronx, New York City, on or before the date of the first publication. IN THE BUSINESS WORLD

Timing Telephone Talks.

A telephone timing device has been put on the market, which is said to be of great assistance in offices where long-distance charges are features of expense. The device consists of five small sand glasses attached and cushioned in an oxidized frame. These glasses are graduated so as to require one, two, three, four and five minutes for the sand to run from the upper to the lower tubes. The sand in the first glass runs out at the end of one minute, that in the second at the end of two, and so on. When the fifth glass is emptied the timer is inverted automatically and the sand runs the other way.

Imported Goods Get Few Complaints

One of the chief problems the domestic manufacturer of textiles has to solve is proportioning the allowances that the cutting-up trades insist on asking for imperfections. This has been quoted generally in the local market as a good reason why the foreign dress goods producer will be unable to do any great amount of business here. In view of the experience of a certain local selling agent with several foreign accounts, this reason is not worth what it may seem. This agent said yesterday that out of fifty sample pieces delivered to the garment manufacturers this Fall he had had to allow only three-quarters of a yard for imperfections, all of which were oil stains. "If that average keeps up when our January orders are delivered," he added, "we shall have nothing to fear on the score of allowances."

Foreign Dress Goods Will Lead.

Conditions in the domestic dress goods market are not favorable to a good Spring business with the retailers, according to J. A. Marin, a buyer for Lord & Taylor. "The domestic manufacturers," he said yesterday, in explaining this statement, "have not yet adjusted prices on their goods to the levels at which similar merchandise can be procured from the foreign producers. The revision of Schedule K in the new tariff will benefit consumers, as they will be able to buy their dress goods this Spring at a decided reduction from the prices they have been paying. There has been some increase in the consuming demand for these fabrics in the last year. Retail stocks will not be greatly enlarged because of it, but, for Spring at least, they will contain a greater proportion of imported merchandise than usual. How the Fall buying goes will depend largely upon the ability of the domestic manufacturer to compete with foreign styles and prices."

Ask Silk Men to Exhibit.

It was learned yesterday that overtures had been made to the Silk Association of America by the promoters of the Panama-Pacific Exposition to induce the New York silk trade to exhibit in San Francisco. It was said, however, that the question had not yet been definitely decided on, and no information was forthcoming whether the local trade would take part. Inquiry among a number of the silk manufacturers here revealed no particular interest in the matter. Several individual manufacturers, it was said, will exhibit their goods, but one manufacturer said that he doubted the probability of the trade's making a collective exhibit. The promoters of the exposition have also communicated with the Board of Trade, suggesting that the manufacturers of that city hold a collective silk exhibit, showing the various stages of the work from the time the raw silk arrived at the mills until it was turned out in the finished product. John J. Fitzgerald, Secretary of the Paterson Board of Trade, is considering the advisability of the plan but as has given out no details as to whether the suggestion would be acted upon.

The Tariff and the Carpet Trade.

Business in the local carpet and linoleum market has been active since the recent opening of the Spring season. High-grade carpets are slightly less active than in former seasons. Most manufacturers are confident that they can successfully compete with the lines that will be admitted under the lower tariff rates that will be operative after Jan. 1, with the exception of better-grade Wiltons. It is said by some that these goods will be more affected by the lower duties than any other lines of floor coverings. A prominent manufacturer said, however, that no English Wilton was made of the same materials that the American product was, and that he doubted if the imported rugs would prove satisfactory to the American trade. Business in linoleums had been very good and all lines and patterns have been in good demand. Manufacturers are not worrying over the damage to be done by foreign competition. It was said yesterday that the worst feature in the market at present was the high continued cost of raw materials. Mills are not inclined to take business far ahead at the present time as there is a possibility that prices on certain lines will be advanced.

DRY GOODS OUTLOOK.

Current Distribution Ahead — New Business Increase Drops.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Ill., Nov. 21.—Marshall Field & Co., in their weekly review of the dry goods trade, say:

"Current distribution of dry goods during the week has run ahead of that of the same period a year ago. New business booked for immediate and future delivery, while satisfactory, has not maintained the steady percentage of increase that has been shown in sales for several weeks previous, as compared with figures of the corresponding week in 1912.

"Cash receipts are normal. Weather conditions have been unfavorable to active retail selling, which is somewhat offset by the fact that holiday shopping is beginning early and visiting merchants report that they are extremely busy.

"There is a feeling of satisfaction among the dry goods trade as a result of the good demand that has prevailed throughout the Fall months, leaving manufacturers' and retailers' stocks at present in such conditions that with five weeks more of moderate selling they will be able to enter inventory with low reserves of merchandise on hand."

COTTON GINNING REPORT.

Total of 10,434,387 Bales Ginned Prior to Nov. 14.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—The fifth cotton ginning report of the Census Bureau for the season, issued to-day, announced that 10,434,387 bales of cotton, counting round as half bales, of the growth of 1913 had been ginned prior to Nov. 14. During the past seven years the ginnings to that date have averaged 72.9 per cent. of the entire crop. Last year to Nov. 14 there had been ginned 10,299,646 bales, or 76.4 per cent. of the entire crop; in 1911 to that date, 11,315,230 bales, or 72.7 per cent, and in 1908 to that date 9,595,809 bales, or 73.3 per cent.

Included in the ginnings were 74,127 round bales, compared with 62,768 bales last year, 75,963 bales in 1911, 93,364 bales in 1910, and 123,757 bales in 1909.

The number of Sea Island cotton bales included were 52,679, compared with 40,389 bales last year, 71,204 bales in 1911, 68,495 bales in 1909 and 56,701 bales in 1908.

LATEST CUSTOMS RULINGS.

Importers Lose In Controversy Over Glove Classification.

The Board of United States General Appraisers yesterday overruled a protest by Wimelbacher & Rice, and the J. & D. Lehman Co., regarding the clasification under the tariff act of 1909, of gloves composed of silk and cotton. Collector Mitchel returned the articles as in chief value of silk, and exacted duty at the rate of 60 per cent. ad valorem under paragraph 402. The importers contended that the gloves were in principal value of cotton, and therefore dutiable at 50 per cent. under the provision for wearing apparel in chief value of cotton under paragraph 391. The board declined to accept a deposition made by the manufacturer of the goods at Chemnitz on the ground that the witness refused to answer questions by American special agents.

The Waltzfelder Braid Company was defeated in a contention relating to cords and tassels used as trimmings for umbrellas. The goods were classified by the Collector at New York as of cotton chief value, and assessed at 60 per cent. ad valorem under paragraph 349, act of 1909. The importers said the articles were dutiable properly at 45 per cent. under paragraph 332 as manufactures of cotton

THE REAL ESTATE FIELD.

$1,000,000 Purchase by Former Owners at Fourth Avenue and Thirty-second Street—Investment Deal on Greene Street—Fine Brooklyn Residence Sold—Good Suburban Market.

One of the best sales in the Fourth Avenue loft zone district that has been made in some time and which possesses features of more than ordinary interest has been made by Everett A. Brett of the firm of N. Brigham Hall & William D. Bloodgood. It involves the purchase for investment of the new twelve-story commercial building recently completed on the southwest corner of Fourth Avenue and Thirty-second Street, known as 470 to 478 Fourth Avenue. The buyers are Robert Lee Morrell, Isabel de P. Kelley, and Julia B. Peck. They purchased the property from the Fourth Avenue and Thirty-second Street Company, of which Roswell F. Easton is President, for about $1,000,000, at which figure the property has been held.

The interesting fact about the deal is that the buyers are the children of the original owner of the property, Thomas Morrell, who, when he died in 1888, left the corner in trust for his children. For years the plot, with its old wooden shanties, was an eyesore to that part of the avenue, rendered more so from the fact that it is opposite the Park Avenue Hotel. In 1911 the heirs obtained permission from the courts to sell the property at partition, and the corner was sold at auction in March, 1911, by Bryan L. Kennelly for $395,000. Later the sellers obtained the property and improved it with the present building, which has been nearly all rented by the brokerage firm making the sale.

The property has a frontage of 116 feet on Fourth Avenue and 83.8 feet on Thirty-second Street. The new owners have appointed N. Brigham Hall & William D. Bloodgood agents for the building.

Investor Buys on Greene Street.

An interesting deal in the old downtown commercial district has been made by the Charles F. Noyes Company in the sale of the five-story loft at 69 and 71 Greene Street, between Broome and Spring Streets, for the Manhattan Real Estate Association, (George P. Slade, Treasurer, and Alfred R. Kirkus, Secretary,) to Walter S. Timmis. The plot is 37.6 by 100 feet.

The building is modern, with elevators, low-pressure heat, etc. It cost the sellers $150,000, and was leased to Frank & Dugan at $9,500 per annum until last May. The buyer will make extensive alterations and offer the property for rental. This transaction was on a strictly cash basis. It is stated that several other sales are pending in the same neighborhood.

Operators Buy Heights Dwelling.

Frank M. Coughlan sold to Ennis & Sinnott 420 West 150th Street, a three-story and basement dwelling, on a lot 16.6 by 81.11, located between Convent and St. Nicholas Avenues. The Herman Arns Company negotiated the transaction.

OPERATE ON TWO MERCURY VICTIMS

Hospital Surgeons Take Prompt Measures to Save Women Who Swallow Bichloride.

BOTH CASES IN THE BRONX

Mrs. Fortel Takes Largest Dose Recorded, Mistaking It for Headache Medicine.

Twice last night the surgeon's knife was called upon in attempts to save patients suffering from bichloride of mercury poisoning. Both cases were in the Bronx. There are now five cases on record to testify to the new hope that the surgeon can fight successfully the poison which a few weeks ago was believed to doom the man or woman who took it to a certain, if lingering, death.

At the Fordham Hospital Dr. Alexander Nichols of the medical school of Fordham University performed the operation to relieve congestion of the kidneys in the case of Mrs. Mary Browning of 1972 Barnes Avenue, who, in her despondency over the illness of her baby, swallowed four tablets of the poison on Thursday night. At the hospital later in the evening it was said her condition was encouraging, but the doctors were not prepared to say what the outcome would be.

Shortly after 11 o'clock Dr. Parker Syms, visiting surgeon at Lebanon Hospital, performed a similar operation in the case of Mrs. Leah Fortel of 1,000 Southern Boulevard, who, early in the evening, had swallowed fifty grains of bichloride by mistake for medicine.

Mrs. Fortel had been suffering from an acute headache, and from the divan in her living room she directed her 13-year-old daughter, Louise, to prepare her medicine. The child was told to go to the medicine closet, take five tablets from a certain bottle, dissolve them in a glass of water, and bring them to her mother. She obeyed, but she got the wrong bottle. The fact that what had happened came to Mrs. Fortel fifteen minutes after she had drained the glass when she suffered severe pain. She led the startled child to the medicine closet and bade her point to the bottle she had used. The girl confidently pointed to the bottle the mother knew contained bichloride of mercury.

A few moments later Louise brought a policeman to her home, and he called a physician who administered milk and eggs. Within an hour after she had swallowed the poison, Mrs. Fortel was in Lebanon Hospital. Her case was considered desperate. For one thing, she had taken the largest dose of the poison recorded since first the stories of mercury poisoning began to come one on the heels of another. Also, she had taken it dissolved, making the doctor's chance against it a hundred times less promising. The decision to operate was made quickly.

Of the other cases, the most conspicuous is that of Mrs. Helen Janin, of West New Brighton. The operation in her case was performed a week ago and appears to have been successful. At the Smith Infirmary, last night, it was said her condition was good.

The operation performed by Dr. Nichols last night was not his first use of the knife against bichloride of mercury. He tried it on Tuesday night in an effort to save the life of Mrs. Irving Pleasants of 550 East 161th Street, but at Fordham she was reported last evening to be faring not so well. The fifth case was at Bellevue Hospital some three weeks ago—the case of an Italian woman. The operation was not successful.

PLAYS AFTER TAKING POISON.

Mrs. Teboldt Amuses Her Boy, While Suffering from Mercury.

Mrs. Mary Teboldt of 1,852 Second Avenue was removed to the Reception Hospital at 3 o'clock yesterday suffering from bichloride of mercury poisoning, and was removed later to the prison ward at Bellevue Hospital charged with having attempted to commit suicide.

According to the police, Mrs. Teboldt became very ill soon before 3 o'clock. She had been amusing her four-year-old son in her home and several other little children who came in to play with the little boy when she was overcome. One of the children ran to the street and told Policeman Kelly of the East Eighty-eighth Street Station. Kelly ran into the house, and when he saw Mrs. Teboldt was in a serious condition he summoned an ambulance.

Dr. Elwood of the Reception Hospital took her to the hospital. She was questioned at the hospital as to how she came to take the poison, and as a result of the inquiry Dr. Elwood communicated with the police and the patient was arrested. She was then removed to Bellevue.

Edward Teboldt, the husband of the patient, said last night that his wife had no reason for feeling despondent that he knew of. He said their married life had been happy. His wife had been ill for a few weeks, he said, but he thought this would not cause her to attempt to end her life, he asserted.

RECOVERS FROM BICHLORIDE.

Prompt Measures Save Newark Woman from Dose of Poison.

Mrs. Mary Rothgerry of 13 West Kinney Street, Newark, who took twenty grains of bichloride of mercury on Nov. 11, was arraigned yesterday in the First Criminal Court, after her discharge from St. Barnabas's Hospital, on a charge of attempted suicide. She was held in $500 bail for the Grand Jury.

The hospital doctors say her quick recovery was due to her robust constitution and the heroic measures taken. When she was received at the hospital the poison had only just begun to attack the vital organs, and by the frequent use of the stomach pump and the flushing of the internal organs the poison was removed.

HOLDS SCHMIDT IS SANE.

Court Denies Motion for Lunacy Commission—Trial Starts Tuesday.

Judge Foster of the Court of General Sessions denied yesterday the motion of Terrence McManus, counsel for Hans Schmidt, the murderer of Anna Aumuller, to have a lunacy commission appointed for Schmidt. Judge Foster in refusing the motion said:

"I have examined with great care the papers submitted by both sides, the alienists, Drs. Gregory and Jeliffe, who reported Schmidt insane, but gave no facts to support their conclusions, and the report of the four alienists who examined the defendant at the instance of the people. The State's alienists say that they examined the man most thoroughly and found him sane. The record shows that the defendant was examined with care. It doesn't appear to me that the defendant is insane."

The insanity plea will probably be incorporated in the defense. The trial will begin Tuesday.

Assistant District Attorney Murphy, who was sent to Germany to collect testimony for the trial, returned yesterday on the White Star steamer Majestic. He said that he had collected about 15,000 words of testimony. Mr. Murphy spent ten days visiting Mainz and other German cities where the priest had lived.

Crane Napoleonana Sale Ends—Rare Mezzotint in Latta Auction.

The sale of Part II. of William J. Latta's Napoleonic collection was ended at the Anderson Auction Company's rooms last evening. The highest price of the day's two sessions was $72.50 paid by Joseph F. Sabin for a fine and rare mezzotint of Charles Louis, Archduke of Austria, engraved by Valentine Green after a painting by P. J. Loutherbourg. The Archduke Charles was Napoleon's most formidable opponent in many battles, but declined to act against him after the invasion of Russia.

The total for Part II. was $11,166. The grand total for Part I. was $10,483, making the grand total thus far $21,649.

The chief item at yesterday's last two sessions of the Warren C. Crane Napoleonana sale at the American Art Galleries was an important historical holograph letter of Robespierre. The letter is dated Paris, April 1, 1790. In it Robespierre wrote that he had not time to tell of what was being done "by the enemies of the people and of liberty." The esteem of the good citizens, he said, well repaid him for the hatred the aristocrats bore him.

The letter was knocked down to C. Austin for $80. Another letter in Robespierre's handwriting, but not signed by him, went to T. L. Clauson for $25. It refers to the National Assembly.

A document in Russian signed by Prince Joseph A. Poniatowski, whose autograph is the rarest of the Marshals of Napoleon, Bonaparte, was bought by W. H. Hoffman for $37. An important letter of the Duc de Rovigo, Madrid, July 16, 1808, about the campaign in Spain, was obtained by Maggs Brothers of London for $24. A letter of the Duke of Wellington, dated Cheltenham, July 18, 1816, sold for $9, and a letter of the Prince de Talleyrand brought $12.

The grand total for the collection was $10,130.50.

FUNDS FOR SUFFRAGE FIGHT

$20,000 Raised for 1915 Campaign —Committee Organized.

It was announced yesterday from the New York State suffrage headquarters that the $20,000 required before the campaign for a suffrage victory in 1915 could be begun had been raised. A committee, known as the Empire State Campaign Committee, has been formed with Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt as Chairman. On it now are representatives of the New York State Suffrage Association, Mrs. Raymond Brown, President; the Woman Suffrage Party of New York City, Mrs. Mary Garrett, Chairman; the Equal Franchise Society, Mrs. Howard Mansfield, President; the Collegiate Equal Suffrage League, Mrs. Charles Tiffany, President; the Men's League for Equal Suffrage, James Lees Laidlaw, President, and the Political Equality Association, Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont, President.

Additional members to be added will include representatives of the W. C. T. U., State Grange, trades and labor unions, and the Chairmen of the eleven campaign districts into which the State has been divided to facilitate the work.

Conferences, lasting from three to six days, will be held in each district, with a school for suffrage workers. A speakers' bureau has been organized in this city and special headquarters will be opened.

GAS KILLS ALL HER FAMILY.

Out of Work, Waiter Kills Daughter as He Commits Suicide.

Coming home tired from her day's work as a maid in a downtown hotel, Mrs. Peter Coffee early last evening mounted the stairs to the third floor of the house at 215 East 37th Street, and opened the door to her bedroom. The room was filled with gas, and in bed lay her husband and their baby girl dead. Choked with the fumes though she was, Mrs. Coffee seized the child's body in her arms and ran out with it to the street.

"Why did he have to take you with him?" she kept crying to the dead child. "Why didn't he go alone, if he had to go?"

From the mother the police could draw little but this—repeated again and again. From the other tenants in the house they learned enough to record the case a suicide.

Coffee, until five weeks ago a waiter at Jack's, had lost his job. Then there was nothing for the family save the wife's earnings, and when she came home at night it was always to learn that he had been unable to find work. Their little girl, Celia, was two years old. Father and baby had been dead for several hours when the mother found them.

SWEEPING CHARGES IN FRISCO REPORT

Federal Examiners to Point to $40,000,000 Fictitious Debt and Huge Bank Profits.

ST. LOUIS INQUIRY AT END

Speyer & Co. Deny Promoting Any Syndicate or Altering the Road's Statistics.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 21.—Chairman Clark and E. E. Brown of the Interstate Commerce Commission left St. Louis today for Washington following a four days' inquiry into the Frisco receivership. Summarized, the official report which they will lay before Congress next month will set forth the following:

That the Frisco was compelled to carry and pay interest on a fictitious indebtedness of $40,000,000, created by enormous commissions paid to bankers and brokers for the sale of its securities, and profits to promoters of feeder lines in the Southwest.

That the Chairman of its Board of Directors B F. Yoakum, made $7,000,000 profits for himself and associates trading with himself in the capacity of promoter and builder of Texas roads, which he caused to be sold to the Frisco at prices in excess of their value.

That approximately $32,000,000 in the Frisco's total funded indebtedness of $244,000,000 was paid to bankers and brokers in commissions.

That the average rate of commission was 12.05 per cent., while the profits of Mr. Yoakum and his associates in the promotion of the feeder lines sold to the Frisco ranged from 10 per cent. to more than 100 per cent.

In the opinion of Mr. Brown, who conducted the investigation, these figures show why the road was forced into the hands of receivers. The company, he said, was compelled to pay interest charges aggregating more than $1,600,000 a year on fictitious indebtedness, representing money which never went into the Frisco treasury.

Mr. Yoakum's deals will be commented on by the Commission in its report to Congress. The revelations in the Frisco failure, with particular respect to Mr. Yoakum, it is said, will result in the rule being laid down by the Commission that no railroad official shall be permitted to serve two masters.

Among those who shared largely in the profits of the syndicate, according to testimony, was Thomas H. West, Chairman of the Board of Directors of the St. Louis Union Trust Company, and now one of the Frisco receivers.

In addition to sharing in the profits of more than $2,000,000 realized from the sale of the Brownsville road to the Frisco, West, Robert S. Brookings, Samuel W. Fordyce, Edward S. Whitaker and Yoakum, according to testimony at the hearing, made up an inner syndicate which divided $900,000 profits from the sale of lands which had been donated to the Brownsville line. These lands, it was asserted, were withheld from the road's assets when it was turned over to the Frisco.

Frisco officials, according to the evidence, were personally interested in nearly all the branch roads sold to the Frisco. Many of them, witness said, were constructed under an agreement with Mr. Yoakum by which they were to be purchased by the Frisco when completed.

Speyer & Co., who have acted as bankers for the St. Louis & San Francisco system in most of the financing done in the past three years, issued a statement yesterday bearing upon the testimony adduced at St. Louis by the Interstate Commerce Commission's investigation. The bankers explain their part in the operations described by the witnesses as follows:

The press dispatches reporting the examination by the Interstate Commerce Commission at St. Louis of certain officials of the St. Louis & San Francisco Railroad Company, and of others in regard to past financial transactions create the impression that our firm improperly had a part or assisted in promoting certain syndicates which built branch lines, and which were afterward purchased by the Board of Directors of the St. Louis & San Francisco Railroad Company for that company.

The facts in this connection, as far as we are concerned, are as follows:

We never promoted any such syndicate, nor were we subscribers to any such syndicate. When requested, early in 1903, we did purchase a participation certificate for $100,000 par value of the St. Louis, Brownsville & Mexico Railroad Syndicate, which had been formed in the year 1903, six years previous. This transaction we did consider then and consider now a perfectly proper one for us to make.

At that time no partner of our firm was a Director in the Frisco Railroad Company, nor was our firm represented in any way in the management of this corporation.

Nor was any member of our firm a director of the Frisco Railroad company at the time in 1910 when the St. Louis, Brownsville & Mexico Railroad Company was purchased by the former company. In fact, we only learned of this purchase after it had been approved by the then Board of Directors. Nevertheless, with other bankers, we agreed later on to assist the company in meeting its financial requirements, resulting partly from this acquisition.

According to newspaper dispatches, the examiner also produced a letter written by Mr. Hillard to President Winchell in 1910 in which he stated that we had asked for a "rearrangement of statistics." From this letter the examiner is reported to have inferred that these suggestions from us were changes in statistics "to help the appearance of the report." We resent and protest against such inferences. Everybody knows that it is customary for bankers to carefully examine and go over financial statements furnished for publication. In fact, we consider it our duty to do so, and, if necessary, to make suggestions, both as to form and substance, so that these statements may meet the requirements of clients and give a fair and intelligible presentation of the actual state of affairs.

Pathe Manager, at Trust Hearing, Defends General Patent Rights.

Testifying yesterday at the hearing in the Government's suit against the so-called film trust in the Manhattan Hotel, J. A. Berst, head of the Pathé Frères Company in this country, said that he had inserted in trade papers advertisements stating that a certain patent right would not be violated if the Pathé Frères films were used. He said this in denying that the General Film Company, one of the defendants, had been formed for the purpose of restraining trade in the moving-picture business.

"I knew then," he admitted, "that this patent was valid, and that the advertisement was false. I did it to protect my business. I stood ready to fight for my customers if they had gotten into trouble for using my pictures. I published the false advertisement because it was good business policy to do so."

Louis Kertscher, a Brooklyn moving-picture exhibitor; Adolph Bauernfreund, an exhibitor of the Bronx, and George Cohen, an exhibitor from Matteawan, N. Y., all testified to an improvement in the film service. Cohen said that the business had improved to such an extent that the best citizens of Matteawan were no longer ashamed to patronize the "movies."

On the consent of both sides the hearing was adjourned until Dec. 1. The hearings will then be continued uninterruptedly until Dec. 18.

Mrs. Dyer Left $280,156.

Mrs. Mary Jones Dyer, daughter of the late George Jones and wife of Henry L. Dyer, left an estate valued on the date of her death, Aug 10, 1911, at $280,156, according to the report of the Transfer Tax Appraiser, filed yesterday. The largest item in the estate was about a sixteenth part of the capital stock and debenture bonds of the Park Company, the holding company for 41 Park Row. This interest was valued at $204,427.50.

HAS THREE HUSBANDS.

Mrs. Murphy-Vollaman-Jones Admits It and Is Sentenced to 1 Year.

Upon her admission to Judge Rosalsky in the Court of General Sessions that she had three husbands at the same time, Mrs. Lulu Powers Murphy-Vollaman-Jones was sentenced yesterday to one year in the penitentiary.

The young woman testified that she was only 17 years old when she married Edward J. Murphy of 2,896 Valentine Avenue, the Bronx, in 1900, and that she left him because he objected to her going to dances. She said that she understood later that he had got a divorce and that she was unconscious of any wrongdoing when she married Charles Vollaman of Jamaica Avenue, Cypress Hills, in 1906. She lived with Vollaman only a few months and some time after she left him read in a Brooklyn paper of the suicide of a Charles Vollaman. On Feb. 10, 1909, she married Samuel Jones of 2,178 Eighth Avenue, whom she left some months ago.

On July 17 Jones learned of his wife's previous marriages and had her arrested. She has been in the Tombs since that time. Murphy, the first husband, pleaded that the punishment she had already suffered was enough.

MAINSTAYS OF THE ARMY'S TEAM

Next Saturday's game at the Polo Grounds will be the first West Point-Annapolis match ever played in New York and the first big game this city has had since Columbia University abolished football.

THE STORY OF FOOTBALL AT WEST POINT

By Lieut. Col. E. D. Stuart, Member of the Army Athletic Council

Late in October, 1890, a challenge came from the Naval Academy to play a game of football. Few cadets at the Military Academy had ever seen a football, but a team was organized. With but little training and almost no knowledge of the game, the team played the Navy at West Point on Nov. 29, and was defeated 24—0. This was the beginning, and the growth was destined to be rapid. For the next year a coach was engaged, and six games were played. The last was a victory over the Navy, 32—16, at Annapolis. In 1892, at West Point, and again in 1893, at Annapolis, the Navy was victorious by scores of 12—4 and 6—4.

During this period the football expenses were borne by voluntary contributions from cadets and officers of the army stationed at West Point. In 1893 the Army Officers' Athletic Association was formed in order to provide financial support for the team, and the system of voluntary contributions from cadets, officers of the army, and a few civilians interested in the academy, has always provided the funds necessary to meet all the expenses of the game.

From 1893 to 1899 no game was played with the Naval Academy, but the successive seasons showed teams gradually increasing in power and knowledge of the game. In 1893 games were played with Yale and Princeton. Since then some of the "Big Four" teams have always been on the Army schedule until this year, with the exception of one game at Princeton. In 1909 no game was played with the Navy, and the remaining games of that year were also canceled on account of the death of Cadet Byrne from injuries received in the Harvard game. The result of all games between the Army and Navy to date has been seven victories for the Army, nine for the Navy and one tie.

Perhaps the most conspicuous figure connected with football at the Military Academy is C. D. Daly, the present head coach, a graduate of Harvard and Captain of the Harvard team before entering West Point as a cadet. His spectacular run back of the kick-off for a winning touchdown at the beginning of the second half of the Army-Navy game in 1902 is remembered as a feat rarely equaled on the gridiron.

BENNY HAVENS.

WEST POINT'S MOST FAMOUS SONG.

Come, fill your glasses, fellows,
And stand up in a row,
To singing sentimentally
We're going for to go;
In the Army there's sobriety,
Promotion's very slow,
So we'll sing our reminiscences
Of Benny Havens, Oh!

CHO.—Oh! Benny Havens, Oh!
Oh! Benny Havens, Oh!
We'll sing our reminiscences
Of Benny Havens, Oh!

May the Army be augmented,
May promotion be less slow,
May our country in the hour of need
Be ready for the foe,
May we find a soldier's resting place
Beneath a soldier's blow,
With room enough beside our grave
For Benny Havens, Oh!

CHO.—Oh! Benny Havens, Oh! etc.

HODGSON, HALF BACK.

MOST SPECTACULAR OF FOOTBALL GAMES.

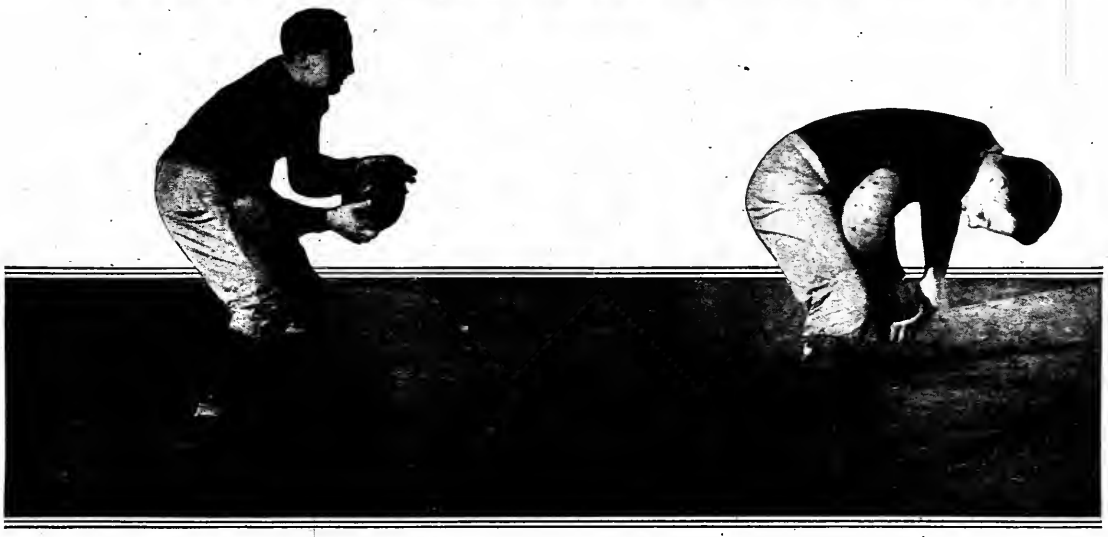
When New York succeeded in persuading the West Point and Annapolis teams to arrange their annual football game at the Polo Grounds on November 29 the gridiron enthusiasts hereabout rejoiced for two reasons: Manhattan was to have at least one contest of national importance this Fall, after a lapse of many years, and that one game was to be the most spectacular, if not the most scientific, of American intercollegiate events.

The President of the United States, most of the Cabinet officers, and scores of men high in the Army and Navy will be on hand for the match, and all the display of gold lace that has distinguished past years' games on Franklin Field, Philadelphia, will be in evidence. Any one who has not seen an Annapolis-West Point clash can hardly imagine the heights to which the enthusiasm of cadets and midies rises. For ability to make a big noise on their football stands the future Admirals and Generals have no equals. Their songs are the gayest and the best sung. Their cheers are the loudest and the most ingeniously executed. Their mascots, the Army mule and the Navy goat, have no rivals for perfection of animal proportions, having been fatted and trained to look and act as dignifiedly as their annual public appearance demands.

Altogether the one day in the year when the two service institutions of the United States meet for their conflict of brawn and brain is an occasion to be anticipated for months in advance and to be remembered ever after. For once the rigid rules of the academies are relaxed, and the entire battalions have a holiday. New York will see them at their best, from the time they arrive on their special trains, brimming with hope, to the sad hour when the winners parade in triumph before the vanquished around the gridiron.

One feature of the Army-Navy game differentiates it from other football contests. The teams have been able to spend less time in training than those of other colleges. On weekdays the players have hardly an hour daily, except for their Saturday matches. The fact that they are able to become proficient in the scientific sport is due to the stern routine they are forced to follow throughout the year. In short, the West Pointer or Middie who tries to make the eleven of his academy is almost physically perfect to begin with, and he can devote all his time to learning the game, whereas students elsewhere must overcome in the training season the effects of a whole year out of training.

NAVY CAPTAIN AND STAR BACKS



MITCHELL, QUARTER, RECEIVING PASS FROM PERRY, CENTRE.

CAPT. GILCHRIST, END.

HOW THE ARMY AND NAVY ELEVENS HAVE PLAYED IN THIS YEAR'S PRELIMINARY GAMES.

The Army players have defeated Stevens Institute 34—0, Rutgers 29—0, Colgate 7—6, Tufts 2—0 and Albright 77—0, and lost to Notre Dame 13—35. They beat Villa Nova 55—0 a week ago and met Springfield yesterday.

The Navy started with a tie game against the University of Pittsburgh, 0—0, and then defeated Georgetown 23—0, Dickinson 29—0, Maryland Agricultural College 76—0, Lehigh 39—0 and Bucknell 70—7. She beat Penn State 10—0 a week ago and met New York University yesterday.

Early betting on the two teams for next Saturday's game has been at odds of 10 to 6 and 10 to 7 on the Navy, but tht Army men, according to reports from West Point, have lost none of their confidence. With Lieut. Charles Daly as Coach, they have hopes of bringing the team to top form despite its reverse in the earlier part of the season. It is an interesting sidelight on the sentiment of Army and Navy men that they do not demand odds from each other in backing their teams. Soldier and sailor will make their wagers at even money, regardless of how Wall Street or the public may appraise the chances. The Cadets and Middies follow the same tradition, and it is an open secret that rules and regulations have been forgotten in the raising of considerable betting funds at the rival academies.
